Klaw & Erlanger will open the New Amsterdam Aerial Theatre and Gardens Monday evening, June 5, presenting as the attraction John J. McNally's new local review, "Lifting the Lid," in which a large company will appear, headed by Fay Templeton, Louis Harrison, Virginia Earle, Eddie Leonard, Diamond Donner, Julius M. Tanner, Lillian Hudson, and Sue Stuart.

It is promised that this resort, which proved a popular one last Summer, will be made even more attractive this season. Klaw & Erlanger announce that they have expended a large sum in new decorations and alterations. The latter comprise very extensive changes in the balcony, which has been lowered in front, affording a more advantageous arrangement of seats, a better view of the stage, and an increased capacity. The boxes have been removed from the sides of the balcony and are now situated in that part directly facing the stage.

Changes in the arrangement of the garden have also been made, and new decorations in the way of plants and trees will be a feature of the spacious open-air promenades.

BLUECOAT DIDN'T USE CLUB.

First Day on Force, He Subdued a Prisoner with His Fists.

A fight between Osias Geis, a Greek who keeps a restaurant at 202 Delancey Street, and two unruly customers early yesterday morning gave Policeman Ryan of the Eldridge Street Station, who was on his first tour of duty on the force, a chance to "make good." Ryan overpowered one of the disturbers without using his club. He knows how to use his fists, and sailed into the man, forgetting all about his stick. The prisoner required the services of an ambulance surgeon when he was at last subdued.

The prisoners were Alexander Creager, a coatmaker of 20 Ludlow Street, and Louis John, a capmaker of 105 East Fourth Street. After eating a meal in Geis's restaurant they began to make a disturbance, according to the proprietor, breaking dishes and furniture, and finally attacking him. Geis received a cut on his face in the struggle. The new policeman overhauled them as they were fleeing down Allen Street. John was armed with a bread knife taken from the restaurant, but the policeman was so quick he didn't have a chance to use it.

William J. Lee Declared Insane.

William J. Lee, thirty-five years old, an engineer, who was arrested more than six weeks ago charged with making threats against Judge Garrett T. Vroom of the Court of Errors and Appeals in New Jersey, and who was later committed to the psycopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital, was yesterday sent to the Manhattan State Hospital as insane after having been forty-six days at Bellevue. This is the longest period that any patient has ever remained in the psycopathic ward. Lee caused delay by fighting against his commitment.

PUBLISHERS AND GUESTS IN GREAT GOLF TOURNEY

Players Fix Own Handicaps Over 18-Hole Course.

HANDSOME CUPS FOR PRIZES

Gathering at Lakewood Ends and Is Pronounced a Great Success—Songs on Way Homeward.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., May 13.—The gathering of publishers, editors, authors, artists, and public men which marked the second annual function of the Periodical Publishers' Association came to an end here to-day. In the morning there was a golf tournament which broke all records in the matter of handicaps. There were horseback rides and driving parties. Those who liked the water went out in boats. It was every man to his taste, and there was ample scope for the gratification of every preference.

Despite the fact that the banquet, with its accompaniment of speeches, lasted until after midnight, everybody was up bright and early to-day. There were few laggards and the breakfast room in the Laurel-in-the-Pines Hotel was crowded by 8 o'clock. The small army of publishers and guests had mapped out everything before retiring, and the attractions were so varied that nobody slept late.

The golf tournament on the links of the Lakewood Golf Club was the event which attracted most attention. President Frank N. Doubleday and his brother publishers had decreed that every man should be his own handicapper, and, under such an arrangement, there were few who had the slightest acquaintance with the game who did not think they had a chance. There were two prizes offered. One was for the man who made the course in a given number of strokes. This prize was arbitrary. The other was for the player who covered the course in the fewest number of strokes. Both prizes were offered by the Publishers' Association. They were handsome silver cups, well worth the winning.

In the final analysis the handicap each contenstant allotted to himself cut no figure in the disposition of the prizes, but the terms of the tournament served to guarantee a full list of players.

There were carriages at the front door of the hotel by 8 o'clock, and not a few enthusiasts were ready to leave at that hour, their idea being to look over the course. It was 11 o'clock before play began.

There were some weird handicaps as a result of the system adopted. There is not a prettier course in all Jersey. There are eighteen holes, and the record is held by Travis—75 strokes. Under the rules of the club 18 is the maximum handicap, but rules were forgotten when entries for the tournament began to pour in. This is the entry list at last hung up, with the handicap claimed by each contestant.

All the entrants did not finish the course. When the score was compiled it was found that Frederick Darr Steele had won the prize, based on an arbitrary number of strokes. He covered the course in eighty-seven strokes—the figure agreed upon. Three players tied for the prize offered to the man who made the lowest record for the course. W. J. Funk, Frederick U. Adams, and W. G. Brown each made it in 92—more than a fair showing, so the club members said. It was agreed that the ownership of the cup should be decided later. According to the best information to be had those who handicapped themselves most liberally did not finish at all.

Luncheon was served at the hotel. At 12:30 o'clock a special train left for Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington. The New York special did not leave until 3 o'clock. This gave plenty of time. The members of the association were a unit in the opinion that there had been nothing lacking to make the affair a success, and the guests were loud in their praises of the treatment accorded them by their hosts.

The Periodical Publishers' Special reached Jersey City at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon. On the run in the winner of the golf tournament, as between those who made the lowest score, was decided. Mr. Doubleday arranged that those who were tied should draw lots, and Mr. Funk was the lucky man. A feature of the return journey was a concert in the next to the last car. With a male chorus of more than 100 voices, Charles Battell Loomis showed his skill as a leader. Many songs were sung, and sung well.

Mr. Doubleday said that he thought the meeting at Lakewood of those identified with periodicals had accomplished everything for which it was designed. It was not thought desirable to meet in a city, inasmuch as it was planned to bring publishers, authors, and artists as close together as was possible. The environments at Lakewood were ideal. Mr. Doubleday was especially pleased with the address of Dr. Abbott, who, he said, had ably voiced the ideals which the publishers had before them.

PITTSBURG, May 13.—Miss Edith Isabella Gibney of St. Louis got a verdict for $13,925 to-day in a fifty-thousand-dollar damage suit for breach of promise against Klaus J. Steiner, son of Gottlieb A. Steiner, an iron manufacturer of Allegheny. A fifty-thousand-dollar damage suit against the family of the defendant for conspiracy was non-suited.

Adopts Army Hospital Drill.

ALBANY, May 13.—Adjt. Gen. Henry to-day issued an order adopting for the State National Guard the revised system of drill regulations for the regular army Hospital Corps, approved by the Secretary of War last October.

BABY DEAD, TRIED SUICIDE.

Mother Frantic When She Visits Morgue on Brother Island.

Frantic with grief at finding her baby dead when she went to visit it at North Brother Island yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Joseph Gerfast, twenty-seven years old, of 140 Cherry Street, made several attempts to commit suicide by throwing herself overboard. She fought desperately to end her life, and was taken to the Alexander Avenue Police Station. Measles caused the child's death.

The mother demanded that she be allowed to take home her dead baby, but she was told that the body would be sent to her. She was put aboard the naphtha launch which runs between the island and East One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street. When the launch reached midstream Mrs. Gerfast tried to leap overboard. One of the crew caught her skirts and dragged her back. She was guarded for the remainder of the trip, but on reaching shore tried to throw herself from the pier. Policeman Cahill of the Alexander Avenue Station saved her this time, but she broke from him and ran along the shore, trying to find a place from which to leap. She was overpowered and placed in a patrol wagon.

RESIDENTS OPPOSE HOSPITAL.

Ask Court to Prevent Consumptive Clinic on Brooklyn Heights.

Residents of the Heights district of Brooklyn are up in arms against a project of the Department of Health to establish a sanitarium for consumptives at 75 Henry Street. Yesterday Lawyer Isaac W. Jacobson, representing residents and property owners, applied to the Supreme Court to have the department restrained from establishing the institution, and the case will probably be heard this week. It is proposed to have the clinic in a four-story building in a thickly settled district, and those who object to it say that the department's plan will endanger the health of the neighborhood and depreciate the value of property there.

TO STRANAHAN, $18,000, OSWEGO COUNTY, $43,000

One-third Paid, It Is Said, for Collecting from State.

CONTRACT BY SUPERVISORS

Procedure Stirs Criticism Up State—Town Bonds for Railroads Basis of Claim.

Special to The New York Times.

OSWEGO, May 13.—There is printed in the newspapers here the statement that County Treasurer Moore has received from Nevada N. Stranahan, Collector of the Port of New York, a New York draft for $43,247.10 in payment of Oswego County's claim against the State growing out of towns bonded for railroads.

The county's claim was known to be $61,576.45, and the wide difference caused considerable speculation. The conclusion was that there had been deducted from the amount of judgment of $18,329.35 to cover Mr. Stranahan's legal fee and expenses in prosecuting the claim.

A careful investigation has been made, and it is declared that Mr. Stranahan's withholding of about $18,000 was under an agreement with a special committee of the Board of Supervisors of Oswego that he should receive 30 per cent. for collecting the claim against the State.

A search of the records of the Board of Supervisors fails to disclose that this special committee ever was authorized to allow this percentage for legal fees. It was not known that there was any dispute over the justness of the county's claim against the State.

Citizens here express the opinion that Mr. Stranahan should have forwarded the full amount of the recovery to the Supervisors, together with his bill for legal services; that it might take the regular course of claims against the county.

An attempt to see Mr. Stranahan in at his residence, 16 Central Park West, last evening was unsuccessful.

NAME .....

THE BOOK

A GREAT NEED OF THE DAY

"THE HISTORIANS' HISTORY," now complete in twenty-five volumes, is so called because it gives the history of all nations in the actual words of the greatest historians. It is a popular presentation of the whole story of man's life and struggles, edited by Henry Smith Williams, LL. D., with the assistance of a large staff of historical writers, translators, experts on manuscripts, etc. It has already established itself in public estimation as the magnum opus of world-history, the only authoritative and adequate universal history. Such a work is necessary to all who wish to keep their minds stored with up-to-date historical knowledge, and wish to have at hand a library of historical information to which they may turn for occasional reading, for instruction, or for the answer to the thousand and one questions which are likely to come up for discussion in the family circle of a cultivated American household.

AS EVERY ONE KNOWS

the field of historical study has been covered, with microscopic exactness, by a large number of what may be called "fragmentary" historians, whose labor, while it has been distinctly to the advantage of the science of history in the abstract, yet it has never had in mind the wants or the requirements of the great reading public to whom history has always been dry, and dull, and uninviting. It is absolutely impossible for a man nowadays to read all of these histories, but more than that, he cannot even tell which ones to choose. He is lost, as it were, in a labyrinth. He cannot see the forest for the trees. "THE HISTORIANS' HISTORY"

SUPERSEDES OR SUPPLANTS ALL OTHER HISTORIES

because it uses from the narrative of each individual historian his most important and most readable pages, weaving these by skilful editorship into a consecutive and orderly story, distinguished by common consent for its unity of style and compelling interest.

FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE END OF AN OPPORTUNITY;

an opportunity to subscribe for the first great world-history that has been completed in the English language, at about one-half the regular price at which the work will be sold.

ANY ONE WHO IS INTERESTED IN GOOD LITERATURE, and that implies an appreciation of good historical literature, will find, if he will pause for a moment, that this opportunity has not only a personal interest for him, but a very selfish interest.

EVERY MAN NOWADAYS IS CONFRONTED

from time to time with a chance to buy something at what may be called a bargain price. Many men make a practice never to buy anything unless they can get a concession. Many persons look back, to their regret, upon opportunities which they failed at the moment to take advantage of. Every one knows that the best time to buy anything is on a rising market, when it may be obtained for less than it will be later. All of which, the bargain, the concession, the rising market, apply precisely to "THE HISTORIANS' HISTORY OF THE WORLD." The time to buy is to-day at 43 per cent. discount, while there is still time to get it.

That is the Message of the Hour-Glass and the Clock, for the subscription lists will be closed at midnight to-morrow. The sands are all but gone.

WHY THE PRICE WILL BE ADVANCED.

The price will be advanced because The Outlook promised a year ago in its first announcement of this work that it would sell the first edition during publication at 43 per cent. less than regular prices—at $2.88 per volume instead of $5.00. This was done to introduce the work quickly and effectively to the book-buying public. The book was new in plan, novel in treatment, and it aimed to fill a place in the field of historical knowledge occupied by no other work. In other words, it had its way to make in public approval. To achieve this result in the least time, the greatest publicity was sought; an extensive campaign of advertising was begun in fifty-three different publications outside of the newspaper press, for which advertising rates were paid all the way from $4,000 a page down to $25. To further widen the field of publicity there were dispatched from The Outlook office, within twelve months, 9,043,177 pieces of circular matter dealing with "THE HISTORIANS' HISTORY" in one form or another.

NO AGENTS WERE EMPLOYED TO SELL THE BOOK,

and no commissions had to be paid for pushing the book by the agent method. This was a great saving in expense, of which the immediate subscriber gets the benefit in a reduction in price. "We send the Book, not the Book Agent," was The Outlook's method of bringing the work directly to the attention of the public. As many as 60,000 applications were received for these specimen volumes. As a method of introduction direct from publisher to buyer, the specimen volume plan scored the greatest success known to the publishing world in many years, with the result that the book is now favorably known, although but just completed, among those classes whose good opinion is the strongest assurance of its permanent success.

This is the LAST ADVERTISEMENT

—the final word. Those who wish to subscribe on the most advantageous basis should act at once. Don't wait until next fall, or next month, or next week, or even until to-morrow if you want the discount. SUBSCRIBE TO-DAY—the sands are all but gone.

THE OPEN DOOR.

There was a happy touch of British practicality in the allusion by the gallant Lord BRASSEY on Friday at the Chamber of Commerce to the common interests of Britain and the United States. After the usual and very potent and pertinent considerations of common speech, religious and political ideals, and common ancestry, Lord BRASSEY said:

> Is it not a natural prompting on both sides, as it is our wisest policy, to keep together? [Applause.] And surely it is a happy circumstance, and favorable to common action, that we have no conflicting interests. With mingled feelings of pity for suffering, and admiration for valor and devotion, we are all spectators of that terrible conflict in the Far East. Great changes must follow, and in those changes the interests of our two countries are involved. As traders and producers we could not suffer ourselves to be excluded from vast markets, to which the railway and the steamship are now only beginning to give access. We ask for the open door. [Applause.] We ask for nothing more. To a request so reasonable, backed by two navies, which, combined, are invincible, who should say us nay? [Applause.]

A "reasonable request backed by two navies" is a peculiarly British way of putting the proposition, and it may well have been a sense of real though unofficial responsibility that induced the speaker to refrain from saying "three navies." For, pleasant as it is to look only on the influence of English-speaking peoples upon the solution of this mighty question of free trade in the Orient, we cannot justly or safely forget that the principle has a strong, an enlightened, an indispensable champion in the Empire of Japan. Indeed it is only the simple truth to say that Japan has led in this matter, that her position regarding it has been clearer, more consistent, more intelligent than that of either Great Britain or the United States. By this test, and it is a fair and severe one, it will do us no harm to bear in mind that the evidence of highest civilization is afforded by the island empire of the East.

THE EXPECTED NAVAL BATTLE.

Professional naval critics in London, it seems, are growing doubtful whether Admiral Togo will risk a general engagement with the combined squadrons of the Russians. Opinion there seems to be that he will play a waiting game, picking off as many stragglers as possible from a fleet far from homogeneous in speed, or indeed in any other respect, and defending his own coasts and his own communications the while. This is in part the same view that is taken by Capt. MAHAN in Collier's Weekly. But Capt. MAHAN is of the opinion that Togo cannot afford to permit the combined squadrons to gain their objective at Vladivostok if he can prevent them from doing so. Once established there, in an undisputedly Russian port, they would not only have the great advantage of a naval base under their own control. They would have the further advantage of reinforcement by the three armored cruisers left of the original four fast, powerful, modern ships with which the Russian naval commander at Vladivostok has just made a sortie which may be presumed to have been intended primarily as a diversion of the Japanese attention from ROJESTVENSKY and NEBOGATOFF.

As we have several times had occasion to point out, the Russians are in a situation which calls for desperate remedies. If they lose a pitched battle with the whole Japanese Navy they will not be appreciably worse off than they are now. If they win it decisively, the whole face of the war will be changed at a blow. It is not Admiral Togo's interest, nor that of his country, to invite such a conflict. Japan is very well satisfied, or ought to be, with the present condition of affairs. She can afford to "stand pat." She cannot afford to risk advantages which, unless she risks them, seem secure on each side. But it is questionable whether such a fight can be brought on against the will of the Japanese Admiral, and less questionable that he will not allow it to be brought on if he can avoid it. The situation seems to sum up that Russia has everything to gain and nothing to lose by a decisive sea fight; Japan everything to lose and nothing to gain.

FILLING THE POLICE VACANCIES.

Commissioner McADOO's plan of calling upon certain estimable citizens of the highest character and standing, but wholly without police experience, to aid him in an advisory way in selecting men from the uniformed force to fill the numerous vacancies created by the recent removals for infirmity "and other causes," does not promise as good results as he perhaps hopes and expects. In the last analysis the responsibility for good selections is peculiarly and exclusively his own. The civil service examinations sift out those lacking the requisite qualifications in intelligence and education, and to some extent scrutinize records for purposes of rating. This narrows the selection to men presumably qualified, and the rest is within the knowledge of the Commissioner—or may be if he will take the trouble to advise himself. Of course he does not bind himself to accept the suggestions of the commission he has named, since he alone has the appointing power; but he does say that he will be glad to have the advice he asks as to the proper men to appoint, and this implies a purpose to follow such advice if no good reason for not doing so shall appear.

The only advantage discoverable in this plan is that it tends wholly to divest of political significance the reorganization of the force now in progress. This is desirable. We incline to think, however, that better results would have been reached had the order of procedure been reversed, and, after selecting from among those eligible the men in his judgment best fitted to fill the vacant positions, he had referred the list to Messrs. JESUP, FOX, DYER, McCLURE, and McKELWAY, and asked them, as public-spirited and disinterested citizens, to scan it to see if any good grounds for objecting to the selections are found. This is a service which might be rendered with great advantage. It would permit a much more effective search of records, a purposeful consultation with the officers of the societies which have kept watch of the condition of the several precincts, and of the work of the men eligible for appointment to the Inspectorships and Captaincies. Furthermore, it weakens the position and influence of the Commissioner to do more than ask the approval of his judgment, formed from the best evidence he has at hand. His is the responsibility, not merely for the appointments made but for the selections among candidates, and he will gain the respect of the force if he performs this duty to the best of his ability and relies upon unofficial advice only to inform him if in any instance he has made a mistake.

If the gentlemen named in Commissioner McADOO's invitation will take this view of the matter they may render him and the city a real service.

FEDERAL DIVORCE LAWS.

Justice DUGRO, in a case just decided by him, found himself required to annul a marriage because one of the parties to it had, previous to contracting it, obtained a divorce in Illinois which was not valid according to the laws of this State. He is reported in The Sun to have remarked:

> I do not believe in setting marriages aside in this way, but I am bound by the authorities. This case illustrates forcibly to me the necessity of uniform divorce laws throughout the country, and also the wisdom of having an amendment to the Constitution which would permit the cognizance of matrimonial actions to come within the consideration of the United States courts rather than the State courts.

Jurisdiction for the Federal courts in matrimonial actions would in practice involve matrimonial legislation by Congress. Uniform legislation could hardly be attained in any other way, or, if it could be reached through State action, which is a very distant and not very probable contingency, there would be little need of Federal jurisdiction to interpret it. Now, with the obvious advantage that could be got from uniform divorce laws, we are decidedly in doubt as to the expediency of placing the matter in the hands of Congress. Most of us when we consider uniform legislation on this matter assume that it would be good legislation. But it is far from certain that the work of Congress would in fact be good. It would almost certainly not be as good in its general provisions as is the law of this State. The mere fact that our State is well in advance of many others—as most New Yorkers think—is evidence that Congressional legislation in the matter would be a compromise, and the compromise would not even be permanent.

It will hardly be claimed that uniformity in divorce law is practically of and hardly a session passes that an attempt is not made to repeal or amend it. There is not, of course, the same motive for such agitation in divorce law, but there is a good deal. The debtor and creditor classes have their analogues in the classes who wish lax or strict divorce laws. There is a certain number who insist on a supply of marriages equal to the demands of trade, and there are others who desire what may be called the gold standard in matrimony. If we have been nearly a century and a quarter engaged in a futile effort to secure adequate and efficient bankruptcy laws from Congress, what is the prospect of securing good divorce laws from the same source? Undoubtedly our composite system of State and Federal jurisdiction has its defects, but it has worked much better, so far as its results show, than a centralized system would work. We are a varied and complex society, and we might as well recognize the fact. Attempts to make us all wear the same sort and pattern of legislative clothing would be useless and might be disastrous.

TIMES SQUARE AND BROOKLYN.

It was a curious coincidence that on the same day Commissioner McADOO should set in successful operation the largest and most difficult plan yet made for traffic regulation, the one for Times Square and for the region from Forty-first Street to Forty-eighth Street, on the other side of the East River Judge GAYNOR should issue his modified injunction forbidding the Commissioner to carry out practically the same plan in Borough Hall Square in Brooklyn. We are not disposed to criticise Judge GAYNOR's interpretation of the law, and we suppose that under the new law passed by the Legislature and not yet signed by the Governor, the Commissioner will have the powers now denied to him. But it is permitted to point out that no serious regulation of traffic is possible at such points as Borough Hall Square in Brooklyn and Times Square in Manhattan if these areas are to remain as general thoroughfares to be traversed in any direction at any time by any vehicle. The limitation of the use of the areas to through travel on fixed lines only is obviously necessary to safety and general convenience.

Whatever may be the technical legal rights of the Commissioner of Police and of the users of vehicles, there is no room for doubt that the essential purposes for which streets are maintained are served by the restrictions placed on travel by the Commissioner. The streets are intended to enable persons having business on the line of the streets to reach their premises in person or with vehicles, and to enable the public to pass from other parts of the city through the streets. Both the immediate occupants and the through passengers or vehicle users are hindered in the enjoyment of their rights when unregulated traffic crowds certain points. Not only is convenience sacrificed, business interfered with, and valuable time lost by the needless confusion thus arising, but life and limb are endangered. Safety is promoted by the requirement which Judge GAYNOR concedes the police may enforce, that all vehicles shall go slowly, or stop for such time as the police think necessary. But this may lead, as in fact it is known to lead very often, to long delays of foot passengers, of vehicles, and of public conveyances such as surface cars. Now, if the use of these definitely congested areas is further regulated, if through travel across them is limited to certain convenient directions, and the areas cannot be entered at certain points except to reach other points within the areas, no one is really inconvenienced materially, and delays as well as dangers are completely avoided.

This is the plan that was originally designed for Borough Square in Brooklyn, where a half dozen railway lines intercross, and as many routes of travel. It is the plan that was quietly and with entire satisfaction to all reasonable persons put in operation at Times Square. It clearly subserves the real uses of the streets, respects all actual rights, and makes life easier and safer. If the new law is found not to authorize it, it will have to be amended until it does.

THE REPENTANCE OF JEROME.

Men, being various in their natures and dispositions, exhibit variously and by different symbols the desire to confess error and repent. Some prostrate themselves in the dust, some weep, some pray, and some blaspheme. But the proud HENRY of the Holy Roman Empire, shivering and imploring in the courtyard at Canossa, was not more deeply, really, and sincerely a penitent than District Attorney JEROME when he stood up before Recorder GOFF the other day, and, while railing at the newspapers, affirmed the impeccability of all his proceedings in the Nan Patterson case. Outwardly seeming to defy his critics, insisting that his office had done everything it should do, and that victim of the woman. The evidence was sufficient, the prosecution did its duty nobly, but the confounded newspapers befuddled the jury's notions of law and fact, and so got NAN PATTERSON off. Now men ordinarily sensible talk in that wild, preposterous way only when they are in pain—for rage is pain, for resentment is pain, and the consciousness that one has made blunders one has not the courage to avow is veritable torture. Translated aright, therefore, Mr. JEROME's discourse was salutary, and it unquestionably freed his soul of much perilous stuff. While he was berating the press he was really beating his own breast, bowing low his head, and looking about for the Spring styles in sackcloth and ashes.

And now it is becoming that the District Attorney be reminded that as a public officer his official doings are proper matter for the comment and criticism of the newspaper press. The newspapers of the City and County of New York would have failed in their duty had they not cast him and his assistant, Mr. RAND, under their censure for their gross misdoings in the Patterson case. The District Attorney's office misapprehended the nature of the crime, and from the beginning put a grotesque, exaggerated valuation upon the evidence in its possession or within its reach. In consequence of those errors the county has been put to unwarranted expense, and an unedifying spectacle has been needlessly prolonged. Furthermore, we must remind Mr. JEROME that the methods and behavior of a prosecuting officer in a murder trial are things open to public criticism, and within the sphere of proper newspaper castigation. He stands by his assistant—that is all very well. But the community does not approve the methods that have been employed in this and other murder trials in this and recent years, and a very frank letter from a member of the second Patterson jury which we published the other day shows plainly enough that they do not make a favorable impression upon the juror's mind. If the theory that it is the duty of the District Attorney and his assistants to pursue with ferocious hatred every person under indictment for murder, to employ every available method and device to secure conviction, and to piece out unconvincing evidence by inference, suggestion, innuendo, and declamatory art be the true one, then the District Attorney would have been called, not the public prosecutor, but the public hyena.

We hope it will not become our duty again to remind District Attorney JEROME that the people of the City and County of New York want no more murder trials conducted as he and his assistants saw fit to conduct the trial of the Patterson woman.

HIRAM CRONE.

All newspaper readers must have been interested yesterday to observe the death, at the age of 105, of the only surviving veteran, at least in the State of New York, of the war of 1812, the only pensioner of that war upon the ground of personal participation. Such a span of life that the man is only just dead who took part in a war begun ninety-three years ago and concluded ninety-one years ago is adapted to stimulate reflection among men and women of all the younger generations. THACKERAY in one of his essays prefigures the time when of all the veterans of Waterloo, who in his time were numerous enough to hold an annual dinner and discourse volubly to one another of their various rheumatic and other disabilities, there should be but one left. He expressed the feelings which we must entertain upon the death of HIRAM CRONE.

But a new turn is given to our reflections by the fact that the hundred and fifth birthday of HIRAM was celebrated only a few weeks ago, and the celebration duly and fully reported. Representatives of various ancestral, patriotic, and historical societies thought the occasion worthy of notice, and journeyed to the centenarian's home to do him honor. They found the surviving body of a man in the "last scene of all," a body surviving the mind and most of the senses, whose eyes were blind to their presence, whose ears were deaf to their praises. To all intents and purposes he was as dead then as he is now, except for the detail of not being yet buriable.

Surely there could be no more impressive warning than this against the common desire to attain the extreme limit of human life. TENNYSON, in his "Tithonus," has taken the subject up in his poetical vein, and SWIFT, in his account of the "struldbrugs" of Luggnag, in his customary vein of cynical welcome of whatever tended to degrade human nature by exhibiting it at its worst and meanest. The actual case shows, as vividly as it is shown by the mythical case of the poet or the imaginary case of the satirist, the awfulness of an exceptional survival. No prospect, to a rational being, can be more horrible than the prospect of living on at the cost of all that makes life worth living. And nothing is more certain

THE PARK BOULEVARD PLAN.

Mr. Cromwell's Arguments Against "Improving" the City's Playground.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A plan is before Park Commissioner Pallas to remove the stone wall along the east side of Central Park from Sixtieth Street to One Hundred and Tenth Street, and to construct just inside the line of the wall a sixty-foot roadway flanked on the east by the present sidewalk and on the west by a new sidewalk twenty feet wide. The scheme is favored by some prominent citizens and has been taken seriously enough to be referred to an investigating committee. So I ask space to present some objections, which I hope will appeal to THE TIMES and its readers.

By actual count, between eight and nine hundred trees must be cut down to make way for this grand "improvement." The Park can nowhere afford such a loss, and least of all along the edges, where the trees form such a charming screen between the natural beauties of the Park and the city streets outside.

Such a road on the level of Fifth Avenue would necessitate destructive grading. The knolls at Sixty-eighth, Eighty-eighth, and One Hundred and Second Streets must be cut down and embankments run past the windows of the Arsenal at Sixty-fourth Street and along the pond from Seventy-third Street to Seventy-sixth Street, and the edge of the Harlem lake must be filled in.

It could not pass the Museum of Art unless the new building is set back fifty feet, or the superb new entrance is removed, or the road is carried under the Museum's foundations through a subway!

Still worse, it would compel other radical changes in the Park. For a third of its length this new highway would overrun existing walks, roads, and bridle paths. From Eighty-seventh to Ninety-sixth Street it would destroy the east drive and the path beside it, as the reservoir would prevent them from being rebuilt further from Fifth Avenue. So, for half a mile the traffic of this speedway would be thrown into our most crowded drive. The Park is now a triumph of the landscape gardener's art. The walks and bridle paths are carried along and under the drives so skillfully that they rarely interfere, coming together and then separating along ways of their own. It is really four parks in one, in which the visitor may stroll, ride, drive, or row, often out of sight and mind of those enjoying the Park in the other ways. This exquisite system of paths and roads cannot be altered by a parallel ruler without destroying its beauty.

My last objection is not the least serious. A two-and-a-half-mile straightaway from Fifty-ninth Street to One Hundred and Tenth Street would be used chiefly as a speeding track for fast horses and automobiles. The New York Central tracks in the same position, with grade crossings at every entrance and at the transverse roads, would be a barrier to the Park no more dangerous and complete than this great "improvement." It would be a death trap to the thousands of children crossing it daily.

Aside from the positive objections, why should a fortune be spent to crowd into Central Park a feature which Riverside Drive already supplies, which we have on a superb scale in the Harlem Speedway and the drive from Prospect Park to Coney Island? Central Park is complete. It is a wonderfully balanced pleasure ground for all classes of people. It will tax the gardener's skill to preserve its present beauties without the intrusion of atrocious schemes to dismember it.

Let bizarre plans be tried in the undeveloped parks across the Harlem River, but keep vandal hands off Central Park. It has been the city's jewel for nearly sixty years. It never has been more enjoyed and enjoyable than now. It cannot afford to give up the whole length of its eastern side to a speedway, no matter how imposing the new feature. Perhaps there is room for such a scheme elsewhere in the Greater New York, but no argument would justify the Commissioner in adding such a thing to Central Park. The Trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art would be as fully warranted in cutting off the sides of a Rembrandt to make wall space for a new painting.

LINCOLN CROMWELL.

New York, May 12, 1905.

Shall We Spell It Rozhdestvenski?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Very strangely all of the papers of this city misspell the name of the Russian Admiral, now so much spoken of. His name should be spelled "Rozhdestvenski," and not "Rojestvensky." The name as spelled first means "Christmas child," or "one born on Christmas Day," and comes from the word "Rozhdestvo," meaning "Christmas."

As a Russian and a graduate of one of the colleges of that empire I would highly appreciate it if your paper were the first to adopt my correction, and let us hope that the others will follow you, as they now do in other respects. E. ROSENTHAL.

A Bob Veal Complaint.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see much discussion about adulterated milk and other foods. I should like to bring before the people of this city another way they are being imposed upon. I refer to what is known as "bob veal," (calves usually about three days old.) I had heard of such veal being sent here, but supposed the Board of Health had been vigilant enough to stop it. I learned recently while in the country that quantities of such veal were being sent here, and as it was from reliable spurces there is no doubt of its being true. Personally I should not like to eat such meat, and no one should be obliged to be so grossly imposed upon. Why is it allowed to go on?

Wants Better Park Music.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The time is nearly here when public concerts are performed in the various parks. The concerts given in our parks are eagerly and largely attended by the public, and there is no excuse for the very poor quality of the bands which furnish the music in the more obscure parks. The writer concedes that the bands which perform in Central Park and perhaps a few other parks are creditable to this large city, but music lovers should demand that more care be exercised in the awarding of contracts to private and unknown bands, which, the listener must conclude, are probably gotten together for the sole purpose of gaining the remuneration which a contract with the city brings. "PAMPERING" HIGH SCHOOLS.

Plan for Expensive Athletic Fields Attacked.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Thank you for the editorial in to-day's TIMES entitled "Pampering the High Schools." No rebuke was ever more thoroughly deserved by a Board of Education than this one is, and no better proof of the dangers and extravagances of specialization than this scheme of expensive athletic fields for high school boys has ever been given. The whole matter of so-called "physical culture" is now in the hands of a gentleman known as the "director of physical training," and his large and well-paid staff of assistants. Advertisement is the very breath of life to these (and to all) specialists in pedagogy, and the city must foot the extremely generous bills that a determined search for novelty always entails, in a school system as elsewhere.

Our New York schools are instances of specialization run mad. The day seems near when we shall have no more "general practitioners" of the ancient and honorable art of teaching, as we have few left in the sister art which ministers to the body. We shall live to regret the vanishing of the class teacher as we now do the scarcity of that counselor, guide, and friend, the "family physician," unless a halt is called soon. But while we still have with us that valuable citizen, the primary teacher, for the love of heaven and of her pupils who are of that kingdom, allow THE TIMES to continue its intelligent and sympathetic defense of her and of the little children!

When the small folk have, as they have not yet, the necessaries of proper school life, then give these small folk the luxuries of that life. When they have both necessities and luxuries it will be time to proceed with the process, already well advanced, of lavishing costly privileges upon the extravagantly equipped high schools of the city. When the city can give every primary child five hours of safe and healthy schooling in comfortable buildings, a blessing nearly a hundred thousand of them are still deprived of, it will be time, perhaps, to continue the erection of million-dollar high school buildings, and when the little children have playgrounds it may be the psychologic moment for spending large sums of the taxpayers' money upon athletic fields where high school boys may be indulged in those competitive contests which many deplore as both physiologically and morally unwholesome.

Until that happy day arrives, please let THE TIMES extend its powerful protection to the primary pupils and occasionally show to the members of our Boards of Education the errors of their well-intentioned but ill-advised ways of transacting school business.

RADIUM, X-RAY, AND CANCER.

The Curative Properties of Radiant Energy Doubted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial under the caption "Radium, X-Ray and Cancer," expressing a most sanguine opinion as to the marvelous curative effects wrought by the above forms of radiant energy on cancerous growths should not be allowed to pass without a warning note being sounded that too much credence should not be given to a view such as yours having for its foundation the barest uncertain details.

Numerous cures (?), from toxins to violets and incantations, have from time to time been enthusiastically exploited in the treatment of malignant growths, which when held to the critical light of thorough scientific investigation have all been found to be sadly wanting.

When, ten years ago, the announcement of the discovery of the wonderful properties of this cathode light flashed over the world it was not long before the physician, purely on an empirical basis, held the torch of this mystic light to the cancerous growth and hurriedly announced that cancer would be cured by this means. At present, however, a close study of details which in the enthusiasm to announce marvelous results had passed unnoticed reveals the fact, and sad it is, that in the skillful and timely use of the knife, as yet, lies the best treatment for cancer, and that radium and X-Ray have a very limited application.

Much harm may be done by such an opinion as you express, for holding out an alluring hope leads to procrastination, a very dangerous procedure.

Your speculations on the recovery of Dr. Harper are somewhat premature, and even if there is slight improvement it cannot be said in the absence of authentic testimony that the supposed recession

SARGENT VERSUS REYNOLDS.

American Painter Challenges Comparison and Gets the Decision.

Every art lover knows how Turner, in order to show the superiority which he felt he possessed over Claude, directed that a picture by himself and a painting by the French artist be placed in juxtaposition in the National Gallery, so that the public might judge which was the greater master.

John S. Sargent, R. A., has followed Turner's example. In his portrait group "The Marlborough Family," now on exhibition at the Royal Academy, he has deliberately imitated the general arrangement of one of the finest pictures ever painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The Sargent and the Reynolds each represents the Marlboroughs of different generations, and the Sargent, after it leaves Burlington House, is to hang in the same room as the masterpiece of the first President of the Royal Academy.

Probably there is no other living painter who would not shrink from such a test, but, judging from the opinions of the leading English critics, the American's work not only comes out of the ordeal successfully, but is actually superior to the Reynolds in many ways. The London Times's critic says of Mr. Sargent's group:

"In the same room with the Kaiser's portrait is the great success of the exhibition, Mr. Sargent's 'The Marlborough Family.' The group of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and their two children is the culmination of his work of the year, and, indeed, of Mr. Sargent's career up to the present time.

"Some courage was required to commission it, and still more to accept the commission, for the picture is to go to Blenheim and is to hang in friendly rivalry with one of the most famous of Sir Joshua's groups—the picture which gave the great President more trouble than anything he ever did, and which for a hundred and thirty years has been regarded as one of his chief triumphs.

"The President's picture is universally known—the Duchess standing in the centre of the large canvas, the Duke seated to her right, looking at his eldest boy, and the five other children grouped on the left, little Lady Charlotte pretending to frighten her tiny sister with a mask, Blenheim spaniels and a little Italian greyhound are playing about on the floor; above, a statue of a Roman warrior (is it the great Duke?) holds a statuette of Victory in his hand.

"Thus far Reynolds, and Mr. Sargent has followed his scheme with many differences. Both Duke and Duchess are standing, he to the spectator's left and she, raised a step, slightly to the right of the centre; the elder boy is before her, and the little one holds her train—an honor which seems to amuse him hugely. Every one is in robes of state, the Duke wrapped from head to foot in the mantle of the Garter, the Duchess in black, with black and rose-pink train, and the boys in Vandyke suits, such as become small pages at a coronation. Thus, except for the bright dresses of the boys, the tone of the picture is a good deal lower than Sir Joshua's, which is light, and, indeed, the Duke's mantle may be thought to be too nearly black, and would have borne to be of a somewhat more decided blue.

"Except for a certain exaggeration in the length of the lady's neck, the likenesses are exact, and the composition is far happier and less scattered than Sir Joshua's. A detail which shows that a small alteration may mean an immense improvement is to be found in the way in which Mr. Sargent reminds us of the Duke's descent from John Churchill; for while Reynolds, as we have said, gives us a statue and a Victory to interfere with the grouping, the modern painter crowns his picture with a bust of the great Duke, placed high above the sitters, among the flags which still hang in the great house that his country gave him. Thus completed, the group of portraits becomes a fine and harmonious picture, full of life, color, and atmosphere; the triumphant solution, in a word, of a most difficult problem, and an addition of high value to the historic treasures of Blenheim."

The French "Green Peril."

From The London Telegraph, April 27.

PARIS.—Writers are again warning the public against what is termed "the green peril," in other words, absinthe, the consumption of which is fearfully on the increase in France. In Belgium an interdict has been placed on the terrible drink, and its manufacture and sale are now forbidden in that country. According to one of the anti-absinthe writers, M. Maurice Talmeyr, 133,000 hectoliters, or 2,926,000 gallons, in round numbers, of the stuff are annually absorbed by French people, men and women, for the women have also learned to like the fee verte, now the green peril. Fifty years ago only 735 hectoliters of absinthe were consumed in France. The increase of lunacy is attributed to the deleterious drink. Sixty years back there were only 10,000 registered lunatics, and now there are 80,000. The increase in crime is also traced to the love of absinthe among the masses. Dr. Garnier, in his "Fous a Paris," and his "Criminel Instinctif," gives numerous cases in proof of this, but he says that if absinthism and alcoholism are not the sole motors of moral perversion they may, in his opinion, be considered the predominating causes of the same. The doctor further says that in a family addicted to alcoholic stimulants absinthe is put into the soup, and also "alcoholism, lunacy, and crime form a sombre trilogy closely united and intertwined." M. Talmeyr, who quotes Dr. Garnier, is more emphatic than the medical man in his denunciation of absinthe, which, he says, makes maniacs, epileptic victims, idiots, murderers, and monsters. He accordingly calls upon the Government to do something, but he is doubtful if the example of Belgium with regard to absinthe will be imitated here.

CLARK, TO HURRY HOUSE, BOUGHT BRONZE WORKS

Senator Quickly Overcame Obstacle That Meant Long Delay.

TO OPEN MANSION TO PUBLIC

May See Collection of Art Treasures There Once a Week When It Is Completed.

So well can Senator W. A. Clark of Montana keep a secret that it was not until yesterday that the news got out that for nearly four years he has been the principal stockholder and practical owner of the Henry-Bonnard Bronze Company of this city, which is the foremost concern of its kind in this country and one of the foremost in the world. At the same time the interesting fact was disclosed that he acquired possession of the concern exclusively for the purpose of facilitating the completion of his new house at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street.

The foundry has become one of his pet hobbies, and at present his ambition is to make the undertaking the finest and biggest in the world. The Henry-Bonnard Company is the only concern anywhere capable of molding a life-size statue in a single piece, and, within a very short time, another step will be taken that will place the company still further ahead of its European rivals. Preparations are now going on in the foundry for the molding of an equestrian statue in a single piece—the first venture of its kind ever attempted.

The Clark house is still some eighteen months short of completion. When ready it will, among other notable features, have an art gallery the equal of which may not be found in any private residence. It will contain the Senator's splendid collection of paintings and his still finer collection of pottery, which is said to be one of the most remarkable and valuable in existence. These art treasures will be thrown open to the general public once a week at least—a fact that has hitherto not been made public.

MUCH BRONZE IN HOUSE.

The amount of bronze work designed for the residence is very large, including stairways, doors, and other ornamental features, as well as much statuary. Not long after the plans had been approved by Senator Clark and the work begun, he learned that one of the most serious obstacles in the way of a speedy finishing of the new structure would be the difficulty of getting the bronze work done on time. It was then that the thought occurred to him of acquiring possession of a foundry of his own, just as he had already secured marble by the purchase of quarries.

The Henry-Bonnard Company was formed in 1872 by two Frenchmen, P. A. Bonnard and E. Henry, who began very modestly in a small house in Wooster Street. Its first chance came when William H. Vanderbilt planned his Fifth Avenue residence with a view to making it the finest in the country at that time. Christian Herter of Herter Brothers started Henry and Bonnard in a new place in Mercer Street, and furnished capital, which enabled them not only to do the work required for the Vanderbilt mansion, but also to undertake the molding of the first statues ever made in this country. Until then the sculptors had to send their models to Europe to have them cast. The first American-made statue was that of Gen. Bolivar, raised by the Venezuelan Government at Caracas. It was finished in 1881.

A couple of years later the company undertook to mold the statue of George Washington now standing in front of the Sub-Treasury in this city, and to do it in three pieces, an undertaking which at the time was regarded as revolutionary in its kind. Success followed the experiment, and when the doors for the Trinity Church were to be cast in bronze the foundry was able to turn out each door whole.

Then came the final achievement, when, in the middle nineties, the statue of Henry Ward Beecher, now facing the Brooklyn Court House, was cast in a single mold. The first attempt was a failure, but when tried again the venture proved successful. Up to this time no European foundry has been able to follow the example set by the American foundry.

In 1881 the company was reorganized, among the principal stockholders being such men as ex-Gov. R. C. McCormick of Arizona, the late Secretary of the Treasury William Windom of Minnesota, ex-Treasurer of the United States James Gilfillan, and Henry Newton of this city. The man in charge of the work then was Eugene F. Aucaigne, and so he is still. The history of the company since that time is remarkable. In this city alone there are to be found statues by the score that have come out of its foundry. Others, by the hundreds, have been spread all over the country, while a not insignificant number have passed over to Europe.

When Senator Clark acquired possession of the company he became greatly interested in the work, and on each trip he has made to Europe since he has never failed to visit the representative foundries over there. The result of his study of the art of casting in bronze has been several innovations already accomplished and the plans for others of a more radical kind. Incidentally, while serving art, he has made a splendid business out of his new hobby, increasing the money value as well as the fame of the establishment.

WORK ON GIGANTIC SCALE.

Although the company has long had a widespread reputation on account of the excellency of the patina or finish which it is able to give to its work, it has not been able to satisfy the radical demands of its new owner in this direction. As soon as he discovered that the principal obstacle in the way of the desired perfection was lack of space, he authorized Mr. Aucaigne to arrange for a new foundry on a scale hitherto undreamed of.

At first choice land in West End Avenue, between Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth Streets, was purchased, but it was found insufficient, not less than thirty city lots being needed to carry out the extensive plans. These plans are now about to be materialized, and will involve a removal of the company to Mount Vernon. The work on the new building will be under way there in a month, and will be ready before the end of the year.

Perhaps the most important and most interesting feature of the new plant will be an open-air gallery which will enable the artist to pour the finishing touches on his work, after it has been cast, and while seen in the same kind of light it will have when raised on the site which it will occupy. This innovation will be the means of overcoming a very serious difficulty that sculptors, as well as the men in charge of the casting, have had to contend with, that of judging the final effect of the completed statue while it remains in a dimly lighted gallery.

MIDOCEAN POKER ROW.

Texan and Virginian Disagree on Lucania—Arrivals on Liner.

The most exciting incident of the voyage of the Cunarder Lucania, which terminated at New York yesterday morning, was a row that occurred in midocean, in which a Texan and a Virginian were the principal performers. It was all over a poker game, and friends succeeded in preventing any damage by promptly interfering, and later persuading the irate Southerners to shake hands. For the rest of the voyage both were very good.

The Lucania brought a large number of passengers, among whom were Capt. Iwanoto of the engineering staff of the Japanese Navy, who has been in England supervising the construction of battleships for his country's navy. Others on board were Col. Bannatine-Allison and Lieut. Col. R. E. Fowke of the Royal Engineers, who are on their way to the Far East, to become the British Military Attachés with the Japanese forces in Manchuria, and William Phillips, Second Secretary of the American Legation in Peking. M. Ezekiel, the sculptor, who executed the statue

PICTURE SHOW BY WOMEN.

Annual Exhibition of the New York Woman's Art Club at the Arts.

The Woman's Art Club has again accepted the hospitality of the National Arts Club and filled the little galleries on West Thirty-fourth Street with a well-chosen collection of oil paintings, water-colors, pastels, miniatures, and sculptures. The pictures were shown yesterday to members and representatives of the press, but the opening reception will not take place until Tuesday afternoon.

This society consists of about ninety members and has for President Mrs. John W. Burgess, who has instituted this year a prize of $100, for which, very naturally, her own excellent pictures do not compete. It has been awarded to Mrs. A. Albright Wigand for her full-length seated portrait of Mrs. Wyman. Two or more paintings are familiar from the exhibitions of the past Winters; such are Miss Helen W. Phelps's likeness of the painter Snell, Mrs. Brewster Sewell's large decorative panel representing a group of Greeks marching to the temple, and Mrs. Louise Cox's full-length portrait of a lady standing by a big golden twisted column. But the greater part of them represent recent work, much of which is highly creditable to the artists.

A centre is formed with Miss Elizabeth Nourse's group called "The Young Mother," the face of the mother partly in shadow as she looks down on the infant in her lap, the infant being painted in a difficult position as to foreshortening, so that the face suffers in consequence. If this was a baby fair of feature the artist has made an ugly thing of it. Another central frame is the water color by Mrs. Rhoda Holmes Nicholls, "Girl with Roses," a youthful figure clad in a wonderful gown of crushed raspberry, which makes a most agreeable spot on the wall. Unfortunately, the artist has overdone the roses, for, together with the big round glass in which they stand, they form too large a mass in comparison with the slender figure and dainty head of the girl. A pleasantly "wet" little water-color is the view of harbor, docks, and pale-yellow houses by Mrs. Marion C. Hawthorne called "Reflections," the solid shorescape reflected in the tiny waves being broken into tremulous lines that seem to dance to and fro.

There are many excellent portraits here, notably that of the Hon. Alonzo B. Hepburn by the President, but the full-length likeness of a lady by Miss M. Jean McLane is perhaps the best of all for resolute, spirited brushwork and an air of authority. Near this oil hangs a rich pastel by Miss Juliette Thomson, the background cleverly adapted to the dull but sumptuous colors of the figure—a young girl of a Gypsy type, with a pallette in hand. Another good pastel likeness is that of Myron Whitney, Jr., by Miss Louise L. Heustis. Remarkable for its charm of tones and for a certain precociousness by no means overdone is the little seated figure of a young woman, "The Brown Cape," by Mrs. Wigand. Oil portraits notable are "Master Teddy," small boy, with an orange, by Miss Mary M. Wetmore, and a likeness of her mother by Miss Susan M. Ketcham.

No previous exhibition of the Woman's Art Club has shown so many good pictures. "A Cornish Village Evening," by Miss Adelaide Deming, and "St. Briac, Brittany," by Miss Raphaela Johnson, "Nuit d'Eté," by Miss Blanche Dillaye, and "At Tangier," by Mrs. E. M. Scott, are little townscapes in oils and water colors very delightful for sentiment. Among the landscapes of note are Mrs. E. Dallett Turcas's "Sunset on Long Island," Miss E. Louise Munger's "November," Mrs. A. L. Wyant's "Deserted Homestead," and Miss Shirley Williamson's "Old Willows"—a longish panel with ivory-colored clouds, water in the foreground and clumps of trees very delightfully distributed on the further shore. The flower pieces are unusually few. Roses in Delft jar by Mrs. E. N. Vanderpoel; "Gladioli," crisp and fresh, by Mrs. E. M. Scott; "Petunias," by Miss Myra Spofford; "Daffodils," with excellent feeling for quality, by Miss L. C. Hunter, are worth a careful examination. Other pictures deserving note are Mrs. Jeanie Gallup Mottet's portrait, Miss Laura Barrett's "Tatters, Miss Alethea Platt's "Country Workshop," Miss N. Homan's "Child's Head," in full face, with scarlet hair ribbon; Miss Fanny G. Dow's "Hilltop," Miss M. C. W. Reid's "Street in Sconset," and Miss Frances Delehanty's marine. The sculptures in battle, called "1812—a Decoration."

DRAWINGS BY BECKWITH, N. A.

Remarkable Examples of Draughtsmanship in Pencil and Crayons.

The Powell Gallery, on Fifth Avenue near Fifty-fifth Street, has two score and ten of pencil and charcoal drawings, crayons, and pastels by J. Carroll Beckwith, N. A., as the current exhibition for the remainder of the month. Mr. Beckwith's fame as a draughtsman is pretty well established, but one seldom has an occasion to test it in an exhibition. The little Powell gallery is very well adapted to the showing of works of the sort.

It is particularly in the heads and portraits drawn without the use of color and with comparatively few strokes that the mastership of this painter is shown; as in No. 43, "Profile"; No. 46, "The Pencil," very pale half-length of a graceful woman; No. 49, "After Houdon"; the head with chin in hand catalogued under No. 33, and the girlish face No. 23, called "Madonna." Sometimes only the faintest bit of sanguine is introduced on lips or eyes, as in "The Bronze Vase," head and bust of girl with vase; "Lamp Light," charcoal of girl on sofa, and "Spanish Comb," large charcoal of woman in Spanish dress. A nude girl called "The Jade Vase" from the object she holds in her hand; No. 5, "Crayon and Sanguine"; No. 9, "Reclining Head"; No. 20, "Nude Back," sleeping woman with one leg doubled up in an ungraceful position; No. 25, "Portrait Sketch," a big-eyed beauty with mass of red flowers at her breast; "Louis XIV.," head of the Dauphin with red and white colors on his hat, and No. 47, "Poppies," introduce colored crayons more vigorously. No. 50, "Japanese Dress," and No. 48, "The Kimono"; No. 30, "In the Conservatory," woman in pink loose gown gathering pink azaleas, and No. 45, "Hesitation," downward looking girl in pink dress with pink ribbons in her cap, use colors as the chief attraction, and do not give one the sense of mastery which we feel when examining the pencil and charcoal heads and figures.

Unfortunately the pen-and-inks are not many. A copy of an etching after a group by Tiepolo, No. 11, shows the ready hand of this artist. Some of the children's faces are particularly charming, such as "Questioning," a little boy's head like a Sir Thomas Laurence; No. 38, "Girl's Profile"; No. 10, "Child's Head," and No. 31, "Laughing Head." Those who enjoy these finer and smaller exhibits which are so seldom shown in New York will do well to visit the Powell Gallery before the month is out.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

HARROW—SHAW.

Yesterday morning Miss Ann Wood Shaw, a miniature painter, was married to Thomas F. Harrow of London, England, very quietly at the Manhattan Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Harrow sailed yesterday immediately after the ceremony, and will be at home to their friends at the Hotel Metropole, London, after June 1.

Stork Busy at Zoological Park.

A. Stork, Registrar of Births at the New York Zoological Park and elsewhere, tapped at the door of Director Hornaday's office yesterday afternoon and handed in his official report of new arrivals for the week. They comprised one youngster each to the three buffalo mules; triplets to each of the

POLICE BRONCO BUSTING FOR ESCAPED MUSTANGS

Real Cowboys, Who Join Chase, Not Impressed by Their Tactics.

CRANKY CAYUSE IN THE PARK

Drags Bluecoat Down Hill at End of Rope—All Rounded Up After Few Minor Casualties.

Flat dwellers in Harlem and along the west side were awakened at all hours yesterday morning, and it was as if to the senses came the tail end of a dream of Indians, fair maidens, cowboys, and revolver shots, for out of the night came the cracking of whips, the Indian "Ki-yi-yi" and the howl of the excited cowboy, "Whe-eye-o-o-ow!" Then came the clattering of hoofs, the swishing of the snake-like lariat, followed by a cheer or a howl of disgust as the noose missed the fugitive mustang, one of a herd of fifty-five which escaped late on Friday night from the vicinity of the New York Central yards and set the whole of the police force "bronco-busting."

It was reported last night that all but one or two of the mustangs had been captured and were now resting, after their wild frolic through the city, in the corral of Joseph Henry, to whose place, at Sixty-fourth Street and West End Avenue, they were bound when the stampede took place. The fifty-four mustangs left Cheyenne eighteen days ago, consigned by "Joe" Husoy, who got them from the Indian reservation, to Joseph Henry. The mustangs had a hard time of it coming to New York by train, and when the cars slowed up in the New York Central yards at Forty-fourth Street and Eleventh Avenue they were ready for mischief. A negro employe of Henry picked out the mildest-mannered mustang of the bunch and led it uptown. The others followed, all looking more dead than alive. At Sixtieth Street and West End Avenue the negro, whose name is Husted, met a friend who quizzed him about his second-hand plugs and threw a handful of gravel. The second-hand plugs received some of the gravel, raised their heads, and were off.

Half an hour later Police Headquarters was receiving wild reports by telephone. One from Columbus Circle said that a drove of mad horses had swept through the plaza pursued by six mounted policemen, two bicycle policemen, and one ferocious-looking cowboy, wearing a hat bought by the yard, and galloping along on a pinto mare with his long mustachio, his kerchief, and lariat fluttering in the breeze.

Policeman Gilligan of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, who was on duty at Forty-fourth Street and the North River, sent in the first report.

"I was comin' out av the pier," said he, "when thousands of buffalers, or some such bastes, come thunderin' down on me. I jumped to wan side. They went past me like as if the very divil had tiled their hinges, and went slash-splash into the river. Then a lot av men, wan of them the most ferocshus thing I ivir clapped eyes on, come afther them. They fished 'em all out excipt wan, which they said wus drowned. But I don't belave it. It's in Jersey."

When daylight came yesterday morning thirty-nine of the broncos had been recaptured. Sixteen were still at large, some in Central Park, some in the vicinity of Fort George, and one either in Jersey or down the bay. Reports of exciting encounters still continued to pour in. At Fifty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue a little calico bronco jumped over the front of a car and, knocking down the motorman, occupied his place until captured by the mysterious cowboy, who later turned out to be Arthur Marx, one of Henry's "bronco-busters."

At Eighth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street a mustang undertook to smash a cab, and was so surprised at the resistance that it was easily led afterward to the West Forty-seventh Street Station by Bicycle Policeman Kerrigan.

Later in the day Marx joined another cowboy of the West End Avenue ranch, "Pat" Kerrigan, in response to an alarm from Central Park, where about ten broncos were said to be browsing on the side of a hill near One Hundred and Fourth Street. The broncos were there, and presently there was the liveliest kind of time among four or five mounted policemen, who had procured ropes and were trying to lasso the mustangs. Not until the cowboys arrived were any caught. "Pat" Kerrigan was astonished at the horse-catching tactics of the police.

"One feller there," said he, "was on a hoss—a swell hoss—po-leece hoss, in fact. He seed a dun bronco steerin' for him. He tuk the rope up very carefully, arranged the coils, saw that the noose was all right, then started to twirl it round his head. When he woke up t'r the throw the dun bronco was on the h'riz'n to the north. Another bronco come along soon an' it looked t'r a moment like he was going to do business, but the lariat hitched on his own hoss's tail. Another feller got off his hoss. Said it was stiddier to throw t'm the graound. He throwed and landed the bronco, but nex' minnit he was trailin' down the hill; makin' up his mind which was most valable to him—the hoss or hisself."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The engagement has been announced of Mrs. George Lawrence Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander D. Shaw, to Capt. Leonard Burbeck of the British Army. Mrs. Myers, who is a widow, was married about five years ago in Trinity Church to George Lawrence Myers, who died of pulmonary trouble. Capt. Burbeck is in Manchuria, and no date is mentioned for the wedding.

The wedding of Miss Grizelda Houston Hull and Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson will take place on May 25 at Tuxedo at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Huntington Hull. It is probable that Miss Lucia E. Hull will be her sister's maid of honor. As Capt. Hobson's father, Judge James M. Hobson, died recently, the wedding will be a very quiet affair, and after the honeymoon the young people will make their home upon the Hobson estate, Magnolia Grove, at Greensborough, Ala. Mrs. George L. Ronalds gave a tea yesterday at Tuxedo for Miss Hull.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Mabel McAfee and Lewis Butler Preston at St. Thomas's Church at 12 on Tuesday next.

Miss Elsie Waterbury's marriage to Gouverneur Morris is set for 12:30 o'clock on May 22 in St. Peter's Church, Westchester.

Morin Scott Hare, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Montgomery Hare, is reported as being in a favorable condition. Mr. Hare, class of '05, Yale, met with a serious accident on Thursday on the baseball field at New Haven, two bones in one leg being fractured.

Passengers on the road coach Squadron yesterday, from the Savoy to Woodmanston Inn, were Miss Marietta B. Ladington, Miss Helen A. Ladington, Miss Ruth Waters, and Dr. R. B. Ladington, Mr. T. Johnson, and Mr.

FOY BABY WEEPS AT JOKE.

Comedian's Youngest Wouldn't Stand for Old Conundrum.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, May 13.—Eddie Foy, the comedian, recently bought a farm near New Rochelle, and more recently moved into it. He made his first appearance before his fellow-citizens in a box at the New Rochelle Theatre last night with a baby in his arms. Foy and the baby made a hit because the baby had a grievance.

The comedian was on the programme of an entertainment for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus, of which body Foy is a member, to give his sketch, "The Man Behind the Gun."

The first part of the entertainment was taken up by a troupe of amateur minstrels, headed by Mayor Henry S. Clarke, who acted as interlocutor. While this part of the show was going on Foy sat in a box at the left of the stage, with Mrs. Foy and five Foy children, including the Foy baby, which is about three months old.

"Now, tell me, Bones," asked the Mayor, "why does a chicken cross the road?"

"Wha's dat, Missa Johnsing?" queried Bones.

"I said why does a chicken cross the road?"

The answer came from the Foy box in a prolonged wail. The audience roared. The Mayor glared. Eddie Foy scratched his chin. Mrs. Foy applied endearing terms, but the baby would not be comforted. The show was held up. Mrs. Foy did her best, but to no purpose.

Then the comedian offered to try the efficacy of the paternal caress. He took the baby in his arms and walked up and down the box swinging the little Foy and humming "I'm So Happy." But he failed to communicate happiness to the baby.

"You take it," he said, in a stage whisper to Mrs. Foy, while the show waited patiently.

Mrs. Foy tried another series of endearments, but in vain. Then Foy, in despair, signaled to one of the ushers and told him to borrow, steal, or otherwise get a cab. One was procured, and baby Foy was sent home in disgrace in the arms of the usher.

Wild cheers greeted the Man Behind the Baby when he appeared in "The Man Behind the Gun."

BIRD HOSPITAL FOR NAUGHT.

Children Built It for Hurt Sparrow Which Black Cat Ate.

When scores of children and their nursemaids were enjoying an outing on the Mall in Central Park yesterday afternoon, a richly dressed boy threw a stick at a sparrow and knocked the bird to the ground. It lay as if dead. Two ragged children from Tenth Avenue, a boy of nine and a girl of seven, ran to pick up the injured sparrow. The little girl got it. She patted it on the head and lisped words of sympathy. Then the ragged boy took it and patted it.

"I'll det some water," volunteered the girl.

"And while your're getting it I'll build a hospital for the poor bird," said the boy.

He went to work with bits of paper and sticks of wood, and when the girl came back with a tin can filled with water the boy had completed his hospital on the grass. They bathed the sparrow in the water and revived it. Then they fed crumbs to it, and when the bird was able to hop the boy said;

"Let's go away, and when it gets over being scared it may fly away."

The little girl assented, and they walked about a hundred feet. Then they stopped and glanced back at the bird hospital just as a big black cat ran across the lawn and in less time than it takes to tell it had the bird in her mouth. The ragged children ran to save the sparrow, but were too late. Both then sat on the grass and wept. Tears came to the eyes of the nursemaid standing near. She whispered to the well-dressed boy, who had thrown the stick at the sparrow and handed 10 cents to him. He went to the ragged children, and, holding out the coin, said:

"Don't cry. Here's money for candy."

"We don't want no candy," sobbed the ragged boy.

"No," added the girl, "we wouldn't eat your tandy; give it to the pussy what ate the bird."

Then the well-dressed boy went back to his nursemaid and bawled so loudly she had to lead him from the Park.

CORONER LOSES DOG AND $5.

Gets Man Who Sold Him Other Man's Dog, but Awaits His Money.

Coroner Scholer, since Nov. 15 last, has been quietly but earnestly looking for the man who sold him a dog for $5. The Coroner is fond of dogs, and the fact is well known. It distresses him to have to turn away any of the many good dog bargains that are constantly offered him; so, when David Courtenay of 217 West Sixty-ninth Street came to him one day last Fall with a sleek and affectionate greyhound and offered it to him for the small sum of $5, the Coroner was impressed and closed the bargain.

For three days at least joy was the portion of the dog's new owner, but then the bolt fell in the form of a third party, who proved that the greyhound was his property and took it away. Since that time Coroner Scholer has watched for the author of his undoing.

Yesterday afternoon, as he sat in his home, 311 West Forty-eighth Street, he saw Courtenay walk past. Without waiting for a hat he dashed out of the house and yelled "Stoy thief; stop him!" A crowd gathered and the man who was sought mingled with it unostentatiously. The Coroner shouted to Roundsman Brady, who was passing and finally they picked the right man, and with the Coroner accompanying, Brady took him to the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

There, after Sergt. Hosey had taken his pedigree, Courtenay tried to square matters.

"If you will go with me to my home, Dr. Scholer," he said, "I will give you back the money."

"All right," said the Coroner, starting out, "all I want is my money."

"Hold on there," shouted the Sergeant, "that won't go. This man is under arrest and has got to stay here," and the Sergeant had his way. The Coroner is still waiting for his $5e

ROBERT H. TURLE DEAD.

Was at One Time President of Chamber of Commerce.

Robert H. Turle, a member of the grain-exporting firm of Robert H. Turle & Co. with offices in the Produce Exchange, died yesterday afternoon, after a short illness, at his residence, 34 Monroe Place, Brooklyn.

Mr. Turle was born in England in 1848, and came to this country thirty years ago. He was for many years connected with British commercial interests here. He had been President of the St. George's Society in this city, of the Produce Exchange, and of the Chamber of Commerce. His clubs were the Hamilton and the Brooklyn.

Mr. Turle leaves a widow and two daughters. His wife was Miss Kathleen Gordon Ford, daughter of Gordon L. Ford, who at one time was publisher of The New York Tribune. She was a sister of the late Paul Leicester Ford, the novelist, murdered by his brother Malcolm, who then committed suicide, some years ago.

Mrs. Lorillard Spencer's Body Here.

The body of Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, who died in Paris on March 2, arrived in New York yesterday morning on the French liner La Savoie. W. A. Spencer, a son of Mrs. Spencer, came over with the body. One of the liner's first-cabin apartments was transformed into a mortuary chapel, in which the casket rested during the voyage. Immediately on the arrival of the Savoie Mrs. Spencer's body was removed to St. George's Church. There was no service at the church, and the interment

WOMAN WINS MERCIFUL DEATH FOR AGED HORSE

At Police Station Converts Driver to Her Idea.

TEARFUL TALE TO SERGEANT

Miss Loter Tells Him That Horse Isn't Fit to Work and Officer Becomes Her Ally.

An old gray horse, weather-beaten, harness-worn, with three hoofs in the grave, stood hitched to a moving wagon in front of 169 Amsterdam Avenue. A young woman, pretty and petite, stopped and looked upon it with commiseration in her eyes.

Suddenly she looked up at the driver, a big, burly man. There was a gleam in her eye as she said:

"Mister, I don't know your name, you're going to shoot that poor old horse."

"Oh, sure," said the burly man.

"Well, do it," said the little woman.

"Oh, run along!" said the big driver, "run along!"

The woman walked away quietly, and presently returned with Policeman Leggett of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station.

"Look at that poor old horse," said she. "Officer, I want to see it shot."

"You must be cold-blooded, Ma'am, if you'll pardon my saying so," ventured Leggett.

Then, losing all patience, she cried:

"I'll see the Captain. Officer, I charge that man with cruelty to a poor old horse. Bring him to the station."

She marched in the direction of the station.

"Seems determined," said Policeman Leggett to the burly man by way of suggestion.

The burly man picked up the reins and drove to the station, where he gave his name as James Linden. The little woman said she was Miss Charlotte Loter of 217 Columbus Avenue, and piled a lot of bundles on the Sergeant's desk, explaining parenthetically that she had been shopping.

"Now," said Miss Loter, with a long breath, "that man is driving a poor old horse that ought to be in a home for the blind, or whatever they call the horse home. It limps, and it breathes hard, and it groans. I want to see it put out of its pain."

There were big tears in Miss Loter's eyes.

"Well, Madam?" said the Sergeant, tentatively.

"He's got to shoot it, or I'll lodge a complaint. If he shoots it now, I'll—I'll forgive him."

Linden hesitated, but finally agreed to notify the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Miss Loter departed in triumph. An hour later the horse was dead.

F. J. DE PEYSTER'S FUNERAL.

Interment in Old Family Vault in Trinity Churchyard.

The funeral of Frederic J. de Peyster, who died at Lakewood on May 10, took place yesterday morning at Trinity Church, and the interment was in the family vault on the north side of the churchyard.

The casket, which was borne up the main aisle of the church, was completely covered with American beauty roses, the gift of the Colonial War Society and the Huguenot Society. Both the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York and the Huguenot Society of America, of which Mr. De Peyster was an active member, sent large delegations to the funeral and from these societies the pallbearers were chosen.

Bishop Greer conducted the service with a full Episcopal ritual, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Steele, the vicar of Trinity Church. At the conclusion of the service in the church the body was taken to the family vault.

The vault, which is simply a deep hole walled up with brick with a brick stairway leading down into it and covered with a marble slab, has been the family vault of the De Peysters for about a hundred and fifty years. It was opened yesterday for the first time in thirty-two years. Among those at the funeral were James M. Varnum, Governor of the Society of Colonial Wars; Col. William Jay, Vice President of the Huguenot Society of America; Austen G. Fox, and ex-Mayor Low.

Crowell Hadden, Jr.

Crowell Hadden, Jr., Secretary of the Franklin Trust Company, Brooklyn, died of typhoid fever last night at his residence, 91 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn. Mr. Hadden was thirty-nine years old. He was a member of the Hamilton and the Dyker Meadow Golf Club. His widow, two sons, and a daughter survive him.

Form New Stock Exchange Firm.

George W. Stearn, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, who retired from active business several years ago, and William McClure, also a member of the Exchange for many years, and who, until recently, acted as its Secretary, have formed a partnership under the firm name of George W. Stearn & Co., with offices at 25 Broad Street. They began business on the floor of the Exchange yesterday.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The western storm will move northeastward during the next forty-eight hours and be attended by general rain Sunday in the lake regions and by thunderstorms and local showers in the Ohio Valley and the western portion of the South and Middle Atlantic States. The weather on Monday will be generally fair except along the Atlantic coast and in New England, where rain is probable. It will be cooler in the southwest, also in the middle and lower portion of the Mississippi Valley. Somewhat lower temperatures will prevail over the region of rainfall to-day.

The winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic coasts will be fresh southeast shifting to south on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts fresh south; on the west Gulf coast fresh southeast shifting to northwest; on the lower lakes fresh east, increasing Sunday; on the upper lakes east to southeast. Storm warnings are displayed on Lake Erie and southern portion of Lake Michigan.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Sunday, followed by showers in afternoon or at night; Monday showers, warmer on the coast; fresh south winds.

New England—Fair and warmer Sunday; Monday showers; fresh south winds.

Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey—Showers and thunderstorms Sunday and Monday; fresh southeast to south winds.

Western Pennsylvania—Showers and thunderstorms Sunday; Monday fair; increasing southeast winds shifting to west Sunday afternoon.

Western New York—Rain Sunday and probably Monday; increasing east winds.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

DEATH OF HIRAM CRONK CLOSES A PENSION ROLL

Last Veteran of War of 1812 Passes Away at Age of 105.

STATE PLANS FOR FUNERAL

Federal Troops, Militia, and Independent Organizations to Take Part—Aldermen to Bury Him in Brooklyn.

ALBANY, May 13.—The Adjutant General's office was informed to-day of the death in Ava, N. Y., early this morning, of Hiram Cronk, sole survivor of the American forces in the War of 1812. Preparations were begun at once for participation of the National Guard in the ceremonies of the funeral.

Assistant Adjt. Gen. Isaac F. Handy said that troops of the State and of the United States as well would attend the funeral.

Hiram Cronk was born on April 29, 1800, at Frankport, Herkimer County. On Aug. 4, 1814, with his brothers, Caspar and John, and their father, James, he enlisted at Western to fight in the war with Great Britain. They served with Capt. Edmund Fuller in the New York Volunteers at the defense of Sackett's Harbor. Hiram's valor as a stripling less than fifteen years old was spoken of as noteworthy. His discharge was dated Nov. 16, 1814.

His death closes the pension roll on the account of the War of 1812. At first Cronk's pension was $12 a month, but in 1908 Congress increased it to $25 a month. A special pension of $72 a month was voted to him by the State of New York some years ago.

After the war he learned the trade of shoemaker. Eighty years ago at Western he married Mary Thornton, who lived for sixty years. They had seven children, of whom five survive. He lived his last years in the home of one of them, Mrs. Sarah A. Rowley. His direct descendants were fourteen grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Cronk's habits after he had reached the Biblical allowance of years were such as to upset many ideas of what conduces to longevity. He constantly chewed tobacco and drank a gallon of wine twice a month. His principal nourishment was milk. In the late nineties Mr. Cronk, while suffering from insomnia at night, was able to sleep during the day, and his period of rest, always placid, was from 6 A. M. to noon. He was serene, and, as a Methodist, exhibited a simple, childlike faith. His retiring prayer was "Now I lay me down to sleep."

His memory was tenacious, and he at times went back to his soldier days, recalling many incidents of his early years. He liked to tell of the pranks of some boys which resulted in Gov. De Witt Clinton falling into the Erie Canal, and he remembered well the Marquis de Lafayette and his tour of the canal on its completion.

Mr. Cronk had the unusual experience of living to know fully the plans laid for his public funeral. Last December, while the veteran declared himself in almost perfect health, the Board of Aldermen of this city voted an appropriation and outlined plans for his funeral. Under the resolution the body will lie in state for twenty-four hours in the City Hall and will be buried in Mount Victory, Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn, where more than fifty of his fellow-soldiers in the War of 1812 have been laid at rest.

Aldermen Wirth, Kenny, Sickles, Owens, Dougherty, Coggy, and Kline, who were named as the committee to arrange details, will meet to-morrow at the City Hall. A guard of the Grand Army of the Republic posts of the State will attend the body. The funeral cortege will be imposing. A delegation from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston is expected and another from the Continentals of Philadelphia.

HYDE'S COMPLAINT AGAINST ALEXANDER

Full Text of Petition in the Action Against Equitable's President.

IS BEING SUED AS TRUSTEE

Hyde Declares Alexander Acted with Crimmins Committee—Tells of Syndicate Transactions.

The text of the complaint in the suit brought by James H. Hyde, William H. McIntyre, Mrs. Annie F. Hyde, and Mrs. Mary B. Ripley, seeking the removal of James W. Alexander, as a trustee of the stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society held by the Henry B. Hyde estate, and an accounting from Mr. Alexander of the damage alleged to have been done by him in the course of the controversy over mutualization, is as follows:

The plaintiffs herein, by Samuel Untermyer, their attorney, complain of the defendant and aver and allege as follows:

I. The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States is and was at all times herein mentioned a domestic stock corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York. A copy of the charter of said corporation is hereto annexed marked Exhibit "A," and is hereby made a part of this complaint. Said corporation has a capital stock of $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares of the par value of $100 each.

II. On or about the 17th day of September, 1895, Henry B. Hyde of Islip, County of Suffolk, State of New York, since deceased, was the owner and holder of five hundred and two (502) of said shares, the same being a majority of the capital stock of said corporation, which, on or about the date last mentioned, he, the said Henry B. Hyde, by an instrument in writing under seal, conveyed, assigned, transferred, and set over unto certain persons in said instrument mentioned for the purposes and upon the trusts therein set forth. A copy of said instrument or trust deed is hereunto annexed marked Exhibit "B," and is hereby made a part of this complaint.

III. Said Henry B. Hyde departed this life on or about the 2d day of May, 1899, without having during his lifetime terminated the trust created by said instrument or trust deed in the manner therein provided, or otherwise, and the said trust is still in existence. By the terms of said trust deed the trust will not terminate until the death of James H. Hyde, one of the plaintiffs herein, or such time as he shall attain the age of thirty years, whichever event shall first happen. The persons designated in said trust deed as Trustees under the same, and to whom the said shares of stock were conveyed, assigned, transferred, and set over as aforesaid, accepted the trust thereby created and undertook the performance of the same.

IV. Plaintiff James H. Hyde is the same James H. Hyde mentioned in said trust deed; he was born on the 6th day of June, 1876; he attained the age of twenty-one years on the 6th day of June, 1897, and he thereupon forthwith, in accordance with the terms of said trust deed, became one of the Trustees of the trusts created by the same. On the 6th day of June, 1901, he attained the age of twenty-five years, and thereupon, in accordance with the terms of said trust deed, Louis Fitzgerald, defendant James W. Alexander, and the said James H. Hyde, became the only Trustees of the trust created by said trust deed.

Appointment of Alexander.

V. Said Henry B. Hyde, when he departed this life as hereinbefore set forth, left him surviving his widow, Annie F. Hyde, and his only surviving children, James H. Hyde, and Mary B. Ripley, all plaintiffs herein, the same being his only next of kin and heirs at law. Said James H. Hyde is unmarried and without issue.

VI. On the 14th day of January, 1903, the said Louis Fitzgerald duly tendered in writing his resignation as trustee under said trust deed, and said resignation was on the same day, with the consent of plaintiffs Annie F. Hyde and Mary B. Ripley, accepted by defendant and by James H. Hyde, being the remaining trustees, who thereupon by the authority conferred upon them by the terms of said trust deed duly by an instrument in writing under their hands and seals, designated and appointed plaintiff William H. McIntyre, as a new trustee in the place and stead of the said Louis Fitzgerald, with the same rights, powers and duties in all respects, and vested with the same title to the property held in trust under said trust deed as though the said William H. McIntyre had been named therein as a party thereto of the second part and had executed the same. The defendant and said James H. Hyde and William H. McIntyre are now the Trustees and the only Trustees of the trust created by said trust deed, and are in possession of the shares of stock conveyed, assigned, transferred and set over by the same, and have, since the said 14th day of January, 1903, continuously exercised and are still exercising the powers conferred upon them and their predecessors in office by the same.

VII. The defendant is President and a Director of the said The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, and these and other offices which he holds in said society he acquired by means of the vote of the stock of said society held in trust.

VIII. The said trust deed contains the following provision:

And this indenture further witnesseth that the parties hereto do hereby accept and agree to carry out the terms of the said trust as hereinbefore set forth, and to perform the duties and obligations imposed upon them hereby; and the said parties of the second part do further agree that in case the said James Hazen Hyde shall survive the party hereto of the first part, the parties of the second part and their successors will use all reasonable effort to induce the said James Hazen Hyde, upon his attaining the age of thirty years, and upon the termination of this trust, to make a new settlement of the stock and property hereinbefore described, and in such manner that the same may continue so long as lawfully may be to be, held and controlled by suitable trustees, and to be preserved for the benefit of the children of the said James Hazen Hyde after his death.

IX. It was the fixed purpose and desire of the said Henry B. Hyde, as was well known to the defendant, that the control of said stock so placed in trust, and the responsibility for the selection of the Directors of said society, and for its management, should remain in his descendants as long as the law would permit.

X. With regard to all matters connected with the management and administration of the affairs of said society, the said Henry B. Hyde, who was the founder of said society, and whose lifework it had been to make it a success, regarded the defendant as having undertaken in the event of the death of the said Henry B. Hyde to thereafter become and continue to be during the life of said trust the adviser of your petitioner, James Hazen Hyde, of which fact the defendant was well aware.

XI. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that the defendant has made no effort whatever to induce the said James Hazen Hyde upon his attaining the age of thirty years and upon the termination of said trust, or at any time, to make a new settlement of the stock and property described in said deed of trust in any manner or for any purpose. Instead of this, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, the defendant has for many months past been secretly engaged in organizing and carrying on a conspiracy, the purpose and effect of which, if successful, was intended to and would be to take the power of controlling the management of said society out of the hands of said stock without the consent of its holders, and to confer this power ostensibly upon the policy holders of said society, but in a form in which he expects to be able to control such management through the proxies which the agents of the society would secure from policy holders, thus in effect to all intents and purposes destroying the real value of the subject of said trust of which the defendant is one of the Trustees, and securing the control for himself and his relatives. Up to the third day of February, 1905, this movement was conducted by the defendant in secret and with no intimation of the existence or purpose of such movement to any of your petitioners.

XII. The defendant, who, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, owed his connection with the said society and his prosperity to the friendship and generosity of the said Henry B. Hyde, inaugurated the said conspiracy by joining with himself one Gage E. Tarbell, the Second Vice President of the society. All the overt acts in said conspiracy hereinafter charged, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, were committed with the aid and connivance of said Tarbell with the intent to secure to defendant and Tarbell the control of the said society and its assets freed from the rights and powers over the control of said society and its assets incident to the ownership of the stock of which the defendant is one of the Trustees.

Memorials to Directors.

XIII. For the purpose, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, of accomplishing the said corrupt and unlawful ends by means of such conspiracy the defendant procured two memorials to be circulated, addressed to the Board of Directors of the society, signed by the defendant and Tarbell and by other officers and employes of the said society. One of the said memorials recommended to the board that the policyholders of the society be given the right to vote for Directors. The other memorial, also addressed to said Board of Directors, expressed the opinion that

"The re-election of Mr. Hyde as Vice President and acting President in the absence of the President with all the powers he has exercised would be most prejudicial to the welfare and progress of the society and the conservation of the trust funds held for the benefit of our policyholders."

XIV. Attached hereto, marked respectively "C" and "D," are copies of the said memorials, which are hereby made a part of this complaint. Neither said James Hazen Hyde nor any of the plaintiffs were aware of the circulation of said memorials or either of them, although the same were, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, being secretly circulated by the procurement of the defendant, to the injury and demoralization of the discipline and business of the society, and such signatures were being and were eventually secured in many instances through duress practiced upon employes whose continued employment and future prospects with the society were dependent upon the good will of the defendant and of the said Tarbell, who promoted and actively assisted in the procurement of such signatures.

XV. On the third day of February, 1905, without any previous intimation of the purpose or subject-matter of such conference, said defendant summoned said James H. Hyde and a conference with him, at which conference he presented to said James Hazen Hyde the aforesaid memorials, marked "C" and "D," dated Feb. 2 and Feb. 7, 1905.

XVI. At the conference the defendant, in further consummation of the aforesaid conspiracy, demanded the immediate consent of said James Hazen Hyde that his control of the company through the ownership of a majority of its capital stock should be at once relinquished, and that said Hyde should consent that the functions of the stock should be superseded under a pretended reorganization through which the votes of policyholders in person or by proxy should ostensibly select the management to control the affairs of the company, but which was in fact intended to perpetuate said defendant's control, and further demanded that the said James Hazen Hyde should personally resign and withdraw absolutely from any connection with the control or management of the company, and accompanied these demands by threats of exposure of alleged improprieties on the part of the said Hyde, and impressed upon him that the movement against him personally had been so effectively organized as to be resistless. Such threats were followed by the circulation and publication of false and defamatory charges affecting the said Hyde hereinafter more particularly referred to.

XVII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that no one of the fifty-two members of the Board of Directors of the said society, except a few of the officers who had signed said memorials, were aware of the existence of said movements so inaugurated, or of any of the alleged grounds upon which it had been conducted.

Signers Ignorant of Facts.

XVIII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that many of the signatures to said memorials were obtained by the said defendant without explanation to the signers of any fact on which such action was based, and many of said signatures were thus obtained from persons ignorant of the facts, who signed the same because they were instructed to do so and because the signatures of their superior officers appeared thereon, and under coercive influences.

XIX. If said James Hazen Hyde shall live so long he will attain the age of thirty years on the 6th day of June, 1906, upon which date, unless the same shall have been resettled, said trust will expire.

XX. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that the purpose and object of the defendant in inaugurating the movement above mentioned was, indirect violation of his trust, to destroy the value of the subject-matter thereof, and to deprive said James Hazen Hyde of practically all power as a stockholder in said society prior to the termination of said trust and to enable the defendant to secure control of the society.

XXI. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of said society was held on the 8th day of February, 1905, at which meeting the memorials above referred to were presented to the Board of Directors by the defendant, and that at that meeting a committee of twelve members of the board was appointed to consider the subject-matter of said memorials and to report thereon at an adjourned meeting of said board to be held on Feb. 16, 1905.

XXII. In the meantime said James Hazen Hyde had, after taking the advice of counsel, reached the conclusion that, even if it were desirable in the interests of the society and its policy holders that the policy holders should be given a right to vote, there were many legal and practical difficulties in the way of immediately conferring that right upon them, and that, therefore, at said meeting of Feb. 16, 1905, he made to said Board of Directors the following proposition:

I propose that the stock in which I am interested be transferred to Trustees to be voted for five years in accordance with the directions of the Board of Directors. In the meantime the board can consider the question of transfer of voting control to the policy holders and the methods of conserving the stability and safety of the company in case of such change.

If the board, upon such consideration, determines to retire the stock, I shall cheerfully co-operate in the change in any way which has due regard to the rights and equities of both stockholders and policy holders.

A copy of this communication in which said offer was made is hereto attached marked Exhibit "E" and made a part of this complaint.

XXIII. The statements contained in Exhibit "E" are true to the knowledge of plaintiff James Hazen Hyde, and are true as the other plaintiffs herein are informed and believe.

XXIV. The offers contained in said statement were brought about by the aforesaid conspiracy and in the effort of the said Hyde to effect a compromise which would prevent the complete destruction of the value of said stock and the injury to the society and to the stock resulting from an extended agitation and possible litigation incident to the attempts of the defendant to consummate said conspiracy for the disfranchisement of said stock.

Action on Mutualization.

XXV. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that the aforesaid subject so referred to said Committee of Twelve, on Feb. 16, 1905, received the consideration of said committee, who, moved thereto by the agitation inaugurated by the defendant and the widespread publicity given thereto through the procurement of the defendant, reported to said adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 16th day of February, 1905, that in their opinion the time had arrived when the policy holders of the society should be given a right to vote for its Directors, and that it said meeting the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board the policy holders should be given a right to vote for Directors, and that steps be taken for carrying this principle into effect at the earliest possible moment.

Resolved, That Valentine P. Snyder, W. Alexander, James H. Hyde, Gage E. Tarbell, Cornelius N. Bliss, T. De Witt Cuyler, and Chauncey M. Depew be appointed a committee to arrange the details for carrying the step into execution, and in connection therewith the settlement of the allied question of indemnification of stockholders, and report to the meeting to be called by the Chairman for the purpose at the request of the committee—not later, however, than Wednesday, April 19, 1905.

XXVI. This resolution was passed in the belief on the part of said committee that the society had the power to purchase the stock and on the assumption that the just claims of the stockholders would be satisfied, but the defendant had already been advised that the society had no power to make such purchase. Such resolution was brought about as was all of the agitation for the pretended "mutualization" of the society in furtherance of the aforesaid conspiracy, and the desire of the plaintiff James Hazen Hyde to avoid the injury to the society and to the said stock from the continuance of such agitation.

XXVII. Thereafter plaintiff James Hazen Hyde and said society were advised by counsel that said society could not lawfully acquire said stock or indemnify the stockholders, all of which was known to the defendant.

XXVIII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said committee appointed by the foregoing resolution held several meetings at which the subject of giving the policy holders the right to vote for Directors was fully discussed, as well as the legality of the various methods proposed for bringing about that result, all of which was with a view to putting into effect agitation which the defendant had inaugurated in pursuance of the aforesaid conspiracy to destroy the voting power on the said stock of which he was a trustee. In consequence of such agitation and forced thereto by the action of the defendant in violation of his duties as a trustee, said James Hazen Hyde presented to said Committee of Seven on the 14th day of March, 1905, a communication of which a copy is hereto attached marked Exhibit "F" and made a part of this complaint. The statements contained in said communication are true to the knowledge of said James Hazen Hyde, and are true as the other plaintiffs herein are informed and believe. The said communication and the offers of concession therein contained, were likewise induced by the desire to pacify the said agitation, which had been brought about and kept alive by the defendant as herein alleged.

XXIX. After receiving said communication said Special Committee of Seven at this same meeting requested said James Hazen Hyde to modify his assent contained in said written communication, Exhibit "F," only in the respect that the class of Directors to be annually elected should be elected twenty-eight thereof by the policy holders and twenty-four by the stockholders, and that after consideration of this request and a discussion of the form of amended charter intended to carry it into effect it assented to, and said James Hazen Hyde thereupon assented to said request and modified his previous assent accordingly for the reasons herein stated.

XXX. Thereafter on the 21st day of March, 1905, said special committee unanimously recommended to the Board of Directors the immediate adoption of said amended charter.

XXXI. On the same day at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States said amended charter in the form Exhibit "G" hereto annexed and made a part hereof was unanimously adopted by said board.

The Crimmins Protest.

XXXII. Thereupon, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, said amended charter was executed and was forwarded to the Superintendent of Insurance for his approval, and practically simultaneously therewith a protest was lodged with said Superintendent of Insurance against the approval of such charter, accompanied by a demand for a hearing before such approval should be granted.

XXXIII. The above-mentioned protest and demand was made in the name of a committee of policy holders of said society of which Mr. John D. Crimmins was Chairman, and which committee as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was organized with the knowledge and co-operation of the defendant and of his personal counsel, and was supplied with information on which that protest was, at least in part, based from records of the said society and otherwise, with the knowledge and co-operation of defendant and of his personal counsel, and, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was supplied with funds for the payment of its expenses, at least in part, by defendant and others, not members of said committee, co-operating with the defendant in his efforts herein referred to, to bring about the complete mutualization of the society and to prevent the approval of said amended charter.

XXXIV. Thereupon the said Superintendent of Insurance decided not to approve said amended charter until after a hearing thereon had been granted to the protesting policy holders and to the company.

XXXV. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that on the day appointed for this hearing there appeared before the Superintendent of Insurance representatives of said policy holders' committee, with their counsel, and also a gathering of people who stated that they represented policy holders' committees in various counties of the State, and were there to oppose the approval of said amended charter.

XXXVI. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that said gathering of people were there at the invitation and suggestion and with the approval of the said policy holders' committee, and of the defendant and his personal counsel acting locally through an Albany agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

XXXVII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said hearing was adjourned at the suggestion of the Superintendent of Insurance for one week, and that in the meantime one or more conferences were held by the Superintendent of Insurance with said policy holders' committee, and certain members of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and with certain stockholders of the society, at one of which conferences the defendant was present and stated that he was in sympathy with the policy holders' committee in its efforts to obtain immediate and complete mutualization of the society, meaning thereby that he was in favor of immediately taking away from the shares of stock of which he was a trustee as aforesaid, the right to control the management of the business of said society, and of electing any portion of the Directors of the same, and that he gave his sanction and sympathy to the efforts of said policy holders' committee to prevent the approval of and to defeat the said proposed amended charter.

Mr. Alexander's Letter.

XXXVIII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that, at said conference the defendant declined to state to the Superintendent of Insurance whether he favored or opposed the said proposed amended charter as filed with the Superintendent, and declined to deny that he opposed its approval, referring to a letter which he had written to the Superintendent as a sufficient statement of his position in the matter. This letter was as follows:

New York, March 27, 1905.

The Hon. Francis Hendricks, Superintendent of Insurance, Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir: The informal inquiry made by you through one of my counsel a few days ago as to my attitude toward the proposed amended charter recently adopted by the Board of Directors, and now held by you pending your official approval of it, has been reported to me. This inquiry, supplemented by a personal request for my views made by your representative this morning, leads me to believe that a brief statement of my position on the subject is due you.

My conviction, stated at the beginning of the movement for the mutualization of the Equitable Society, is that full and complete and unqualified mutualization is demanded as a corrective of certain conditions and tendencies within the society, and would prove highly beneficial to the society and just toward the policy holders. This opinion has undergone no change. The proposed amended charter is a compromise between opposing views within the Board of Directors. It was recommended by the special committee of seven appointed by the board to carry into effect a resolution, adopted on Feb. 16, in favor of conferring upon policy holders the right to elect Directors of the society, of which committee I was a member, after numerous meetings and very full discussion. Three of the six counsel of this committee expressed grave doubts as to the legality of any amendment to the charter which would take away the stockholders' voting control without the stockholders' consent.

There was at this meetings of the committee a very explicit statement of the supposed legal rights of the stock and a clear intimation that if forced beyond a certain point the stock might be depended upon to resist in its own interests the efforts to mutualize the society. I was convinced that the concession embodied in the committee's report, and subsequently in the amended charter, was all that could be obtained without a controversy which might have very serious results. I therefore reluctantly acquiesced in the report, but I stated to the committee, and I still believe, that the proposed division of control and that it said meeting the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board the policy holders should be given a right to vote for Directors and that steps be taken for carrying this principle into effect at the earliest possible moment.

Resolved, That Valentine P. Snyder, W. Alexander, James H. Hyde, Gage E. Tarbell, Cornelius N. Bliss, T. De Witt Cuyler, and Chauncey M. Depew be appointed a committee to arrange the details for carrying the step into execution, and in connection therewith the settlement of the allied question of indemnification of stockholders, and report to the meeting to be called by the Chairman for the purpose at the request of the committee—not later, however, than Wednesday, April 19, 1905.

XXV.—This resolution was passed in the belief on the part of said committee that the society had the power to purchase the stock and on the assumption that the just claims of the stockholders would be satisfied, but the defendant had already been advised that the society had no power to make such purchase. Such resolution was brought about as was all of the agitation for the pretended "mutualization" of the society in furtherance of the aforesaid conspiracy, and the desire of the plaintiff James Hazen Hyde to avoid the injury to the society and to the said stock from the continuance of such agitation.

XXVII.—Thereafter plaintiff James Hazen Hyde and said society were advised by counsel that said society could not lawfully acquire said stock or indemnify the stockholders, all of which was known to the defendant.

XXVIII.—Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said committee appointed by the foregoing resolution held several meetings at which the subject of giving the policy holders the right to vote for Directors was fully discussed, as well as the legality of the various methods proposed for bringing about that result, all of which was with a view to putting into effect agitation which the defendant had inaugurated in pursuance of the aforesaid conspiracy to destroy the voting power on the said stock of which he was a trustee. In consequence of such agitation and forced thereto by the action of the defendant in violation of his duties as a trustee, said James Hazen Hyde presented to said Committee of Seven on the 14th day of March, 1905, a communication of which a copy is hereto attached marked Exhibit "F" and made a part of this complaint. The statements contained in said communication are true to the knowledge of said James Hazen Hyde, and are true as the other plaintiffs herein are informed and believe. The said communication and the offers of concession therein contained, were likewise induced by the desire to pacify the said agitation, which had been brought about and kept alive by the defendant as herein alleged.

XXIX.—After receiving said communication said Special Committee of Seven at this same meeting requested said James Hazen Hyde to modify his assent contained in said written communication, Exhibit "F," only in the respect that the class of Directors to be annually elected should be elected twenty-eight thereof by the policy holders and twenty-four by the stockholders, and that after consideration of this request and a discussion of the form of amended charter intended to carry it into effect it assented to, and said James Hazen Hyde thereupon assented to said request and modified his previous assent accordingly for the reasons herein stated.

XXX.—Thereafter on the 21st day of March, 1905, said special committee unanimously recommended to the Board of Directors the immediate adoption of said amended charter.

XXXI.—On the same day at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States said amended charter in the form Exhibit "G" hereto annexed and made a part hereof was unanimously adopted by said board.

The Crimmins Protest.

XXXII.—Thereupon, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, said amended charter was executed and was forwarded to the Superintendent of Insurance for his approval, and practically simultaneously therewith a protest was lodged with said Superintendent of Insurance against the approval of such charter, accompanied by a demand for a hearing before such approval should be granted.

XXXIII.—The above-mentioned protest and demand was made in the name of a committee of policy holders of said society of which Mr. John D. Crimmins was Chairman, and which committee as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was organized with the knowledge and co-operation of the defendant and of his personal counsel, and was supplied with information on which that protest was, at least in part, based from records of the said society and otherwise, with the knowledge and co-operation of defendant and of his personal counsel, and, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was supplied with funds for the payment of its expenses, at least in part, by defendant and others, not members of said committee, co-operating with the defendant in his efforts herein referred to, to bring about the complete mutualization of the society and to prevent the approval of said amended charter.

XXXIV. Thereupon the said Superintendent of Insurance decided not to approve said amended charter until after a hearing thereon had been granted to the protesting policy holders and to the company.

XXXV. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that on the day appointed for this hearing there appeared before the Superintendent of Insurance representatives of said policy holders' committee, with their counsel, and also a gathering of people who stated that they represented policy holders' committees in various counties of the State, and were there to oppose the approval of said amended charter.

XXXVI. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that said gathering of people were there at the invitation and suggestion and with the approval of the said policy holders' committee, and of the defendant and his personal counsel acting locally through an Albany agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

XXXVII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said hearing was adjourned at the suggestion of the Superintendent of Insurance for one week, and that in the meantime one or more conferences were held by the Superintendent of Insurance with said policy holders' committee, and certain members of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and with certain stockholders of the society, at one of which conferences the defendant was present and stated that he was in sympathy with the policy holders' committee in its efforts to obtain immediate and complete mutualization of the society, meaning thereby that he was in favor of immediately taking away from the shares of stock of which he was a trustee as aforesaid, the right to control the management of the business of said society, and of electing any portion of the Directors of the same, and that he gave his sanction and sympathy to the efforts of said policy holders' committee to prevent the approval of and to defeat the said proposed amended charter.

Mr. Alexander's Letter.

XXXVIII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that, at said conference the defendant declined to state to the Superintendent of Insurance whether he favored or opposed the said proposed amended charter as filed with the Superintendent, and declined to deny that he opposed its approval, referring to a letter which he had written to the Superintendent as a sufficient statement of his position in the matter. This letter was as follows:

New York, March 27, 1905.

The Hon. Francis Hendricks, Superintendent of Insurance, Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir: The informal inquiry made by you through one of my counsel a few days ago as to my attitude toward the proposed amended charter recently adopted by the Board of Directors, and now held by you pending your official approval of it, has been reported to me. This inquiry, supplemented by a personal request for my views made by your representative this morning, leads me to believe that a brief statement of my position on the subject is due you.

My conviction, stated at the beginning of the movement for the mutualization of the Equitable Society, is that full and complete and unqualified mutualization is demanded as a corrective of certain conditions and tendencies within the society, and would prove highly beneficial to the society and just toward the policy holders. This opinion has undergone no change. The proposed amended charter is a compromise between opposing views within the Board of Directors. It was recommended by the special committee of seven appointed by the board to carry into effect a resolution, adopted on Feb. 16, in favor of conferring upon policy holders the right to elect Directors of the society, of which committee I was a member, after numerous meetings and very full discussion. Three of the six counsel of this committee expressed grave doubts as to the legality of any amendment to the charter which would take away the stockholders' voting control without the stockholders' consent.

There was at this meetings of the committee a very explicit statement of the supposed legal rights of the stock and a clear intimation that if forced beyond a certain point the stock might be depended upon to resist in its own interests the efforts to mutualize the society. I was convinced that the concession embodied in the committee's report, and subsequently in the amended charter, was all that could be obtained without a controversy which might have very serious results. I therefore reluctantly acquiesced in the report, but I stated to the committee, and I still believe, that the proposed division of control and that it said meeting the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board the policy holders should be given a right to vote for Directors and that steps be taken for carrying this principle into effect at the earliest possible moment.

Resolved, That Valentine P. Snyder, W. Alexander, James H. Hyde, Gage E. Tarbell, Cornelius N. Bliss, T. De Witt Cuyler, and Chauncey M. Depew be appointed a committee to arrange the details for carrying the step into execution, and in connection therewith the settlement of the allied question of indemnification of stockholders, and report to the meeting to be called by the Chairman for the purpose at the request of the committee—not later, however, than Wednesday, April 19, 1905.

XXV.—This resolution was passed in the belief on the part of said committee that the society had the power to purchase the stock and on the assumption that the just claims of the stockholders would be satisfied, but the defendant had already been advised that the society had no power to make such purchase. Such resolution was brought about as was all of the agitation for the pretended "mutualization" of the society in furtherance of the aforesaid conspiracy, and the desire of the plaintiff James Hazen Hyde to avoid the injury to the society and to the said stock from the continuance of such agitation.

XXVII.—Thereafter plaintiff James Hazen Hyde and said society were advised by counsel that said society could not lawfully acquire said stock or indemnify the stockholders, all of which was known to the defendant.

XXVIII.—Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said committee appointed by the foregoing resolution held several meetings at which the subject of giving the policy holders the right to vote for Directors was fully discussed, as well as the legality of the various methods proposed for bringing about that result, all of which was with a view to putting into effect agitation which the defendant had inaugurated in pursuance of the aforesaid conspiracy to destroy the voting power on the said stock of which he was a trustee. In consequence of such agitation and forced thereto by the action of the defendant in violation of his duties as a trustee, said James Hazen Hyde presented to said Committee of Seven on the 14th day of March, 1905, a communication of which a copy is hereto attached marked Exhibit "F" and made a part of this complaint. The statements contained in said communication are true to the knowledge of said James Hazen Hyde, and are true as the other plaintiffs herein are informed and believe. The said communication and the offers of concession therein contained, were likewise induced by the desire to pacify the said agitation, which had been brought about and kept alive by the defendant as herein alleged.

XXIX.—After receiving said communication said Special Committee of Seven at this same meeting requested said James Hazen Hyde to modify his assent contained in said written communication, Exhibit "F," only in the respect that the class of Directors to be annually elected should be elected twenty-eight thereof by the policy holders and twenty-four by the stockholders, and that after consideration of this request and a discussion of the form of amended charter intended to carry it into effect it assented to, and said James Hazen Hyde thereupon assented to said request and modified his previous assent accordingly for the reasons herein stated.

XXX.—Thereafter on the 21st day of March, 1905, said special committee unanimously recommended to the Board of Directors the immediate adoption of said amended charter.

XXXI.—On the same day at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States said amended charter in the form Exhibit "G" hereto annexed and made a part hereof was unanimously adopted by said board.

The Crimmins Protest.

XXXII.—Thereupon, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, said amended charter was executed and was forwarded to the Superintendent of Insurance for his approval, and practically simultaneously therewith a protest was lodged with said Superintendent of Insurance against the approval of such charter, accompanied by a demand for a hearing before such approval should be granted.

XXXIII.—The above-mentioned protest and demand was made in the name of a committee of policy holders of said society of which Mr. John D. Crimmins was Chairman, and which committee as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was organized with the knowledge and co-operation of the defendant and of his personal counsel, and was supplied with information on which that protest was, at least in part, based from records of the said society and otherwise, with the knowledge and co-operation of defendant and of his personal counsel, and, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, was supplied with funds for the payment of its expenses, at least in part, by defendant and others, not members of said committee, co-operating with the defendant in his efforts herein referred to, to bring about the complete mutualization of the society and to prevent the approval of said amended charter.

XXXIV. Thereupon the said Superintendent of Insurance decided not to approve said amended charter until after a hearing thereon had been granted to the protesting policy holders and to the company.

XXXV. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that on the day appointed for this hearing there appeared before the Superintendent of Insurance representatives of said policy holders' committee, with their counsel, and also a gathering of people who stated that they represented policy holders' committees in various counties of the State, and were there to oppose the approval of said amended charter.

XXXVI. Plaintiffs are informed and believe, that said gathering of people were there at the invitation and suggestion and with the approval of the said policy holders' committee, and of the defendant and his personal counsel acting locally through an Albany agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

XXXVII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that said hearing was adjourned at the suggestion of the Superintendent of Insurance for one week, and that in the meantime one or more conferences were held by the Superintendent of Insurance with said policy holders' committee, and certain members of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and with certain stockholders of the society, at one of which conferences the defendant was present and stated that he was in sympathy with the policy holders' committee in its efforts to obtain immediate and complete mutualization of the society, meaning thereby that he was in favor of immediately taking away from the shares of stock of which he was a trustee as aforesaid, the right to control the management of the business of said society, and of electing any portion of the Directors of the same, and that he gave his sanction and sympathy to the efforts of said policy holders' committee to prevent the approval of and to defeat the said proposed amended charter.

Mr. Alexander's Letter.

XXXVIII. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that, at said conference the defendant declined to state to the Superintendent of Insurance whether he favored or opposed the said proposed amended charter as filed with the Superintendent, and declined to deny that he opposed its approval, referring to a letter which he had written to the Superintendent as a sufficient statement of his position in the matter. This letter was as follows:

BELMONT HORSES WON BELMONT PARK RACES

Blandy, in Withers, Was One of Three Victors for Stable.

GOOD AND PLENTY'S STAKES

Favorite for Whitney Memorial Steeplechase Was First in a Splendidly Contested Race.

August Belmont's racing stable had the leading part in the sport at Belmont Park yesterday, when the Belmont horses won half the races on the programme, the victories including two of the three stake features, the historic Withers Stakes and the Fashion, while all three winners were of the owner's breeding, from the Nursery Farm in Kentucky. It was the most successful day the Chairman of The Jockey Club has enjoyed in his turf career, though his one other starter of the afternoon, Imperialist, in the Whitney Memorial Steeplechase, was beaten.

Mr. Belmont was present to see his horses run, and when the Whitney Memorial was decided, witnessed the contest from a saddle horse in the infield, where with nearly a score of the hunting-and-riding set of the neighborhood he galloped from point to point, the better to see the progress of the race.

The track was wet and heavy from the rain of the night before and the early morning, and the fields were cut down in several of the races, the event that lost most from that cause, however, being the Withers, fourth on the card. Of the seven horses named on the programme as starters only three went to the post, the absentees including both of James R. Keene's entries, Sysonby, which for weeks has been a strong favorite for the stakes, and Wild Mint. The fact that the Keene horses were scratched early caused a revival of the reports that the owner was not inclined to run his horses at Belmont Park, but he did run one horse in another stake.

The three left in the race, one mile, for three-year-olds, were Mr. Belmont's Blandy, J. E. Madden's Hot Shot, and R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Sparkling Star, all with weight up, and Blandy, ridden by Davis, the favorite at odds on. Blandy broke in front, and went on in the lead, making all the pace and winning after quite a little rousing with the whip on the stretch when Hot Shot went after him on the last turn.

For the Fashion Stakes, four and a half furlongs, for fillies two years old, there were nine runners, with Comedienne and Cousin Eva about equal favorites, the Belmont entry Tiptoe being the third choice. Sixth to Pamela's lead at the start, Tiptoe went to the front in the first half furlong and raced in the lead all the way, winning, hustled out, by two lengths from Comedienne, which closed from back in the crowd in the last quarter, and finished second after fighting out with Tiptoe. In the selling five furlongs for two-year-olds, Mr. Belmont was represented by the filly Crossways, ridden by the apprentice Kermath, and against which as long a price as 40 to 1 was laid, Phyllis A. being an odds-on favorite. Kermath got Crossways away in the lead, and from end to end she held that place, winning finally, ridden out, hips before Speedway, second.

Of the three races won by the Belmont stable, the Withers was worth $6,720 to the winner, and the Fashion $3,150, while Crossways's purse swelled the total by $810.

For the Whitney Memorial Steeplechase, the fifth race on the card, and the most valuable steeplechase of the American turf, nine of the ten horses named on the programme went to the post, H. S. Page's Ivan being the only one withdrawn. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.'s, champion cross-country horse Good and Plenty, ridden by Ray, was the favorite throughout the betting, and started at odds on. The race made one of the prettiest and most exciting contests that cross-country racing ever has produced, the nine runners jumping faultlessly to the very last obstacle, where the only spill in the race occurred, Gamecock, which was out with the pacemakers for two miles, then tiring, and striking the last jump and throwing his rider, who escaped unhurt. When the flag fell Arian went out to the front, followed by Good and Plenty and Gamecock, and to the last jump the three were in front. When Gamecock fell, Flying Buttress, which had trailed for a mile and three-quarters, went on up to the first rank, and drove Ray, Good and Plenty, to the whip, Good and Plenty then coming away under the punishment and winning by two lengths. Summary:

PRIZES FOR HORSES IN SPEEDWAY PARADE

Miss Morosini Wins Trophy for Best-Looking Turnout.

FAST TROTTERS IN LINE

Horse Show Proves an Attractive Feature—Mrs. Lehman Strauss Gets Blue Ribbon with Sensation.

Miss Giulia P. Morosini was easily the star of the Speedway parade yesterday afternoon. She also earned her right to this distinction as she carried off two first prizes during the day, more than fell to the share of any other parader or exhibitor in the open air horse show that formed a novel and interesting attraction at the close of the parade. Miss Morosini drove her famous team of three horses abreast, taking her place at the start of the parade, Riverside Drive and Seventy-second Street. The route was up the drive, crossing the new viaduct above Grant's tomb, continuing up Broadway to St. Nicholas Place and along the entire length of the Speedway to Washington Bridge, where the line swung around and came back to the grand stand at One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street.

About 200 rigs were in line, the uncertain condition of the weather having curtailed the expected number considerably. It was the first poor day that the Road Drivers' Association has had in the six years that it has conducted a public parade. Nevertheless, most of the favorite fast steppers of the Speedway were out, and the public, who supported the horsemen loyally, lined both sides of the Speedway, while in the vicinity of the grand stand and the horse show ring, a few blocks above, fully three to four thousand persons were gathered.

Prompt to the minute of 2 o'clock the divisions heading the parade started from Seventy-second Street. George A. Coleman, driving Kingwood, 2:17¼; A. L. Kerker, driving Marshal; President H. D. Gill, driving Auditor B., 2:28½; Walter M. Jermyn, driving Mary Joe, 2:10½; L. W. Boynton, driving Comet, and George L. Buckman, driving Trixie, 2:20¾, led the parade and its different divisions. The horsemen were preceded by a platoon of mounted police commanded by Sergt. John W. Smith, and behind them came the Old Guard Band, whose stirring music served to put every one in good humor despite the damp and mist that rolled over the drive from the Harlem River.

Miss Morosini was not the only lady who drove, but she was the most conspicuous owing to her opinion public, Mrs. Lehman Strauss drove her high-stepper sensation, Mrs. John W. Smith drove James L., 2:00¼; Mrs. John S. Caldwell, wife of the Speedway Superintendent, drove Bessie Bell; Mrs. George H. Huser drove Charles Benton; Mrs. Peter Cooper, of Jersey City, drove Luke Morgan, 2:17¼, and Miss Edith Hard drove Fannie K., 2:15¾. Mrs. Peterson drove in a sidebar buggy. Mrs. Strauss was in a stanhope, while all the other fair whips except Miss Morosini used the light spider rigs which were already in vogue with the men.

The long line of single and double teams made a fine appearance as they came slowly up the Speedway and went past the grand stand. All the women were heartily applauded as soon as they came in sight, and many of the men, whose horses are favorites with the Speedway public, received ovations as they passed by. Fire Chief Edward F. Croker attracted attention behind his fine pair, Rumpus, 2:12, and Sam Rex, 2:15. Tom Sharkey was also there, behind his trotter, Sharkey, 2:19¼, and the crowd added to the applause.

"There's Sharkey; hurrah for Sharkey!" were some of the popular greetings accorded him as he sped along his pacers, giving upon his horse and apparently oblivious of the enthusiasm of his unknown friends.

Three prizes were offered for the best outfits. It was natural that the first should go to Miss Morosini. Her father, G. P. Morosini, sat with her in her imported basket phaeton, the immobile footman in the rear. Her horses, three chestnuts, known as Glorious, Glory, and Peacock, were beautifully matched. The harness was in light shade of buff, with rich royal blue trimmings, silver mounted. Miss Morosini was dressed in a neat white gown, her white jacket having the waist shade of blue trimming, while her white hat was ornamented with a white ostrich plume. Harry L. Topilix won the second prize, his team being Graeme Graham, Judge Goodman, 2:27, and President H. D. Gill got the third award.

The parade over the crowd surged out to the horse show. This was something entirely new, but its popularity was unquestioned. The ring was quickly thronged with expectant horse lovers, while the high hill overlooking the flat green that extends back of the drive for quite a distance, just below Washington Bridge, was speedily dotted with young men and women, who thus secured an admirable view of the ring and the Speedway beyond, where many of the fast steppers were engaging in impromptu brushes despite the heavy going.

Eight classes were judged, and most of them filled well. Miss Morosini's second prize of the day was gained in the class for teams driven to vehicles fitted for the Speedway. She drove her bay team, known as Gay Boy and Bay Boy, her harness being of a different color, a deep brown with red trimmings. She was the only entry in this class. Some of the trotting and pacing classes had over a dozen entries, and several of the women who drove fast horses in the parade were competitors for the ribbons. Mrs. Lehman Strauss won the blue with sensation in the runabout class.

One of the funny incidents of the show was the sudden appearance in the ring of a tiny dog, barely eight inches high, pulling a miniature express cart filled with grass and wild flowers. This amusing turnout received no blue ribbon, but it occasioned more enthusiasm among the crowd than many of the fine horses did.

Among the guests who watched the judging with interest were Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Park Commissioner John J. Pallas, Park Commissioner of the Bronx Henry C. Schrader, Louis F. Haffen, President of the Bronx Borough; Paul Dana, George W. Plunkitt, and Samuel McMillan. The judging was done by George R. Hulme, Richard F. Carman, J. Howard Ford, John H. Scholle, and Carl E. Burr. The classes and awards:

Trotters to Speed Wagons.—Won by C. P. Sackett's Viper Belle; J. K. Meyers's Kitty Dillner, (2:16¼,) second; Dr. H. D. Gill's Auditor B., (2:28½,) third.

Teams to Speed Wagons.—Won by Harry L. Topilix's Graeme Grattan and Judge Boardman, (2:27;) Luke A. Burke's West Wilkes and Elbora, (2:18¾,) second; A. W. Casler's Sir George and Sir Walter, third.

Trotters to Runabouts.—Won by Joseph Simon's Rocking Star; H. C. Williams's Gladiator, (2:27¼,) second; Luke A. Burke's Hilda B., third.

Teams to Runabouts.—Won by Henry Steers's John R. Direct and Perie; A. Alexander's Princewell and Scotsman, second; Edward F. Croker's Rutheno, (2:12,) and Sam Rex, (2:15,) third.

Pacers to Speed Wagons.—Won by William Linthwaite's George H.; W. J. Hiscox's Fannie H., second; Miss Edith Hard's Fannie K., (2:12¾,) third.

Short-Tail Horses to Runabouts.—Won by Mrs. Lehman Strauss's Sensation; Alfred B. Maclay's Morah, second; John G. Peterson's West, driven by Mrs. Peterson, third.

Short-Tail Teams to Stanhope or Spider Phaetons.—Won by S. N. Hexter's Floral King and Gold Dome; Louis J. Kohn's Jeanette and Pauline, second; W. C. Floyd-Jones's Greystone and Chesterfield, third.

STREAMS FILLED WITH TROUT.

Anglers Make Good Catches, Although Water Is a Trifle Cold.

According to veteran anglers, the trout season promises to be the best ever known. Those who have tried their luck in the Adirondacks have met with excellent success. The same reports come from the streams in this State, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, where for the past seven years the Commissioners of the different States and the United States Fish Commissioners have stocked the streams with the sporlings and yearlings.

Ten-Mile River, near Narrowsburg, N. Y., has furnished some of the best sport. Some anglers have had, although the water is a little cold. Last week a well-known fisherman landed 58, a companion 51, and a third lucky angler got a string of 32. These catches averaged about a half pound each, with a pound representing the heaviest for any single catch. From Woodbury Falls, on the Newburg Branch of the Erie, comes a report of a catch of 18, nearly all of which were close to a pound in weight. Fishing there is exceptionally good.

At Clifton, Penn., a string of 40 was taken from the Lehigh River, several of which weighed a pound each. In the streams on the Jefferson Division reports are that the catches are all of small fish, as the water is still too cold for the big ones to show themselves. The best catch reported is a string of 25 from McCauley Creek, at Carbondale, Penn., with the top weight weighing but ten ounces.

AMERICA'S BEST RACING AUTO.

So Says W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., of Sir Thomas's Bennett Car.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., gave the Gordon Bennett racing automobile that is entered from this country by Dr. Harold E. Thomas of Chicago a very critical inspection yesterday on Long Island. He pronounced the car, at the end of a twenty-five-mile run and a thorough mechanical examination, as the finest racing automobile ever made in the United States.

"I am more than pleased with it," he added, "and I see no reason why it should not do great things in the race in France."

Mr. Vanderbilt made the run of twenty-five miles in his high-power German car as pacemaker for the new American racer. Joe Tracy drove the latter, and it covered the twenty-five-mile circuit, starting from Great Neck, in 25 minutes. Several fairly good-sized hills were encountered, and no attempt was made to take the time for a fast mile. Another test will probably be made early this week, but to all intents and purposes the car has practically fulfilled the conditions imposed by the committee.

It will be shipped to France next Saturday, Joe Tracy and his mechanicis sailing on the same steamer.

New York Scores Only Run of Game with Chicago at Polo Grounds.

With three of its regular players missing—Chance, first baseman; Evers, second baseman, and Kling, catcher—the Chicago team faced the National League champions in the first game of a series of four at the Polo Grounds yesterday, and was defeated by a score of 1 to 0. While the limited number of base hits of both teams would seem to indicate that the playing was principally confined to Pitchers Taylor and Lundgren, there were numerous instances of sharp and brilliant fielding, and these had a great deal to do to relieve the contest of much of the monotony. As showing the effectiveness of the pitching, only one base was given on called balls, and that by Taylor, and but three hits were made by each team. The New York man was credited with the only strike outs, and he hit a batsman in the first inning.

The individual instances of notable fielding were a fine catch by Schulte close to the fence which separates the right field seats from the regular playing ground, in the first inning; two difficult running catches by Maloney at centre field; Dahlen's all-around work, including a finely taken fly from Casey's bat in the fourth inning, and a splendid one-hand pick-up by Tinker on a full run in the fifth inning.

Five local men faced Lundgren in the first inning, and two errors and a base hit were responsible for the only run of the game. Donlin's fly was captured by Beagle without trouble. Browne, however, was enabled to reach first base on Tinker's fumble, and as a result of O'Neill's very bad throw to second to catch Browne stealing, the runner landed on third. Bresnahan then batted to the right-field fence for two bases, which scored Browne. Bresnahan got no further than second, as Merten was thrown out by Hoffman to Barry. The next local man to reach a base was Donlin, in the third inning, who made a splendid hit to right field for two bases. There was only one man out at the time, but both Browne and McGann were thrown out at first.

Only six Chicagoans reached first base during the game. Maloney was hit by Taylor in the first inning, but was thrown out at second. Then the next eight men were retired in regular order. Maloney, in the third inning, hit safely and got to second on a bad throw by McGann. In the fifth inning three men got to first, but at no time was the home plate threatened. During the remaining innings only one man landed on first base, and that was due to a base on balls. The score:

BOSTON, 3; CINCINNATI, 2.

BOSTON, May 13.—With two out in the ninth inning of to-day's game Needham drove the ball over the left-field fence for a home run, winning the game for Boston, 3 to 2. Boston batted Chech hard, but brilliant fielding by Cincinnati kept the runs down. A sharp double-play by Bridwell and Huggins in the first inning was a feature. The score:

Greater New Yorks and Chicagos Play Eleven Innings Without a Run.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 13.—The Chicagos and Greater New Yorks played an eleven-inning draw at the South Side Park to-day, neither team scoring a run until rain terminated the exciting game. Only four hits were made off Smith and five off Hogg. In the first inning Jones reached first on balls, but was sacrificed at second. Callahan struck out and Davis popped up a fly to centre field. In the second inning McFarland made the first hit of the game. It was a screamer along the left foul line for two bases. Tannehill struck out, but a wild pitch let Mac to third. With two runs in sight Smith lunged three times at the ball and missed them all.

Meanwhile Smith was getting away with the visitors without fretting. A fumble by McFarland gave Keeler a life in the first inning, and Fultz's out advanced him to second, but Williams was the third victim. In the third inning Kleinow led off with the first hit off Smith, but was forced at second on Hogg's bunt.

With two out and two strikes on Hogg in the fifth inning Smith lost control of the ball and sent him and Dougherty to first on balls. Keeler hit a little fly back of third base, which fell just outside the foul line, with Tannehill, Davis, and Callahan reaching for it. Connolly called it fair, then reversed his decision after Davis led him down the foul line and showed him the hole where the ball struck in the soft ground. Griffith tore his hair and a long wrangle delayed matters. Finally Smith passed Keeler, filling the bases. Fultz struck out with three pitched balls. The score:

Home Run by Halligan Wins for Jersey City Over Providence.

With two out and the score 5 to 4 in favor of Providence, Halligan of Jersey City, in the game between the two teams on the home grounds yesterday, lifted the ball over the left-field fence for a home run, and thus won the game. Bean, who had landed on first by a nicely placed hit, preceded Halligan across the plate. The "bleacherites" went wild. The more enthusiastic of the "fans" rushed on the field, and, lifting Halligan on their shoulders, carried him across the diamond.

Jersey City had the lead by a score of 4 to 2 up to the seventh inning, when Providence, by four hits and two bases on balls, scored three runs. Loose fielding on the part of Providence aided Jersey City in getting the three runs in the first inning. The score:

BALTIMORE, 4; NEWARK, 1.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 13.—Baltimore captured to-day's game from Newark on a spurt in the sixth inning, when Connor failed to check Hayden's drive to first base. McAleese reached first on a bunt and Jordan on a base on balls, filling the bases. Neal hit to Mahling, who failed to catch the ball, and Hayden and McAleese scored. Jordan tallied on Loudenslager's hit. The score:

ROCHESTER, 3; MONTREAL, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, May 13.—The Rochesters won to-day in the second inning, when Yancey, Carr, and Rothfuss hit Felix for a base each and two men came home. They added another in the third inning on Steelman's hit and ragged fielding by Dyer and Bannon. Lachance received a great welcome from the crowd and fielded in great shape, but proved weak at bat. MIDDLETOWN, Conn., May 13.—Wesleyan defeated New York University in their annual track meet held on Andrus Field this afternoon by the close score of 62 to 60 points. Dearborn broke two Wesleyan records and Martin one. The mile run was most exciting, Grey of Wesleyan beating Vanderman by a few inches. The New Yorker had previously won the half mile. Tomson won both sprints. Tippett the broad, Sullivan the high hurdle, and Reilly the shot-put for New York.

SCHOOL LEAGUE GAMES ANNUAL CHAMPIONSHIP

Outdoor Athletic Contests at Columbia Oval.

DE WITT CLINTON BOYS WIN

Relay Record Broken in the One-Mile Event—Erasmus Hall High School Gets Second Honors.

De Witt Clinton High School captured first honors in the second annual outdoor games of the Public Schools Athletic League yesterday afternoon at Columbia Oval; William's Bridge. Erasmus Hall High School took second place, Boys' High School third, Commerce fourth, Bryant fifth and Manual Training High sixth. All of the races of the afternoon were novice with the exception of the High School Relay Championship.

The one-mile relay was the best event of the day, the fast time of 3:34 3-5 breaking the record for the distance by one-fifth of a second. Boys' High School of Brooklyn led at the finish of the first relay; on the second time around the track Commerce jumped into the lead by about a yard and was never again headed, her runner gradually increasing the advantage. Boys' High School in the last relay made an ineffectual attempt to catch Commerce, but failed, although the lead was somewhat reduced. Summary:

100-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by G. McNulty, Erasmus Hall; second, A. Powell, Boys' High; third, A. Burt, Boys' High; fourth, M. Bloom, Morris High. Time—0:10 3-5.

100-Yard Dash, Senior.—Won by L. Walters, De Witt Clinton; second, J. Stephens, Boys' High; third, W. Wallace, De Witt Clinton; fourth, E. O'Neil, Boys' High. Time—0:10 4-5.

220-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by G. McNulty, Erasmus Hall; second, A. Powell, Boys' High; third, D. Long, Commerce; fourth, A. B. Burt, Boys' High. Time—0:26.

220-Yard Dash, Senior.—Won by E. O'Neil, Boys' High; second, E. Holmquist, De Witt Clinton; third, W

BARR BACK ON THE ATLANTIC

Returns from Wife's Bedside and Resumes His Command.

OWNER DENIES ANY TROUBLE

All the Kaiser Cup Boats Ready for the Race—Best Records of the Contestants.

Wilson Marshall, owner of the Atlantic, announced decisively last evening that Capt. Barr would sail his boat for the Kaiser's Cup. "He is aboard her now," he said, "and will be aboard her when she reaches the Needles. There has been no trouble betwen Capt. Barr and myself. He will certainly sail her." This was the way he couched his statement.

It was called forth by the rumors that have been circulated about South Brooklyn for the past few days that there was trouble brewing aboard the favorite. Whispers were first heard and then decided statements. Some who ought to be in a position to know said that the Captain was far from satisfied with the conditions on the Atlantic, and others quoted a quarrel with one of the supervisors of the work of grooming her. A color was given both stories by the sudden departure of the veteran for his home Friday morning.

As announced yesterday, there was then some uncertainty as to whether he would be back. His wife had been ailing for some time, and he received a hurry call from home demanding his presence.

The Captain returned from Mrs. Barr's bedside early yesterday morning, and immediately called on Mr. Marshall. He was in consultation with the owner for some time, and then left for the Morse yards, saying he would take the Atlantic to the Horseshoe as soon as she left dry dock at 3 o'clock. Arriving at Morse's in the afternoon, he had a long conference with William Gardner, the boat's designer. He then went aboard just as the craft was ready to leave the wharf.

The statement that things were not going to suit him on the Atlantic was disposed of by Mr. Marshall in this way: "Capt. Barr has had absolute authority over every one else as to what should be done aboard her."

All of the seven yachts which will start on Tuesday in the race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's Cup are in the water, ready for the start. The last of them to leave dry dock, where all have been grooming for the past week, was the Ailsa, which slid off the ways at Tietjens & Lang's yard yesterday afternoon. She left in tow shortly after and awaits only the starting gun to send her on her long and it is expected, memorable journey across.

Two of the five are off the Horseshoe already. Wilson Marshall's Atlantic left Morse's shipyard yesterday afternoon in tow for her anchorage there. She was joined by the Endymion direct from Tebo's. It is odd that these two should be the first on the ground, inasmuch as they are the popular favorites and will carry the well wishes of the largest number of the race followers. It is indicative of the spirit of eagerness which actuates them.

Off Tompkinsville is anchored the Hamburg, Fleur de Lys, and Thistle. The latter left McWilliams's yard in tow and arrived at her anchorage late in the afternoon.

The Ailsa was towed to the New York Yacht Club station off Twenty-third Street, joining the Sunbeam, which left the dry dock at Morse's and under tow went up the river. The Apache was also there in the morning, but later left for a new anchorage off Twenty-first Street, North River. The Utowana was taken down to Stapleton, while the Valhalla, after leaving Tietjens & Lang's, anchored again in the North River.

The absentee, the Hildegarde, again failed to appear. She has been expected daily from New London, where she has been trimming, but last night Mr. Coleman said she would go right to the Horseshoe. He says she is in fine condition and will give a good account of herself. As to her chances he would say nothing.

It is interesting to note the best performances of the various competitors, the conditions under which they are likely to make their best time, and the probability of their getting conditions to suit them. Given this information any one can judge for himself the chances of each of the competitors as well as the most skilled navigator, for luck enters so largely into the whole question that it is impossible to forecast a result. "The man who tries to pick a winner in a contest of this kind is crazy," as Capt. "Jim" Loesch puts it.

The moderate-weather boats are the most talked of because the weather conditions seem most likely to favor them. Take the Endymion, a good all-around sailor, with the best record across the Atlantic under sail alone, and weigh her past performances. Capt. Loesch says she has done 338½ miles in her best day's run. Her best continued sailing was 1,002 miles in a bit over three days, an average of nearly 330 miles. On her trip across when she made her record her best day's run was 292 miles, her poorest 144 miles. These two distances illustrate well the difference in conditions. Her trans-atlantic time was thirteen days twenty hours and thirty-six minutes.

She logged from the Bermudas to the Barbadoes, 1,200 miles, in five days; from New York to Bermuda in 71½ hours, an average of nearly 10 knots; from Cape Charles Lightship to Winter Quarter Shoal, making 14 knots part of the way and covering the 61 miles in 4¼ hours. She beat 225 miles against a southwest wind from Newport to Sea Gate in 26½ hours. These are all mighty good performances and indicate a power that will not be denied if she has the proper conditions for speed.

The Atlantic has similarly made many notable trials against time, though having but one year's racing to her credit she has not so extended a list. Her best time is said to have been made on her first trip to New York down the Sound. She is then credited with a run of eighteen knots in an hour. Charley Barr says she can do sixteen with a strong windward breeze and a fairly good sea running.

Her competitive performances are of course the victories for the Cape May and Brenton Reef Cups. In the latter race she beat the Endymion, though the latter was becalmed seven hours longer than the victor.

The Hamburg, which ranks third on the list of favorites, has a splendid record. As the Rainbow, when first designed by the Watsons and built on the Clyde, she raced from Dover to Heligoland for the Emperor's Cup and made sixty-eight knots in four hours, averaging nearly seventeen miles an hour. In the Cowes race over the Queen's course she made forty-seven miles in 3¼ hours, averaging fourteen miles an hour. She sailed against the American-built Meteor in two informal races and won both and showed her heels to the Emperor's yacht in both cases. The more American yachtsmen see of her over here the more they appear to think well of her chances.

The Ailsa, most confidently favored by her coterie of adherents and most severely condemned by those who think her incapable of standing the strain of any sort of heavy weather with her big rig, has also a fine record. She has made the best time ever made over the New York Yacht Club thirty-three mile course, covering the distance in three hours and eight minutes when good-class schooners were a half hour behind her.

She won the Astor Cup in a heavy sea and a gale blowing in 3 hours and 35 seconds. She reached from Newport to Vineyard Haven and made magnificent time. But all her races show her fast under conditions very different from those existing in this contest.

Hildegarde, the fifth of the leaders in popular esteem, is regarded as the dark horse. She is known to be very fast, particularly in running and reaching in moderate weather. She made an excellent showing in a long series of races with the Constellation. But she has not been tried out so thoroughly as the others to give an absolutely correct idea of her full power.

Utowana is another good performer in reaching and running in moderate weather. The reason she is not considered more highly is that in the conditions suited to her there are several boats faster.

Coming to the heavy-weather boats, the Valhalla is, of course, the fastest boat in the fleet, with her enormous tonnage and her vast sail spread, if she had a driving gale and reaching winds all the way. Her square rig would put her out of the race at once in headwinds, and it is probable that one day of such conditions would nullify any advantage she could heavy weather. Her only racing experience was in the contest for the Coronation Cup, when by odd coincidence she was defeated by the Utowana.

The Apache, with her bark rig, is similarly handicapped. Yet the Apache is a better all-around boat than the Valhalla under conditions which are likely to prevail. If the seas roll and the winds blow she will be very strong in a running race, with broad reaching to do.

The record of the Thistle in stiff breezes makes her look strong. Windward work would kill her chance. Her best time was made on a run from Old Point Comfort to New York, which she made in twenty-four hours. During its course she made fifty-seven miles in four hours, with a stiff breeze blowing and a heavy sea.

The Sunbeam expects nothing in the race, and has entered for the sole purpose of encouraging the contest. Conditions cannot be figured whereby she has a chance except on pure luck.

YACHT OWNERS DINED.

Allison V. Armour Entertains Ocean Race Committee and Competitors.

Allison V. Armour last evening entertained at a private dinner at Delmonico's the committee in charge of the ocean yacht race for the Kaiser's Cup and the owners of the competing yachts. There were sixteen about the board.

Besides Mr. Armour there were the two members of the American Committee, representing the Imperial Yacht Club at Kiel, Commander Hebbinghaus, Naval Attaché at the German Embassy in Washington, and the Kaiser's personal representative, and C. L. D. Robinson of the New York Yacht Club. There were the committee in charge of the start, Commander H. H. Hosley, United States Navy; Oliver E. Cromwell, Newbury D. Lawton, H. De B. Parsons, and Edward H. Wales, and the eleven owners. These were: Wilson Marshall, the Atlantic; Henry S. Redmond, the Ailsa, and Grenville Kane, who will represent him aboard; Edmund D. Randolph, the Apache; Commodore George Lauder, the Endymion; Dr. Lewis Stimson, the Fleur de Lys; Adolph Tietjens, managing owner, the Hamburg; Edward R. Coleman, the Hildegarde; Lord Brassey, the Sunbeam; Commodore Robert E. Tod, the Thistle, and the Earl of Crawford, the Vaihalla.

After the dinner there was an informal discussion of the general conditions of the race and arrangements to facilitate its satisfactory conduct. Several changes in the rules were projected, announcement of which will be officially made to the contestants this morning.

Many Yachts in Commission.

C. B. Brokaw, of the New York and Larchmont Yacht Clubs has put Alfred Marshall's 90 foot cabin steamer Levanter, which he has renamed Anita, in commission. Mr. Brokaw shall has just received his new 131 foot cruising yacht, Levanter, and will take a party to Sandy Hook in her to suitably send off his brother, Walter Marshall's, Atlantic, in the ocean yacht race on Tuesday.

J. C. W. Frishmuth's steam yach' Albia, 37 feet 5 inches on the water line, left South Brooklyn yesterday for an extensive cruise in European waters. Several changes were made in her rigging, a new bowsprit stepped, the hull was painted. She expects to be gone about five months.

Lloyd Phoenix's new steam yacht Intrepid III., 125 feet on the water line, has been overhauled at Morse's yard and will leave for Bridgeport and Sound cruising in about two weeks.

H. H. Rogers's 227 foot steam yacht Kanawha has left Tebo's yard to go into commission from the New York Yacht Club station, Twenty-sixth Street, East River, with Capt. Gear in command.

J. R. Drexel's auxiliary Sultana, 155 feet on the water line, is at Morse's yard making extensive alterations and repairs. She will be ready for active campaigning about the end of the month.

Walter Jennings's steel screw steamer Tuscarora, 170 feet on the water line, will leave South Brooklyn early this week for extensive cruising along the Sound.

Henry R. Wolcott's steam yacht Invincible, 132 feet on the water line, is refitting at Morse's. She was formerly the Intrepid, owned by Lloyd Phoenix.

Henry Darlington's steam yacht Elreba, 125 feet on the water line, went into commission yesterday from Tebo's shipyard, where she had been refitted. Capt. Haskell is in command.

Commander Frederick G. Bourne of the New York Yacht Club is having the steel, twin screw auxiliary schooner Colonia, 163 feet 5 inches on the water line, overhauled preparatory to putting her in commission the latter part of the week.

R. A. C. Smith's screw steamer Privateer, 160 feet on the water line, is being refitted at James Riley's shipyard at Jersey City, and will next week go to Morse's at South Brooklyn, to be hauled out and scraped and painted preparatory to being put in commission.

Henry T. Sloane's auxiliary schooner Idler, 85 feet on the water line, is being refitted and will be commissioned in about a week or ten days.

Among the fleet of small boats fitting at Morse's yard are F. T. Lisman's auxiliary schooner, Nydia, 106 feet on the water line; W. F. Jackson's auxiliary Impatient, 74 feet 5 inches; S. Untermyer's auxiliary Scud, 81 feet; T. A. Beall's steamer Rival, 92 feet; L. Mathias's centreboard sloop Oberon, 25 feet.

Yachts and Yachtsmen.

Miss Ginlia Morosini has offered a handsome silver cup as a trophy to the Sea Cliff Yacht Club to be competed for on the Fourth of July by 18 footers, one design class, to be won three times to become the property of any individual owner. The urn is a particularly handsome one and of extensive measurements, standing 7½ inches high, 7 inch bowl and 12 inches from arm to arm.

On May 27 the Columbia Yacht Club will go into commission in the afternoon, probably cruising up the river and returning to the clubhouse for a mess dinner in the evening.

The Manhassett Bay Yacht Club will inaugurate the motor-boat racing season on May 30, with a class for one design boats for which it offers a special cup. This class will be open to boats in the Knickerbocker Yacht Club.

The Sea Cliff Yacht Club will hold, on Decoration Day, a one design class race for 18 footers, for which a special prize is offered, and in which a number of new boats are expected to contest. Fourteen have already signified their intention of competing.

Nine names have been nominated for membership in the Bensonhurst Yacht Club, which will be acted upon at the club's next meeting.

Commodore Daniel G. Reid announces the appointment of B. M. Whitlock as Fleet Captain, and Dr. J. H. Irwin, Fleet Surgeon, of the Atlantic Yacht Club.

Fleet Captain Robert Harrington hoisted his flag last week when the Manhattan Island Yacht Club went into commission.

Emil Hortenbach at Morse's Yard, who knows yachts from A to Izard, had hundreds of visitors to see the Kaiser Cup boats there during the week.

MILITARY SHOW ENDS; GEN. GRANT REVIEWS

Largest Crowd of the Week Present.

SAILORS IN A RIOT DRILL

Athletic Records Broken in Quarter-Mile Run and 220-Yard Dash.

Gen. Fred Dent Grant was the reviewing officer last night at the military tournament in Madison Square Garden. The largest crowd of the week was present to greet him, and he received a grand ovation as he came on the floor accompanied by his escort, all in full dress uniform. Gen. Grant occupied one of the centre arena boxes on the south side of the Garden, and he watched all of the various exhibits of the regulars and the militia with the greatest interest. In his party were Mr. and Mrs. Bradish Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Col. and Mrs. John G. McCook, Miss McCook, Mrs. G. R. Dyer, E. R. Bacon, Col. Dravo, Col. Scriven of the Signal Corps, Gen. Hubbard, Capt. and Mrs. Satterlee. The review was commanded by Col. William A. Stokes of the Twenty-third Regiment.

Two sessions were held during the day, the feature of the matinee being a competitive drill for prizes among the students of several military schools. The judges were Col. Stokes, Twenty-third Regiment; Col. Jarvis, Eighth Regiment, and Lieut. Christie, Eighth United States Infantry. They awarded the first prize to the lads from the Mount Pleasant Academy, Ossining, who scored 95 per cent. Second honors went to the Peekskill Military Academy with 89 per cent., while St. John's College of Fordham was third with 70 per cent.

The "jackies" from the United States gunboat Alabama were present in the evening and were vociferously applauded as they gave their popular exhibit of quelling a street riot.

The athletic competitions sustained the high standard that has been set by the military athletes during the week, and three more records were broken. Two of Harry Hillman's former records were shattered, D. H. Meyer of the Seventy-fourth Regiment, Buffalo, breaking his last year's record in the quarter-mile run by one-fifth of a second, the new time being 0:53, while L. Robertson of the Thirteenth Regiment made the new time of 0:23 4-5 for the 220-yard run. O. J. Devine of the Thirteenth Regiment lowered the one-mile bicycle mark to 2:57 3-5 in one of the heats, but he failed to win the final, C. Goercke of the same regiment getting first, with Devine second.

The Thirteenth Regiment secured the point trophy for the largest number of victories in the athletic events, scoring a total of 79 points during the week. The Twenty-second Regiment came second, with 42, and the Twelfth Regiment, third, with 30. The other regiments were far down the list.

The summaries are:

Sack Race.—Won by F. M. Pierson, 22d Regiment; R. J. Wainwright, 13th Regiment, second; W. X. Flood, 22d Regiment, third. Time—0:27 3-5.

One-Mile Bicycle Race, Military Championship. —First Heat—Won by C. Ott, 12th Regiment; G. Ferden, 13th Regiment, second. Time—3:05 3-5. Second Heat—Won by O. J. Devine, 13th Regiment; H. F. Cranston, 47th Regiment, second. Time—2:57 2-5. This breaks the previous record held by G. E. Schofield, 22d Regiment, of 3:01, made in 1901. Third Heat—Won by O. Goercke, 13th Regiment; F. E. Adams, 22d Regiment, second. Time—3:06 2-5. Fourth Heat—Won by W. Van der Dries, 22d Regiment; F. Sulzer, 12th Regiment, second. Time—3:03 4-5.

Final Heat—Won by O. Goercke, 13th Regiment; O. J. Devine, 13th Regiment, second; C. Ott, 12th Regiment, third. Time—3:00 4-5.

220-Yard Run, Military Championship.—Won by L. Robertson, 13th Regiment; E. Walsh, 22d Regiment, second; S. C. Northridge, 23d Regiment, third. Time—0:23 4-5. This breaks the former record held by H. L. Hillman, Jr., 13th Regiment, of 0:24, made in 1904.

Tug of War, Final Pull, Lightweight Championship.—Won by 13th Regiment over 22d Regiment, by 3½ inches.

220-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by F. D. Riley, 8th Regiment, (14 yards;) J. J. Eller, Jr., 71st Regiment, (14 yards,) second; C. S. Clarke, 22d Regiment, (10 yards,) third. Time —0:23 2-5.

Tug of War, Final Pull, for Second Team, Heavyweight.—Won by 22d Regiment over the First Naval Battalion, by 6 inches.

Two sessions were held during the day, the matinee being a competitive drill for prizes among the students of several military schools. Twenty-third Regiment; Col. Jarvis, Eighth Regiment, and Lieut. Good performances and a large and enthusiastic crowd helped to make the meet a big success. The events were run off in quick time and the young athletes were generally a credit to their schools.

A. Ripple of Public School No. 67 was one of the stars of the evening. He won the junior 50-yard dash in clever style, and a few minutes later repeated his good work in the junior 100-yard dash. Summary:

Fifty-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by A. Ripple, P. S. 67; N. Thompson, P. S. 56, second; E. Wachter, P. S. 11, third; E. Vester, P. S. 80, fourth. Time—0:07 2-5.

Sixty-Yard Dash, Senior.—Won by G. Gschlidle, P. S. 67; James Halligan, P. S. 67, second; E. Ward, P. S. 55, third; G. Jordan, P. S. 80, fourth. Time—0:07 3-5.

LADIES' DAY ON THE HARLEM.

Fair Rowers to Man the Boats in Annual Parade.

This is Ladies' Day on the Harlem River. If the weather is agreeable all the clubs along the river expect large delegations of the fair sex, who will view the annual parade of the oarsmen from the balconies of the houses, while the other spectators have the many vantage points along the Speedway to view the procession of boats.

Every Harlem River club will be represented in the parade and besides there will be delegations from Long Island and Hoboken. The committee in charge anticipates a number of entries in the event for eight oared-barges, manned by ladies. Last year an eight from the Harlem Rowing Club carried off first honors in this event. The oarswomen were dressed in white and wore white hats. They were one of the sensations of the day and were the recipients of considerable applause because of their skill in handling the boat.

The parade will start at 2:30 from the Lenox Avenue bridge, and proceed up the river to Sherman's Creek. R. H. Stettig, Nassau Boat Club, and John Nagle, Harlem Rowing Club, will lead the division for single scullers. The event for doubles will be in charge of Constance S. Titus, Nonpareil Boat Club, and Frank Vesley, Bohemian Boat Club. The division for four-oared pigs and shells will be looked after by Edward Anderson, Dauntless Bost Club, and Herman Hertberg, Union Boat Club. John D. Breen, Wyanoke Boat Club, William Regan, Metropolitan Boat Club, and John J. O'Grady, Crescent Boat Club, will have charge of the event for ladies. Albert Heyne, Atlantic Boat Club, will head the Hoboken delegation, while Joseph Ryan, Seawankaka Boat Club, will look after the Long Island division.

YALE'S EASY VICTORY.

Princeton Beaten by Wide Margin in Dual Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—Yale beat Princeton to-day in the annual track and field meet by the score of 79½ to 24½. The only dual meet record broken was in the two-mile run, which was won by Hall of Yale in the fast time of 9:49. Summary:

100-Yard Dash.—Won by Torrey, Yale; second, Low, Yale; third, Robinson, Yale. Time—0:10.

Pole Vault.—Tie first between Lacs, Dray, Yale, and O'Brien, Yale, height, 11 feet 3 inches; third, Goodrich, Princeton.

Columbia Beats Yale at Tennis.

In a series of dual lawn tennis matches yesterday on the Columbia University courts the representatives of the Light Blue and White defeated Yale's experts, winning five matches to the latter's four. Robert Le Roy, the intercollegiate champion in the singles and the Captain of the Columbia team, met defeat by Kenneth Behr of Yale, the score being 4—6, 6—2, and 6—0. Yale's intercollegiate champions in the doubles, Bodman and Behr, were defeated by Le Roy and Bulkley of Columbia in two sets by the score of 6—3 and 6—0.

In the other singles contest Bodman, Yale, defeated Bulkley, Columbia, 8—6, 8—4; Schley, Columbia, defeated Porter, Yale, 8—6, 4—6, and 6—0; J. H. Williams, Columbia, defeated Marcus, Yale, 6—2, 12—10, and Stetson, Yale, defeated Kobbe, Columbia, 2—6, 6—4, and 6—3. The courts were somewhat heavy from the rain of the previous night, and made hard and fast play fatiguing to the collegiate experts.

Columbia Beats Crescent Second.

The Columbia University lacrosse team beat the Crescent second twelve by the score of 4 to 0 yesterday. The Crescents showed lack of practice and lost many opportunities to score. For Columbia Stewart shot two and McKinley and Hoynes one goal each. The teams lined up:

Columbia.	Positions.	Crescents 2d.
Saqui	Goal	Ford
Temple	Point	L. de Casanova
P. Baum	Cover point	Forrest
H. Baum	First defense	Nichols
Hays	Second defense	Kelley

FAST RACING MACHINES FOR VANDERBILT CUP

Entries for the Long Island Road Run Close To-morrow.

FOREIGN TEAMS FOR THE RACE

American Cars Entered Range from 38 to 90 Horse Power—Three in Gordon Bennett Race.

Entries for the Vanderbilt Cup race will close to-morrow with Robert Lee Morrell, Chairman of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association. With ten American cars already entered and complete teams of five entered from France, Germany, and Italy, the prospects of a splendid international race are assured. Indeed, the contest will be fully up to the standard of the Gordon Bennett event in France, for a number of the cars that will be seen in that event will also be competitors in the American road race.

As France has nominated for her team in the Vanderbilt race the five that finish first in the elimination trials for the Gordon Bennett contest, the three French cars that will try for the international trophy will also be seen in America. Germany will undoubtedly send over some of her cars that are entered for the foreign event, and it is quite possible that a portion, if not all, of the Italian team will be shipped across the Atlantic for the big race here in October.

The American cars now entered range from thirty-eight to ninety horse power. They have been entered by Col. A. A. Pope, Albert L. Pope, Dr. Harold E. Thomas, Col. E. H. R. Green, Lowell M. Palmer, Jr., C. W. Matheson, James L. Breese, G. A. Weidley, E. D. Shurmer, and Elwood Haynes. Two of these cars—those entered by Col. Pope and Dr. Thomas—are among the three American entrants for the Gordon Bennett race.

Alarm Among Farmer Depositors of Branch Concerns.

TO RESUME, RECEIVER SAYS

Highland Falls Bank Had $10,000 Deposits and Only $600 Was Found —Run on National Bank.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 13.—The failure of the private banking firm of A. C. Wilcox & Co. of New York City, who also had branch establishments in the villages of Montgomery, Highland Falls, and Central Valley, caused consternation throughout Orange County today. The depositors in these banks are mostly farmers, and when it became noised about that the banks would not open to-day they drove into town and gathered around the bank building. A run was started on the bank, which A. C. Wilcox & Co. started at Cornwell as a private institution, and, later, made a National bank, with A. C. Wilcox President. When the run was started a number of the heaviest depositors deposited a dollar for every dollar drawn out. This action so reassured the depositors that the run was stopped. The stockholders are investigating the bank's affairs.

At Highland Falls the depositors held a meeting and appointed George Engels, cashier of the bank, and Christian Miller a committee to bring the bank's affairs before District Attorney Seeger. The deposits in the Highland Falls bank are said to have been about $10,000. About $600 was found in the safe, with $22,000 worth of coupon bonds of uncertain value.

At Central Valley, the depositors also decided to place the matter in the District Attorney's hands. The deposits there were in the neighborhood of $25,000, and only about $1,000 was found in the safe.

Laird E. Wilcox, son of A. C. Wilcox, is cashier of the bank at Montgomery. He said that he thought the trouble was only temporary.

The success of A. C. Wilcox & Co. in getting deposits is attributed to the fact that they started banks in farming communities far away from any National bank.

ELMIRA, May 13.—Banks conducted in Painted Post and Cohocton, small towns in Steuben County, are among those interested in the failure of A. C. Wilcox & Co. John L. Kavin, Treasurer of both banks, made a statement to-day that he had a contract with the New York banking firm giving him the privilege of using the name of A. C. Wilcox & Co. for the purpose of obtaining credit, but says it specifically provides that these two banks will not be held responsible for any debts contracted by the Wilcox firm. Mr. Kavin says he is the sole owner of the two banks.

UTICA, N. Y., May 13.—Depositors in the branch bank of A. C. Wilcox & Co. of New York, at Tupper Lake, are very much disturbed to-day by the notice of suspension. It is said that a good many thousands of Tupper Lake money are deposited with the bank. All cash and books have been sent to New York.

There was little doing yesterday at the offices here of A. C. Wilcox & Co., the private banking firm at 55 Liberty Street, which assigned on Friday to its Secretary and cashier, Marcus A. Alexander. Neither Mr. Wilcox nor any of his brothers, who run the branch banking houses connected with A. C. Wilcox & Co., at Cornwall-on-Hudson, Painted Post, N. Y., and Windsor Locks, Conn., were about, and Mr. Alexander, after giving out a short statement, barred the doors of the Wilcox offices and would not even let a postman in.

The statement follows:

I have been employed by the firm selling stocks and bonds on the road, and am not in a position to talk definitely on the situation. I have wired the out-of-town branches to do no business this morning and to tell the depositors to be patient, as I am preparing a statement for them. I think that the firm will be able to resume next week some time. The cause of the assignment yesterday was due to our not having enough cash—i. e., to pay the demands of the depositors. I expect that the firm will be able to obtain the needed cash to meet its obligations and resume busines through the sale of assets on hand—i. e., bonds and securities. The North American Underwriting Company, which had its office with us, is unaffected in this matter.

Mr. Wilcox gave out a statement at his country home at New Rochelle last night. He said:

"I want to say that my assignment was not due to any stock speculation. The whole trouble was due to my failure to meet certain drafts. All of my banks are closed. We have unlisted stocks and when the drafts came in we simply couldn't clear. I know this assignment will probably wreck my business, but I want to say we intend to pay every depositor 100 cents on the dollar ultimately."

SAY LAWYER STOLE GEMS.

Byron Travers Arreated—Hotel Clerk Says He Took Wrong Grip.

Detective Sergeants Doran, Kelly, and Flannelly last night arrested Byron Travers, a lawyer, who has been living at 17 West Twenty-first Street. The warrant was issued by Judge John J. Brady of Albany, and charged the theft of jewelry valued at $5,000.

The warrant was issued on April 27, since which time the detectives have been looking for Travers. He was locked up at Headquarters, and will be arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court this morning.

Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, May 13.—Byron Travers is charged with having stolen diamonds to the value of $5,600. S. W. Glover, a diamond salesman of New York City, and the management of the New Kenmore Hotel in this city are the complainants.

The theft is said to have been committed in the hotel on April 26 last. Glover, being unable to get a room, left his valise containing the diamonds in the hotel, saying he would be back for a room later if he could get one. Travers was staying in the hotel at the time. About 5 o'clock on the morning of April 27, it is said, he went to the office and asked for his coat, umbrella, and grip, which were behind the desk. John Sloan, a new clerk of the hotel, was on duty, and says he handed to Travers his coat and umbrella, and, by mistake, Glover's grip, containing the diamonds. Travers then left the hotel, after asking when the next train left for New York City.

Sloan did not realize his mistake until Glover returned to the hotel office and asked for his grip. He was astounded when Glover informed him that the grip contained uncut diamonds to the value of $5,600.

Detectives Nolan and Wilson were assigned to the case, and ascertained that Travers had gone to New York City. He has an office at 15 William Street, New York.

Glover made a demand on the management of the hotel in this city for the value of his diamonds and, being refused, began an action at once to recover damages.

A man who said his name was Savage called at Police Headquarters later and had a lengthy talk with Mr. Travers. He said that the prisoner had lived for eight or nine months at his house in West Twenty-first Street, where he had been arrested, and that he was a corporation lawyer in this city. He said that Mr. Travers was in the habit of going to Albany and that he had been en route on the day when the alleged larceny had occurred. On that occasion he had taken no

REGULATING TRAFFIC IN TIMES SQUARE.

The biggest scheme of traffic regulation ever tried in this city has been successfully inaugurated in Times Square, and a curb has been put on the recklessness with which trucks, cabs, and particularly automobiles, formerly endangered the life and safety of pedestrians in this much traveled district. Two immense isles of safety have been established between the rope boundaries in the triangles from Forty-third Street to the Hotel Astor and from midway between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets to Forty-seventh Street.

Vehicles going north on Seventh Avenue can come only as far as Forty-first Street, when they must turn through the latter street and continue north on Broadway.

Vehicles going south on Broadway must turn into Seventh Avenue at Forty-eighth Street and continue south on Seventh Avenue.

Vehicles can move east or west through Forty-first Street, the southernmost point to which the regulations extend.

No wagon traffic at all is permissible through Forty-second Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, in the space in front of the Times Building, and as no traffic can go south on Broadway or north in Seventh Avenue at Forty-second Street, the spaces on the east side of the building in Broadway and on the west side of the building in Seventh Avenue are turned into isles of safety, making the sidewalk on these sides virtually as wide as the space from the building line to the car tracks.

No traffic is allowed through Forty-fourth Street between Seventh Avenue and Broadway, where the ropes are stretched for the lower isle of safety.

On Forty-fifth Street traffic is allowed to pass eastward only.

No traffic is permitted through Forty-sixth Street, where the ropes are stretched for the upper isle of safety.

On Forty-seventh Street vehicles can pass westward only.

On Forty-eighth Street traffic can pass east and west.

These regulations are for the hours between 6:30 A. M. and 6:30 P. M. On account of the scarcity of patrolmen, Commissioner McAdoo says it is impossible to extend the regulations to the government of the night traffic.

Fifteen patrolmen on foot, two mounted Roundsmen, and two mounted patrolmen, in charge of Sergt. McCullagh of the Traffic Squad, are detailed to this duty.

NEW YORK BROKERS "BULL" BASEBALL SCORE

Defeat Boston Stock Exchange Team by Score of 14 to 8.

FINCKE'S CLEVER PITCHING

Spectators in Grand Stand Speculate on Result, with Boston Favorite —Crowd Tips Players.

It was frenzied baseball that the brokers of the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges engaged in yesterday afternoon at American League Park. From the opening of the market—or game is perhaps the proper word—the New Yorkers ably sustained a "bull" movement in the scoring, and they held it to the close as they pushed their baseball stock up 14 points, while the Boston brokers were left with a lot of "shorts" at 8.

Before the match, which was the second annual meeting of the two teams, the outside speculative element favored the Boston stock. The first bets were at par, but soon the Boston stock began to rise, due, so Capt. "Bob" Wrenn of the New Yorks said, to a tip advertisement signed by Thomas W. Lawson advising investors to acquire all the Boston end of the deal up to odds of 50 to 40 that were offered. There was plenty of the Boston stock offered with but few takers, as it was known that the "Hub" Exchange had a nine in the field that was composed of the flower of the Harvard veterans.

For an hour before the bull and bear movement began on the diamond a crowd of nearly 10,000 brokers, investors, and others interested in Wall Street affairs poured into the stands about the field. Over in one corner of the grand stand the Seventh Regiment Band interspersed the favorite rag time of Broadway with classical selections for those from Boston.

It was as thoroughly a democratic a crowd as was ever gathered about a diamond, and the millionaire promoters rubbed shoulders with the office boys. The more active brokers freely tipped the players, with the aid of megaphones, as to what was the proper course to pursue in order to push their respective stocks up a few points. They played the market for all it was worth while it lasted, and were jovially good-natured at its close.

There were two elements which contributed to the successful bull movement of the New York stock—the able pitching of Reginald Fincke, an old Harvard star, and the forceful batting of First Baseman Freeland and also his faultless playing in his position. For the first three innings Fincke did not allow the Boston "bears" to make a hit, but when he tired in the fourth inning, they created a panic in the market by raiding him for bases on balls so that four men crossed the plate and tied the score. But this was the only really successful attempt that the Boston brokers were able to carry out. In the sixth inning the visitors put Hayes in the box to try to stem the tide of prosperity that was raising the New York stock to higher and higher figures. Hayes, however, was only able to hold the "bull" side steady for two innings, and then he also became a victim of the upward tendency and everything on the New York list went up with a rush.

Boston was the first at bat and retired on fly balls to the outfield, all of which were well caught. Then the New Yorks took their turn, and "Bob" Wrenn made the first run, as Paine forced him home by filling the bases on balls. Freeland went into the market for "get-rich-quick" returns in the third inning. He lined out the ball for a three-bagger. It might have been made a home run, only Freeland's 220 pounds refused to run any further than third base, and he slid into that.

The raid of the Bostons in the fourth time at the hands of the local brokers. The score:

WILL LAND AT MODEL PIER.

Hudson River Day Line Celebrates Change with a Sail.

In view of the fact that the trend of business is up town, the Hudson River Day Line has discontinued its landing at West Twenty-second Street and will use the new pier at West Forty-second Street. This is 800 fet long and 50 feet wide, has pleasant waiting quarters for passengers in the hot weather, and above the pier is to be a roof garden with a model restaurant. In addition to the Hudson River Day Line boats the steamer Mary Powell and the Sandy Hook flyers will use the pier for landings and departures.

To celebrate the new place of landing, the Hudson River Day Line yesterday afternoon took a large number of guests for a sail on the steamer Albany to the Hudson Memorial Bridge, Spuyten Duyvil, and then returned to Forty-second Street. The Albany exchanged salutes with all the river craft she passed.

Among those who made the trip were F. L. Sheppard, General Superintendent Pennsylvania Railroad; A. P. Boller, architect of the Hudson Tunnel; O. F. Nichols, Chief Engineer of the Department of Bridges; O. H. Yaylor, General Passenger Agent of the Fall River Line; E. Lincoln Rogers, architect of the Forty-second Street pier; Charles M. Englis, President of the Citizens' Line; M. C. Roach, Assistant General Passenger Agent of the New York Central; Prof. Fitzgerald Tisdall and Prof. A. G. Compton of the College of the City of New York, Prof. H. F. Munroe of Columbia University, Howard M. Smith, General Passenger Agent of the Long Island Railroad, and A. J. Gillingham, Auditor of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

LOVING CUP FOR WARBURG.

Fellow-Directors of Educational Alliance Dine Him.

Directors of the Educational Alliance gave a luncheon in honor of Felix M. Warburg yesterday afternoon in a private parlor of the Hotel Savoy, at which they took occasion to present the guest with a silver loving cup. The Directors learned only two days ago that Mr. Warburg was soon to start for Europe, so the dinner was hastily planned, but it had been the feeling of the Directors of the Educational Alliance for some time that they wanted to show their appreciation of the exceptional services to the institution on the part of Mr. Warburg. The loving cup was modeled on the pattern of one of the graceful long-necked Grecian vases and bore on one side Mr. Warburg's monogram and on the other this inscription:

Incribed to Felix M. Warburg with loving regard from his co-Directors in the Educational Alliance.
May 13, 1905.
Bon voyage.

Mr. Warburg is the Honorary Secretary of the institution, and has been one of

62 KILLED BY AUTOS, 793 HURT, SINCE JAN. 1

Give Magistrates Full Power, Says Cornell.

AUTOIST BLAMES CHAUFFEURS

Secretary of Automobile Club Says That Drivers Are Careless When Owners Are Not in Machines.

Somebody interested has taken pains to compile the information that sixty-two persons have been killed and 793 injured by overspeeding automobiles in this country since January. S. M. Butler, Secretary of the Automobile Club of America, says he believes these figures are excessive. Magistrate Cornell does not think they are. Asked for his opinion about remedying such a state of affairs, Magistrate Cornell said:

"Give the Magistrates absolute power in punishing automobilists who violate the speeding laws. There is a general impression that Magistrates now have the power to punish these offenders. Such is not the case, except where they are caught speeding in Central Park, and comparatively few brought before us are of this class. They give vent to their madness for speed in the public highways and run over helpless people. In such cases Magistrates have no alternative but to commit the offenders for the Special Sessions. There, as experience proves, they are generally dismissed with a fine.

"Another important thing is that when the owner of the automobile is in the machine when the chauffeur is arrested, he should be punished instead of the chauffeur. As it is, the owner, if he is in the car, simply rides to the police station with the chauffeur, gives bail for him, pays the fine, and the matter is disposed of. I would make the punishment imprisonment instead of fine, when the seriousness of the offense warranted it. To some rich men who are arrested over and over again a nominal fine is nothing. It does not make them any more careful."

"The man to get at in preventing accidents is the chauffeur," said Secretary Butler. "In the majority of instances, when the owner is aboard the car, he keeps his chauffeur within bounds. There are exceptions, but you will find the same exceptions in arrests for fast road driving. The majority of owners of automobiles know that other persons have rights in the highways and do their best to respect them. But when a chauffeur is alone in the car he is apt to be careless and go the limit. He knows the owner is bound to pay the fine, anyway, and he doesn't care what he does.

"The Automobile Club has requested its members and other owners of automobiles to refuse to pay the fines of their chauffeurs if arrested when they are not in the machine. If an owner is in the machine he should stand for the arrest and not the chauffeur. But if the chauffeur is arrested when alone he should stand the fine himself. That would make him more careful. After two fines, if he still persisted in speeding, his license should be revoked. Then his livelihood is at stake. This is the position the Automobile Club has taken.

"Since this season began, say since March, accidents have undoubtedly been more numerous than ever before. But the number of machines has increased at least one-third over those licensed last year. There are fully 5,000 automobiles of one kind and another running about the highways of New York this Spring. Manufacturers report to us that their stock supply has run out, and that they cannot fill immediate orders.

"Besides, the road policemen make unnecessary arrests to 'make good.' One

CHILLY DAMP SPOILS CONEY SEASON'S BOW

Dreamland and Luna Park Brighter Than Ever.

FIRST NIGHT CROWD SCANT

Frankfurter Men Have Big Left-Over Stocks—Bonavita, Minus an Arm, Proves Great Attraction.

It would be good to tell of last night's Coney Island crowds in superlative terms, but the truth will out; the opening of the festive isle was an occasion of the chilliest variety. It was not the fault of either Luna Park or Dreamland, for they provided attractions so gorgeous that no press agent could adequately describe them. The blame is all on the weather, for rain fell slowly all the evening, and a mist which even the myriads of electric lights could not dispel hung over the scene like a pall.

The frankfurter man—the trade-mark of Coney Island—hawked his wares with unabated zeal. The ducks and bouncing balls were there to be shot at, the "take-your-picture-in-a-second" man besought customers with pitiful tones, and the man who guesses weights sought with an engaging smile to capture your nickel. In fact, there wasn't anything lacking in the way of attractions—the trouble lay in the lack of spectators.

Adjectives for the wonderful sights of Luna Park and Dreamland were exhausted last year, and the press agents will now have to get busy finding new terms of eulogy for the new features. Dreamland's big hippodrome and Luna Park's open-air, mid-air circus went on display for the first time. "General Bumps," though a warm favorite comparatively, is worn no smoother now than it was last year, and "Down and Out," across Surf Avenue, was only a crooked streak of emptiness and desolation.

Bostock's Animal Show seemed to be lucky, perhaps because the on-armed Bonavita there appeared with his hungry lion, Baltimore. Mme. Norelli showed how much pleased she was to put her face in the leopards' mouths, and played with the beasts as if it were the only joy of her life. Bonavita, who has just come from Paris, where he had his arm amputated, was received with great applause.

The animal population of Bostock's increased last night by five members—which are new little leopards. Mother Leopard did not take part in the Norelli performances as usual. When morning came she was licking her new children and was reported by the press agent to be doing well.

Something that wasn't there last year is the Flea Theatre. It is in the Midget City. Mr. Stewart, who is the owner and trainer of the fleas, has taught them to do pretty nearly everything. When they do their tricks he explains to the spectators how he instructed them.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "you see these six well-formed and graceful fleas drawing this hansom up and down the table. And you will notice that Jack, the driver of the hansom, handles the reins and whip with the air of a connoisseur. See how he drives his fellows. They used to refuse to act so peaceably, but I made them jump and jump till they couldn't jump any more, and then they were so tired they had to walk. After that it wasn't hard to harness them up and teach them to do my wishes."

Another change that has been made since last Summer is in the fountain which disports itself in the middle of Luna Park. It was there last year, and was pretty, but one of its charms has been multiplied by ten during the Winter months. The crowd couldn't really appreciate it last night, for water has nothing in it when it is such weather.

In everything except numbers the Coney Island crowd was about like it always was and always will be. There were fat men who almost put the weighing scales out of commission; women with broods of tots clinging to their skirts and crying to get into the airships; gay couples from Houston Street, from Broadway, from Harlem, from Jersey—from everywhere. If one had not seen Coney Island on some day when there was really a crowd, he might have thought last night's showing respectable. But they do things in a big way at Coney, and when the visitors do not number fifty or sixty thousand the inhabitants think it is a dull day.

Surf Avenue, which is commonly impassable on a Saturday or Sunday, had no more room on it last night than does Fifth Avenue or Broadway any time. The women all wore closely buttoned jackets and the men wore raincoats and overcoats. Frankfurters lay in dismal piles on the deserted counters. As the night wore on the faces of the venders increased in length, and their eyes drooped sadly.

But it was a bad day for the ever-interesting barkers. Of course, they didn't let up for the weather—barkers never let up for anything less than an earthquake, and then they resent the interruption. Cry as they might, expostulate, beckon, and boast as they did, there was little doing. They may have got all the trade there was, but that was nothing to boast about.

In Luna Park three of the shows which are to be chief features of the show this Summer are not yet open to business. The Igorrote Village, the Dragon's Cave, and Fall of Port Arthur have not been completed. The first two will be in operation next Saturday night, but the last is still further behind.

On the Dreamland Hippodrome there will be chariot races, Wild West sports, regular horse races, and Roman races. Dreamland's biggest attraction, "Fighting the Flames," has been built all over again, and is on a much more elaborate scale than last year. The nerves were not ready to be jumped into last night, but the frightened women in the burning house accomplished some perilous slides down ropes and the crowd had nothing to complain of.

"Fire and Flames" at Luna Park is about the same sort of exhibition. Other Luna Park shows which are still operating are "The Miniature Railway," "The Old Mill," "The Trip to the Moon," and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." In Dreamland the principal attractions are "The Foolish House," "The Japanese Theatre," "The Dog and Monkey Circus," "The Canals of Venice," "Creation" will start later.

The restaurants connected with the two great amusement parks presented sad spectacles last night. Gloomy, uniipped, they stood around with arms folded, striking Napoleonic attitudes for amusement. Everybody that wanted to eat had to choose between some six or seven lip-hungry waiters that flew at him as if to rend him into pieces. The big ballrooms in Dreamland and Luna Park could have accommodated probably fifty times as many couples as desired to dance thereon.

But the press agents and managers are not worrying about the opening night. They know they'll make it all back on the first clear day, and that everybody that would have gone last night will get there sooner or later. All the gorgeousness and glory are there; good weather is bound to come.

North Beach Opens To-day.

Several improvements will mark the beginning of the Summer season at North Beach to-day. The Gala Park has been reconstructed into a floral park. Another feature is the Giggling Gardens. The swimming pool has been thoroughly overhauled and the chutes have also undergone reconstruction. The zoo from Paris is expected to arrive in June, and beginning this week there will be special fireworks displays every Thursday. The boats leaving foot of Ninety-ninth Street and East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street have all been reinspected.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE'S BILL DISPLEASES RAINES

Does Not Think Gov. Higgins Will Sign It.

HAS MEASURE OF HIS OWN

This Forfeits Hotel Keeper's Certificate on Conviction of Maintaining a Disorderly Resort.

Senator Raines, the President pro tem. of the Senate, yesterday expressed the opinion that the Ambler Excise bill will not be signed for the reason that the legal advisers of Gov. Higgins think it unconstitutional. The Ambler bill provides that if an Inspector of the Health, Building, or Fire Department shall make affidavit that a Raines law hotel does not comply with the regulations of one of those departments the license of the proprietor shall be forfeited.

The bill was passed largely through the influence of the Anti-Saloon League, which was incensed because of the failure of Senator Raines to put through his bill on the same subject in time to affect the issue of licenses for the coming year. The Raines bill provides that all Raines law hotels must comply with the provisions of the Building, Health, and Fire Departments, but as it was not passed until after May 1, owing to an amendment which Senator Raines insisted upon, it would not affect the licenses taken out for the ensuing year, all of which were issued as of the date of May 1.

"In my judgment," said Senator Raines yesterday, "the Ambler bill is clearly unconstitutional, and I do not expect it to be signed. The courts have held that a tax certificate is property, and a law permitting the confiscation of property on the mere affidavit of an Inspector would not be upheld by the courts, in my opinion.

"But while the Ambler bill is not likely to affect the excise situation in the city, there were two excise bills passed by the Legislature which apparently have been lost sight of in the discussion of excise, but which I think will have a very material bearing upon the conduct of "fake" hotels in this city. One of the bills was introduced by me and the other by Senator Lewis. My bill provides that when a man pleads guilty to conducting a disorderly resort or is convicted of that offense that then his certificate shall be forfeited under the provision of the Raines law which makes the orderly conduct of a place a condition upon which the license is granted.

"Senator Lewis's bill is a companion measure to mine, and provides that a liquor tax certificate may not be transferred. Heretofore when the proprietor of a disorderly place was convicted he could transfer his license to his barkeeper or one of his relatives, and thus evade the purpose of the law. If my bill and that of Senator Lewis are signed by Gov. Higgins the practice of transferring liquor tax certificates for places proved to be disorderly will be brought to an end."

The Anti-Saloon League has a mass of evidence to submit to Gov. Higgins in support of the Ambler bill. The league hired men to visit Raines law hotels for the purpose of ascertaining the character of the places, and the affidavits which they submitted to the league showed that disgraceful conditions existed.

"If those people saw all the sights they claimed to have seen in Raines law hotels," said Senator Raines, "I do not see why they did not complain to the proper authorities. Do they think that the laws are self-executing?"

RAINES SAYS HE'S AMUSED.

Denies Sincerity of Tammany Statements on Gas Vote.

Senator Raines, majority leader of the Senate, who conducted the gas fight for the Republicans, expressed himself yesterday as amused by the declarations which some of the Tammany Senators have been making in explanation of their action in voting against the 80-cent gas bill.

"My belief is that there was a very thorough understanding among the minority on the gas question," said Senator Raines. "If we had needed three votes from the Democrats we would have mustered but two, and if we had needed two only one would have been delivered to us.

"If the Democrats really wanted a cheap gas bill of their own making they could have taken up the Fitzgerald bill on the last day of the session. It was on the calendar and had been engrossed. But instead of moving to take up his measure Senator Fitzgerald got excused

JAPANESE RESIDENTS ORGANIZE SOCIAL CLUB

House Will Be Fitted in American and Oriental Styles.

MENU TO BE THAT OF NIPPON

President of New Body Says Members Plan to Return Hospitality Which They Have Received.

Leading Japanese residents of New York yesterday organized the Nippon Club, which will occupy a handsome house at 44 West Eighty-fifth Stret, now a private residence. Yesterday's meeting was attended by about seventy-five prominent Japanese.

The Nippon Club will be the only large organization of its kind outside Japan. The membership will include Japanese bankers and merchants, those represented in the professions and the Government service.

Dr. Jokichi Takamine, who was chosen President of the club, is a well known scientist, whose work has received marked attention both at home and abroad. Several of his inventions have been successfully used in hospital work in the war with Russia. Dr. Takamine yesterday received from the Engineering Society of Japan a gold medal, the first to be awarded to any member of that society. The other officers of the club are R. Arai, Vice President; T. Hayashi, Secretary, and K. Imanishi, of the New York branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Treasurer.

In point of furnishings the Nippon clubhouse will be finely equipped. While the American style will prevail a Japanese atmosphere will be maintained by handsome bronzes, teakwood tables, and exquisite Japanese silks, hangings, and bric-a-brac.

One room will be set apart as the Japanese room or sitting room on the second floor. It will be fitted with characteristic Japanese tokomomas, or mantel pieces with dainty silk Japanese shoji, or panels, and the sliding doors and windows will be in the Fusuma style. The decoration will be done by expert Japanese artists. Rich Japanese silks and embroideries will be used in all the furnishings.

Besides the quaint and richly decorated rooms there will be the additional attraction of a complete Japanese menu, such as is served only in the houses of Japan's aristocracy. A Japanese chef, experienced in the mysteries of Japanese delicacies, will be imported to preside over the culinary department of the club. Most of the food will be brought from Japan, including such delicacies as fried mushrooms, bamboo shoots, chicory, Japanese fish, rice, Glokuro coffee, sake-rui, Japanese cocktails, and chrysanthemum mammune.

The present membership of the club is seventy-five. It will be limited to 200. The club's housewarming will take place some time in June.

In speaking of the new club Dr. Takamine said:

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Last week was stormier than the net price movement reveals. The earlier days were depressed by foreign troubles, which caused or excused a flurry in "Americans" in London. England—or, at least, The London Times—upon Japan's behalf, protested to France against excessive hospitality to the Russian squadron on its leisurely way to Vladivostok, and the dealer in "Americans," with a $300,000 account in a Mexican railway and no assets, took advantage of the opportunity to fail. Naturally the London market was soft, and realized upon Americans, recognized as such in New York. Then came the iron report showing an accumulation of stocks, and there was reported a softer market for iron as well as for securities. The gloom was relieved by the Government crop report, which, however, fell rather flat. The good in it was anticipated, and the trifling amount of bad in it received disproportionate attention. These topics are discussed more fully below. In this paragraph regarding the market movement it is sufficient to say that at the week end prices turned upward, for reasons convincing to market experts, but which would hardly be offered to a banker considering a loan as establishing the value of the proffered collateral. Not that there was any lack of intrinsically encouraging intelligence, both general and specific. Upon the contrary, there was a superfluity and an irritating neglect of it. The gross railway earnings for March, for instance, were reported as aggregating an average per mile of $904 this year, against $855 last year, and $882 for 1903. Of 86 roads reporting March net earnings, not one reports a large decrease, while Pennsylvania leads the increases with $552,900. The commercial agencies also reported all well in their departments, but the banks reported an increase of only 31 per cent. over last year's clearings. The increases have been running somewhat larger, it will be remembered.

But these considerations had nothing to do with the rise. The market advanced simply because it had fallen and a change was due. The bulls the other day had a panic of a sort when prices had advanced too continuously. Now the bears have a little flutter because the fall has been overdone. Just as soon as the astute remarked cessation of selling they began buying cautiously, and extended their lines as they discovered that the upturn did not encourage profit taking. A scarcity of stocks was soon disclosed, and at once the Exchange was flooded with renewal of dividend and harmony talk. Presto change! Everybody forgot that a few hours ago the bears were gloating in anticipation of revelation of some local bankruptcy, and that stocks had been marked down because the prices in May's first week were an excessive discounting of prosperity, and had been reached only by flagitious circulation of stories designed to induce "suckers"—that is the objectionable word used in the best circles—to pay more for stocks than they were worth. Now these same authorities for the most part are saying that prices having fallen, they may rise again. Why, of course. Wall Street is not a debating society upon academic questions of intrinsic worth. It is a big auction, and the arguments which control prices are good until a smart errand boy can get a check certified—but he must hurry.

Of the week's news none was more important than the Government report upon the Winter wheat crop. The April report was so good that it was commonly said it marked the best which could be realized, and stocks were actually sold upon the argument that deterioration was to be expected. But instead of deterioration there has come unexpected improvement in condition, accompanied, it must be admitted, by an equally unexpected loss of acreage. The result is that there is a loss of 19,000,000 bushels, comparing the prospect now and a month ago, and a gain of 100,000,000 bushels, comparing with a year ago. If comparison is made with last year's harvest, the increase indicated is 147,000,000 bushels, the prospect now being for a crop exceeding the largest, in 1901. There is precedent for maintenance of conditions right through the season to its close. There is even precedent for improvement until the actual harvest. Therefore it is not necessary to conclude that conditions must deteriorate. Other interesting inferences are deducible from the facts of the past, which may be thus tabulated:

WINTER WHEAT CONDITION.

	April.	May.	June.	July.	Harvest.
1901.....	96.9	97.9	96.6	96.2	96.7
1902.....	81.2	84.0	88.3	89.6	87.6
1903.....	96.7	96.3	90.8	85.7	86.7
1904.....	91.7	94.1	87.8	88.3	82.8
1905.....	91.6	92.5	....	....	....

Years like 1891 or 1898 would give a record yield! An experience like that of 1892 would surpass the record. The year 1901 is added because it is the record, and starts, like this year, by showing improvement in May, followed by considerable deterioration in later months. Thus this year's condition could fall off 10 points and yet be equal to the condition upon which 658,834,501 bushels were realized four years ago. But it must be remembered that the condition of 1901 would odds are against the pessimists. When the report was made on April 1 they declared it impossibly good, and demanded that the better States should be marked down to the worse. The fact is that the worse States have been marked up to the better. Perhaps this year will be the exception which proves the rule of deterioration with the season's progress.

The quivering in the iron trade calls for mention in the second place, and is discussed more in detail elsewhere than is feasible here. Students of price movements applying their theories to the movement of production, consumption, and stocks, detect or think they detect the apex of the boom. They expect rallies, but they also expect that each reaction will leave conditions a little lower down from the top. This is rather a large inference from so small a matter relatively as an increase of stocks by 17,392 tons. In each of the months of May, June, and July last there was a larger increase of stock to an aggregate of 225,000 tons, only to be followed by successive decreases in every subsequent month until now. Nobody would have credited then that production would have increased to 2,000,000 tons monthly without making a larger accumulation than has been experienced. The fact is that the gain of stocks has been made rather by the expansion of production than by the decrease of consumption. Stocks were lowest in February. Since then production has increased 130,000 tons, and consumption increased 87,000. Both are worth noting, but the production has increased by leaps and bounds, while the consumption continues at a rate decreased, indeed, on a monthly comparison, but remains adequate to indicate a state of industrial activity without precedent. This rather than the precise amount of iron in stock is the main point. If the level of consumption is maintained the excess of production will be controlled, naturally or artificially. Increases of stocks due to stagnation of general industry, and increases of stocks due to excess of activity in the iron trade are as much alike as smallpox and chicken pox. The course of events will show which is which. At present it can be said only that consumption, considered by itself, is satisfactory, being larger now than in fifteen of the last sixteen months. Last year consumption of stock from merchant furnaces showed, as in this year, a sudden expansion in March and a contraction in April, but this April's contraction leaves consumption 81,000 tons above April, 1904. Still those resolved upon it may be left to find what comfort they can in an increase of stocks by a little more than one-fifth of the growth of consumption in the twelvemonth. Now, if the growth of stocks had been 81,000 tons, and the growth of consumption had become a significant decrease, it would have been another story.

Not to be neglected is the liveliness imparted to current events by the reappearance of President Roosevelt. He takes up the rate question just where he dropped it, not perceiving that much water has flowed under the bridge since then. If railway rates were made "purely by exercise of Executive functions"—as Panama Canal Commissions are appointed—why, then our troubles would be over. There would be no more competition of the Gulf route against the Atlantic route, for example, but there would be established by Executive order a maximum rate, which every railway could charge, and which necessarily no shipper could protest against. Instead of the reign of economic law, imposing constant cheapening of transportation, we should have a crystallization of rates on a higher scale than the railways dare make for themselves. There are plenty of cases where railways carry traffic for less than any court would allow either President or Congress to enforce. All such rates would be promptly marked up to the legal maximum, which would be also a legal minimum, when all railways are operated under one Federal law. It is true that the railways would prefer to go on as now, making the world's cheapest rates. It is true that shippers would not be benefited by doing business by statute instead of by commercial arrangement. It is true that foreign experts have testified that Governmental regulation works badly abroad. It is true that this is only a little of the truth. Still "no compromise will be accepted from Congress." The matter is settled—in Mr. Roosevelt's mind.

EDWARD A. BRADFORD.

HOW OUR MARKET LOOKS IN BALTIMORE.

The New York market has been subjected to wild selling and fluctuation. Several of the leading stocks recorded a decline of 5 per cent. or more in a single day. As usual, when the market was in a semi-panicky condition, the advice from Wall Street was of the most alarming nature, and rumors were started as to the solvency of individuals and institutions, and the most direful predictions were made.

We have often noticed, and it has been to us a matter of great surprise, that the advices which are received from Wall Street brokerage houses are as a rule most unsatisfactory and not to be depended upon. It seems to us that opinions at New York are formed entirely from the quotations which roll off the tape, and that no consideration is given

NEW AND OLD BOND FORMS

Selling Unsecured Issues at First Mortgage Rates.

ULTIMATE EFFECT UPON CREDIT

Varying Terms of Securities Recently Offered to Investors—Atchison and Western Pacific Flotations.

Through the extensive use of the short-term obligations that were floated in such quantities two years ago, and intermittently even up to the present date, investors were familiarized with a not altogether new but theretofore unfamiliar form of security. They have recently been asked to subscribe to another class of security in some respects unique inasmuch as in it were sought to be combined seemingly conflicting terms. The Pennsylvania Railroad in offering to its subscribers $100,000,000 of 3½ per cent. convertible bonds endeavored to sell a bond carrying a rate of interest which would usually entitle only a first mortgage bond of the highest grade to sell at par, and at the same time a bond that is a mortgage on nothing except the fair name of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Undoubtedly that is good security, and were proof needed of the fact it could be found in the willingness of bankers to underwrite the whole issue at 97½. At the same time it is not surprising that the stockholders viewing the issue solely from an investor's standpoint should have shown so little willingness to advance money on the terms offered. The suggestions made at the time the issue was announced that no effort would be made to make the issue look attractive, and that the underwriters for reasons of their own desired to secure the bonds, found an echo this past week in the assertions that the management of the railroad itself did not expect the stockholders to profit by the chance offered to them to subscribe to the new issue, and was in fact in no wise desirous that they should subscribe, it being part of the plan that the bonds should go to the underwriters. Such suggestions if well founded, as they probably are not, would scarcely reflect credit on the management of the property. To purposely fix terms for a new issue which the management felt sure would be unacceptable to the stockholders would not be maintaining the standard which heretofore has governed the management of the Pennsylvania in its relations with the stockholders of the company. The fairer view is that the management sought merely to secure the needed funds on the best terms possible, whether from the stockholders themselves or from others.

The somewhat unusual character of this bond issue adds interest to a comparison of the form of some of the issues which have recently been offered to investors or underwritten by bankers. In the case of the Pennsylvania issue itself it appears to be generally conceded that the price at which the underwriters agreed to take the bonds was warranted only on the ground that they are in effect a ten-year call on Pennsylvania stock at 150, and as such were worth the price paid for them. The case is one that raises the whole question of the desirability of convertible bond issues. In general the attitude of buyers of such issues is partly, at least, that of the speculator. Disregarding the convertible privilege, the value of which lies in the probability of the company's stock advancing above the price of conversion, the investor is confronted with an offer of bonds that pay a very low rate considering the security offered by the bond. On the other hand, it can be argued that if 4 per cent. be considered a fair yield on a bond of the class of the recent Pennsylvania issue the difference between the price at which the bond would yield that rate and the price at which it has been secured by the underwriters, namely, 97½, is only 1½ per cent. or a shade above that figure. Doubtless 1½ per cent. for a ten-year call on Pennsylvania only fifteen points above the market is a low price indeed. Certainly a maker of privileges in the stock market would be disinclined to accept such small compensation for a similar privilege. But dealing in calls is universally recognized as speculation pure and simple except in so far as they may be purchased as a protection against loss from an opposite position in the stock market. It is not strange, therefore, that investors should be inclined to pay little attention to the convertible privilege once the point is past at which the bond shows a fair return on the price paid, irrespective of the convertible privilege.

The recent Atchison issue is another example of the convertible bond. By some it is favored more than the Pennsylvania issue, as its terms are more liberal. The market reflects this view, for the Atchison bonds have all along commanded a premium, whereas the Pennsylvania bonds are unsteadily quoted at the price at which they were offered to the stockholders and have sold as much as three-quarters of a point below that price. The Atchison bonds pay 4 per cent. as contrasted with the Pennsylvania 3½ per cent. rate, and the call on the stock runs for twelve instead of for ten years. The price of conversion is in both cases about as much above the present market, fifteen points. Both issues are subject to call, but the Atchison bonds if so called are redeemable at 110, whereas the Pennsylvania issue can be paid off at par. The privilege given in each case of converting the bonds into stock if called for redemption, of course limits the advantages of the convertibility of the bond. In the Atchison issue this is offset by the 10 per cent. premium to be paid if the bonds are called by the company. The Pennsylvania issue offers no such compensation. A further point against the latter issue is that there are outstanding other convertible bonds of the Pennsylvania, which can be exchanged for stock at 140 instead of the price of 150 fixed for the present bonds, and the former, moreover, if called, are redeemable at 102½ instead of at par.

It would appear from one point of view that the more that can be said against the Pennsylvania bond from the investor's standpoint the greater is the proof afforded by the issue of the credit enjoyed by the Pennsylvania. Undoubtedly its most recent issue is governed by terms which if offered by a system that had poorer credit than the Pennsylvania would make the bonds unsalable not only to

"WHEN ISSUED" CONTRACTS.

Barred by Stock Exchange Because of Numerous Disputes—Latest Controversy Over Seaboard Stocks.

Conflict of interests seems probable in the settlement of the outstanding contracts in the new Seaboard Air Line stocks, which since the close of last year have been dealt in "when issued." The change in the plan of reorganization of the Seaboard Air Line announced last week offers an excuse to those who have traded unfortunately in these new stocks to claim that the "when issued" transactions in the stocks will not stand, for the reason that the plan as originally announced has been abandoned and a new plan substituted. In this particular case the claim is only a technical one, since, although altered in some respects, the present plan differs from the original plan only in minor details. What in effect has been done is to change the legal form of the proposed new company from one the adoption of which required the consent of practically every share of stock of the old company to a form that can be made operative by the consent of a majority of the old stock.

Only a small minority stood out against the other plan, and already a substantial majority of the stock has assented to the new plan Under the modification the sums to be subscribed, and practically every other important detail are identical with those proposed in the original plan, and therefore the past transactions in the new securities may well be considered as still in effect. But the point undoubtedly is a disputed one, and unfortunately there is no authority in the premises competent to make a decision in the matter. If the transactions are as a matter of fact abandoned a good many thousands of dollars will be lost to those who have traded back and forth at a profit. On the other hand such an outcome would likewise cancel any prospective losses by those who had traded ill advisedly.

The case is one that emphasizes the difficulties which frequently attend "when issued" trading in securities. Formerly when such securities were the outcome of reorganizations of properties the stocks of which were listed on the Stock Exchange, trading in them was regularly conducted on the board, but it was found that such transactions were so fruitful of disputes that the Stock Exchange has not barred permanently all "when issued" transactions. The usual form of the contract covering such transactions is that the securities are to be delivered and accepted "if, when and as issued." This simple phrase has in the past been the cause of no end of trouble in Wall Street, and disputes concerning its exact meaning which arose several years ago are still pending in the courts. Varying interpretations of the words have caused Stock Exchange houses to take conflicting positions in the matter of such transactions which have in some cases led to the disciplining of houses by the Stock Exchange for what were considered tricky operations. The significance of the "if" in the phrase is plain enough, but there agreement as to its meaning ceases.

The "when" has been interpreted in no end of ways, although custom in Wall Street among all houses that do not stand too much on technicalities is to allow considerable latitude in the matter of deliveries of when issued securities. The "as" is also variously understood. It is the exact meaning of this word that has bearing on the transactions in the Seaboard Air Line stocks. In a broad sense of the word the modification of the Seaboard plan would not affect the "when issued" transactions in the new stocks. But if the "as" refers only, for example, to the form of the certificate, and not to the nature of the security, then it might be held that the new stocks of the Seaboard to be issued under the modified plan are not what was bargained for in these transactions, but another issue altogether. It remains to be seen which view of the case will prevail, or whether, in the interest of harmony, a middle ground will be found that will give neither side all it claims, but which will nevertheless be a fair compromise. The latter course was pursued in the similar controversy that arose over the "when released" transactions in Great Northern preferred and in Northern Pacific. In that case at the instance of a prominent Stock Exchange house a middle course was pursued, which worked smoothly, even though necessarily disappointing to a great many. The settlement of that controversy with so little friction, or rather without any friction at all, was the more remarkable for the reason that the money at stake amounted in the aggregate to tens of thousands of dollars.

BOND SALES FOR APRIL.

According to the figures which have passed under the review of the "United States Investor," the bond sales for the month of April amounted to $46,215,266, not including temporary loans. Of this amount $44,696,196 were issued by cities and towns (including $8,408,600 by the

NO TURN IN IRON MARKET

Last Month's Accumulation an Insignificant Affair.

DEMAND STILL ACTIVE

Increase in Orders from Railroads—Steel Corporation's New Billet Mills.

A great deal of publicity was given last week to the statement made by a trade paper to the effect that at the end of last month statistics showed a matter of 17,000 tons of pig iron had accumulated at merchant furnaces, i. e., at furnaces manufacturing this product for sale. It was suggested that this failure to consume the entire production indicated a slackening of the iron trade and that the top of the market in this commodity had been seen. Inquiry among high authorities in the steel and iron business reveals the fact that this accumulation is infinitesimal compared with the production, and that it does by no means prove that a turn in the iron and steel business has come.

First of all the statement is made that since the great demand for pig iron at $15 a ton has existed innumerable small furnaces have been started up and the production has thus been increased right up to the limit of capacity. These small furnaces cannot operate profitably except in times of an extraordinary demand at high prices and with the slightest slackening of the demand they would be forced to close down, thus relieving automatically the force of production, which last month increased more rapidly than did the demand, although the latter also showed an increase. In other words, the accumulation was not due so much to a slackening of the demand as to an increase in the supply.

Secondly, the amount of surplus—17,000 tons—is so small compared with the total production that it cannot be taken as a basis for any argument either way, even though it be the first time for some months that any surplusage in the supply had existed. The United States Steel Corporation, for instance, manufactures 12,000,000 tons of pig iron a year, or 40,000 tons a day. The 17,000 tons would therefore represent only about half a day's production of this company alone. Per contra the consumption of the United States Steel Corporation is at about the same rate of 40,000 tons a day. The corporation now has only about 180,000 tons on hand, or a four days' supply.

In explaining his view of the situation a prominent official of the Steel Corporation said the other day that he could not see a speck on the horizon.

"There is always," he said, "a slackening of bookings at this time which the records show generally continues for some three months. This is due to the fact that the consumer has filled his wants for the immediate future and waits for further developments. This year the falling off has been less than ever before. Then although bookings have fallen off slightly it must be remembered that we have been booking above our capacity, and the fact that bookings are now slightly below capacity does not remove the necessity of our working full time for the rest of the year. Again, it is a fact that the railroads were not giving many orders during the time that our bookings were so heavy. Now orders from the railroads are coming in and the rail, structural, steel, and plate business is therefore as active as possible. As an illustration I may cite the fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad has given us an additional order for 35,000 tons of rails. This road had a contract for 101,000 tons of rails with the privilege of canceling ten per cent. of the order if it chose. It has now notified us that it will not take advantage of the privilege and instead has ordered additional tonnage."

As offsetting to a large extent the increased production of pig iron the announcement is made that the Steel Corporation proposes to build additional mills for the manufacture of billets. These will be located in the Youngstown district and will be finished within the year. Their increased capacity for the consumption of pig iron will, it is likely, take care of a considerable increase in the production, which is now believed to have reached the maximum of the capacity of existing blast furnaces. On the whole the statement may be made on the best authority that the steel and iron business is in excellent shape, that while in some lines prompt deliveries can be made, yet in others it is impossible to promise such delivery, and that the outlook is entirely satisfactory. The slight shading of prices for Southern pig iron is not considered seriously as that iron is not Bessemer pig iron.

THE FOREIGN COPPER MARKET.

The copper market has moved to a fresh low record, chiefly owing to acute apprehensions lest a serious break should take place in American quotations. The transatlantic situation has, it is true, exhibited some weakness which was responded to here in standard copper. Outside producers have been more ready to meet consumers, but the amalgamated interests do not seem to have departed from their views. Possibly a fresh move is in contemplation on the strength of general export business, although even here the outlook is somewhat obscure. The reported pressure to sell by outside interests, to which must be added the large offerings by second parties, may deserve closer attention than has generally been bestowed. Rumors are not entirely reassuring as to the bona fide nature of the large bookings in America for China, to which allusion has already been made here, for resales have lately been reported of metal ostensibly contracted for that part of the East, and these lead to a suspicion that the engagements for China have been overdone. None the less, large shipments are still pending, for so far only 20,000 tons or so have been dispatched, probably an equal quantity remaining for execution. Something depends upon whether or not this quantity is shipped, and, clearly, China cannot go on buying indefinitely in connection with coinage purposes. The position of producers is sound enough meantime, and there may be a revival of buying with the advent of May.

RUSSIAN BONDS IN AMERICA.

That American life insurance companies doing business in Russia have made more or less substantial investments in Russian securities, more especially in Russian Government bonds, is a well-known fact, but according to some New York bankers American investments in Russian securi-

Told Round the Ticker.

JACOB FIELD has recently been giving his thoughts to stocks, again blossoming forth on the decline in the market after a more or less extensive absence from the floor during the time the market was going the way he thought he knew it ought not to go. He has, in fact, been giving so much attention to stocks that they are on his mind all the time even when he is sleeping and when he is dining. A few evenings ago he was alone at a table in Delmonico's uptown and had just ordered his dinner when a party of half a dozen men and women entered. They were acquaintances of his and he was asked to join them at their table. The conversation had progressed for some time on varying topics when one of the women turned to Field and asked him what he thought of Balzac?

"I never trade in those curb stocks," was his reply.

ALBERT J. ELIAS had occasion about ten days ago after one of the severe breaks in the market to call for additional margins upon some of his customers, some of whom had managed to be long of the very stocks that declined most. He sent the notices out at the close of business. The following night he was aroused about 2 A. M. by a vigorous and persistent ringing of the telephone bell. He answered it with as much dispatch as a sleepy man would, and inquired what was wanted. "This is Robbins," he heard over the wire, "I got your notice this evening and I haven't been able to sleep all night. I want to let you know that I'm broke and can't give you another cent." This is what Elias said in reply:

"You, fool, you; what makes you ring me up at this hour to tell me that? Now I can't sleep all night."

C. W. MAURY has been elected Vice President of the Stock Exchange at a special meeting of the Governing Committee held last week. No Secretary was elected, but Charles L. Burnham was re-elected Assistant Secretary. So far, no Chairman has been elected by the committee. Mr. Maury has been a member of the Exchange since 1888, and held the same position last year. His re-election to the Vice Presidency is believed by his friends to place him in line for the Presidency the next time.

SIMON HAHN has retired from the firm of Popper & Sternbach, and the remaining partners, who have admitted Joseph Loewi into the firm, will continue the business under the old firm. William Grayson, Jr., of St. Louis, who was recently admitted to the Stock Exchange, has formed a partnership with J. Will Boyd and R. P. Prewitt under the name of William Grayson, Jr., & Co. René A. de Russy has retired from the firm of William H. Hurley, Jr., & Co.

Col. WILLIAM C. GREENE, of the various Greene mining companies, is hunting with a large party of friends in the Sierra Madre Mountains in Mexico. According to last reports Col. Greene's party is liable to rival the record of President Roosevelt's party. Col. Greene has shot one black bear and other members of the party have the skins of mountain lions, silver tipped bears, and plenty of deer and wild fowl to their credit. The party will round up at Chihuahua, where the Chamber of Commerce and the American colony will entertain them.

W. H. TRUESDALE, President of the Lackawanna Railroad, has given a fine solid silver trophy to the railroad branch of the Young Men's Christian Association at Scranton, Penn., to be contested for at next Winter's bowling tournaments in which several teams from neighboring branches of the association will take part. Hitherto the trophy has been merely a silk pennant.

I. N. SPIEGELBERG, one of the best-known brokers on the floor, who makes his headquarters at Wasserman Brothers, is about to take an extended trip abroad. Another well-known broker who proposes to go on a vacation trip abroad this week is R. M. Stuart Wortley. This, it is believed, is only the beginning of the regular Spring exodus from Wall Street, which this year promises to be even larger than heretofore, as many brokers expect a dull market for some time to come. Frederic W. Scott of the Stock Exchange firm of Scott & Stringfellow, of Richmond, Va., sailed yesterday with his family for a trip abroad, to be gone two or three months. Mr. Scott left as a bull on the market.

NICHOLAS W. ENGALITCHEFF, a Russian Prince, is to grace the office of manager of the Chicago branch of Marshall, Spader & Co. This is the first time that a Prince is known to have accepted such an office, though the business of stock broker has long been considered as quite the proper thing for the members of the American aristocracy. So, for instance, Elisha Dyer, Jr., combines his social rank with that of resident partner of the Newport branch of Ulman Brothers, which is about to be reopened. The Stock Exchange announcement yesterday contained quite a list of new branch offices to be opened in the fashionable suburbs and Summer places around New York.

WALTER C. HUBBARD has been nominated for the Presidency of the Cotton Exchange this year. It has been customary heretofore to promote the Vice President to the Presidency, but George A. Chapman, who was Vice President last year, is understood not to be feeling well enough to undertake the office. Henry H. Wheeler, last year's Secretary, has been nominated for Vice President, and Albert L. Rountree for Treasurer. The following have been nominated for Managers of the Exchange: Lamar Flemming, Hermann Hagedorn, John E. G. Higgens, Charles W. Lee, James F. Maury, Richard A. Springs, Edward M. Weld, Frederick E. Story, James W. Wenman, James Riordon, William Witherspoon, William P. Jenks, Frank H. Wiggins, John Grierson, and Charles A. Shearson.

SOME SMELTED FINANCE

New Securities Company a Focalizer of Earnings.

WELL GUARANTEED SERIES B

Investors in It Buy Properties Netting Fifteen Per Cent to the Other Fellow.

An interesting bit of financing is that by which the American Smelting and Refining Company has taken over the Guggenheim Exploration properties through the newly created Smelters Securities Company. And the case is no less worth attention because in this instance it does not appear that the $25,000,000 Series B preferred stock of the Securities Company, recently offered, is quite of the same gold-brick variety frequently manufactured heretofore for public consumption in connection with similar operations.

This fact, however, does not alter and need not obscure the operation performed with the Guggenheim Exploration properties. Its details will be apparent from a summarization of the capital of the Smelters combine and of the new Securities Company. Thus: American Smelting and Refining:

Old underlying bonds, (soon to be retired).....	$561,000
7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock.	50,000,000
Common stock (on 5 per cent. basis)...	80,000,000
American Smelters' Securities:
6 per cent. cumulative pfd. stock, Series A.....	$17,000,000
5 per cent. cumulative pfd. stock, Series B.....	30,000,000
Common stock.....	47,000,000
	80,000,000

In the new common stock the voting power of the Smelters Securities Company is vested for the first two years, and so long thereafter as dividends on the preferred, Series B, are continued. These dividends are guaranteed by the American Smelting and Refining Company, and the Series B preferred issue is also guaranteed at par in case of liquidation and made redeemable at the option of the Securities Company on and after June 1, 1930. The American Smelting and Refining Company also agrees not to make any further guarantees of capital stock or bonds which involve—including that of the Smelters Securities stock—a liability for interest or dividends of over 25 per cent. of its net earnings in any twelve months immediately preceding the issuance of the new obligations.

Now it will be noted that the Series B stock is the only one that is offered to the public, a fact that becomes doubly interesting when it is considered that the $25,000,000 or so to be realized from its sale furnishes to the Securities Company the entire sinews with which the Guggenheim properties are to be acquired. The common stock, 51 per cent. of which the Smelting and Refining owns, is not offered, and, it is understood, will not be offered; neither will be the Series A preferred, issues representing, first, control, and second, initial dividend return to the insiders in case it should not be considered practicable to put the common at once on a dividend basis.

The net earnings of the American Smelting and Refining for the current year are estimated at about $8,500,000, against which come in the ordinary course, besides the small interest charge on underlying bonds, dividend payments of $3,500,000 on its own preferred stock and of $2,500,000 on its common, a total of $6,000,000, leaving $2,500,000 against its liability for the 5 per cent. dividend on the $30,000,000 Series B preferred stock of the Smelters securities. The latter company, however, is expected to have an earning capacity of some $5,500,000 net upon the completion of plants now in process of construction, so the dividend liability of the American Smelting and Refining is somewhat remote.

On this basis the Smelters securities could care for the $1,020,000 dividend on its $17,000,000 preferred Series A and the $1,500,000 dividend on its Series B preferred, which the Smelting and Refining so kindly guarantees and then have something like $2,980,000 left over for dividend purposes of its common stock or for surplus account.

Perhaps this rather unusually conservative financing of the Smelters Securities Company in connection with the American Smelting and Refining fairly entitles the combination to be stamped a "good trust," according to the Roosevelt definition, notwithstanding recent elevation of Smelters to figures that the earnings of the property and dividend returns do not justify. But that, as was said at the beginning, does not alter the operation. It is the process of focalised nutrition in a different form from that in which the old Consolidated Tobacco Company employed it. In that case folks were asked to surrender stocks earning something like 20 per cent. for 200 per cent. in 4 per cent. bonds, their attention being called by the "professon" meantime to the much greater security they would have in their enjoyment of an 8 per cent. return on their original par value than if they greedily insisted on keeping their common stock of the old American or Continental Company, as the case might be.

In the instance of the Smelters Securities Company, people are asked to put up $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 to purchase properties expected to earn nearly 20 per cent. on that investment, and to take a needlessly guaranteed 5 per cent. on their money, while the guarantors divide up the other 15 per cent. as they see fit between themselves and the controlling company, which is another way of saying merely between themselves. Needless to say, the American Smelters Securities is a New Jersey Corporation.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Nominal, 2@2½ Per Cent.

A Market Without Significance, Except for a Movement in the Northwestern Railway Group.

When there is anything doing in the stock market Saturday sessions are looked to with interest as an indication of the intentions regarding the next week's prospects. As there is nothing especially doing just now, and comparative incuriosity regarding next Monday, yesterday's business, like its news, was of a routine character. Not seldom such fits of sleepiness have rude awakenings, and the naval situation in the Orient has the elements of the making of precisely such an incident. Still all that the market troubled itself about yesterday were reports regarding the Northwestern group. President Earling's authority is lent to the familiar story regarding St. Paul's plans for construction to the Pacific, and the intimation was given that the guarantors of the Burlington joint 4 per cents might issue stock to retire those bonds, incidentally giving an extra dividend to the shareholders of Great Northern and Northern Pacific. The former story depressed both St. Paul and Northwest, and the latter advanced both Northern Pacific and Great Northern, as well as Burlington 4 per cents, which are redeemable at 105, and discounted the fact. St. Paul's construction plans do not promise to arouse such antipathies in the Northwest as the Western Pacific's plans do in the Southwest. It is an interesting comparison, springing out of the contrasting personalities and methods of administration. Within bounds construction is stimulating and developing, and derives its capacity for harm from the antagonisms sometimes resulting. If the Northwest should thrive and the Southwest should enter into a cutthroat era the lesson will derive added interest. Although the Northwest "melon" is unofficial, it is credible, for the value is there, and the operation is in every way creditable as well as profitable, with the incidental advantage of dealing with a surplus which it is difficult to conceal and desirable to distribute without increasing dividends too conspicuously. The official circular embodying the conditions of the proposed merger of Rubber Goods and United States Rubber was issued, but is too involved for immediate general understanding. The proposition to acquire from a syndicate control of Rubber Goods, which it would seem the syndicate must acquire in the market, is a novelty commendable for its frankness at least. But perhaps it is not as frank as it seems. The sequel will be as interesting as the proposal is novel. The bank statement showed some loss of reserve, but its ample proportions and the ease of the money market entitle the fact only to the moderate degree of interest which the market attached to it.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 13.—The Cotton Duck reorganization plan is meeting with greater favor here than was expected. Past attempts to merge the Mount Vernon-Woodberry Company with the United States Company have been such dismal failures that financial circles are glad to find the plan how proposed so generally satisfactory. In several instances large local holders of Mount Vernon-Woodberry income bonds who at first expressed themselves as against the plan, have, after explanations, decided to accept it. While the new plan cuts the par value of income securities in half and transmutes them into preferred stock of the new company, it seems to assure some yearly return in the way of dividends. It makes all the earnings of both the Mount Vernon mills and the United States mills liable for dividends after the payment of comparatively small underlying fixed charges. Cotton Duck securities led the trading in to-day's dull market. There was no speculative demand for any securities. The sales were: Shares, 103; bonds, $44,000, as follows:

ON THE LONDON 'CHANGE

Not Much Business, but Tendency Toward Higher Prices.

Situation, However, Generally Regarded as Doubtful—Consols Again Go Above 90—Home Rails Higher—Foreigns Weak.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1905.]

LONDON, May 13.—Stocks looked a trifle better at the close to-day than they looked a week ago. There has not been much business during the week, but firmness has been a marked feature of the market, and in most departments the tendency has been toward higher prices.

Some persons whose opinions carry a good deal of weight profess to believe that there has been a turn in the market, and that another advance has begun, which will continue until the bulls have become once more overloaded.

This week's settlement, it is maintained, marked the close of the shrinkage that had been going on for a month or so, about everything in the market getting down quite low enough to warrant a new start.

This optimism is by no means universal. Speculators and investors, as a rule, continue to regard the situation as quite doubtful, and abstain from predictions of better days in the near future.

Considerable satisfaction is felt on all sides at the fact that consols have again gone over the 90 mark, leading the way for most other home and Colonial Government securities. Home rails with very few exceptions have also scored gratifying gains, though the dealings in these stocks have not been heavy.

Americans have recovered a good percentage of their recent losses, and are in much better favor than a short time ago.

Foreign governments have been the weak spot in the last few days, the situation here reflecting to some extent the anxiety on the Continental Bourses due to developments of the Far Eastern conflict.

Mines have been irregular, and closed heavy and weak.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 13.—Money was more plentiful in the market to-day, and rates were easier owing to the redemption of $10,000,000 of Treasury bills. Discounts were easier on the prospect of the arrivals of bar gold being taken by the Bank of England next week.

Trading on the Stock Exchange opened quiet and cheerful, but later consols were a shade easier. Home rails were irregular. Americans opened firm and generally inactive at around parity. They sagged later and closed steady.

Foreigners generally were firm, especially Continentals. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 100⅝.

Bar silver steady at 26½d per ounce.

Money, 2 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 2⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 2¾ per cent.

Bullion amounting to £13,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 31.60; Lisbon, 8.50.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—The only two distinctive features in the local trading to-day were the buying of Lehigh Valley and the selling of United Gas Improvement, the latter being by holders who were afraid that something unfavorable might develop on Monday, when bids will be received by the City Council's Sub-Finance Committee for the gas lease extension. New York continued to absorb Lehigh Valley, the company's earnings having attracted attention in Wall Street. Otherwise the market was without feature, the day's business being the lightest reached in a long time. The total sales were 11,640 shares; $19,000 bonds, as follows:

PARIS, May 13.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm at first, but subsequently weakened on an unconfirmed rumor of an attempt on the life of the Russian Emperor. Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 88.40 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 510.

Three per cent. rentes, 99 francs 15 centimes for the account. Exchange on London, 25 francs 15 centimes for checks.

BERLIN, May 13.—On the Boerse to-day the transactions were limited, and the usual Saturday dullness prevailed.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48⅝ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3 per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 13.—The money market to-day was quiet and easy. Call loans, 3½@3½ per cent.; time loans, collateral, 3½@4 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 3½@4½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent. New York funds at par. Clearings, $26,935,910; balances, $2,007,539; Sub-Treasury debit, $32,462.

For the week: Clearings, $148,907,880; balances, $10,804,302.

Bank stocks have been in fair demand during the week, and sales are reported as follows: 5 First Ward National at 175½; 8 Merchants' National at 192½; 9 State National at 151½@152½; 25 Boyleston National at 106@106¾; 6 Webster and Atlas National at 142½; 7 National Shawmut at 200; 11 Union Market National, Watertown, at 137; 10 National Rockland, Roxbury, at 151½.

To-day's stock market was dull. Some of the coppers advanced a fraction and others went off. Shoe & Machinery was a little stronger, and Telephone rallied, but nothing happened that was really worth noting. Complete transactions were as follows:

ARVERNE, L. I. BY THE SEA.

The Business Man's Resort. 39 Minutes from New York.

This attractive seaside village, only fifteen miles from New York, is growing in popularity each year. The hotels and boarding houses already show an increase in their bookings over last season.

Arverne is directly on the ocean and boasts of a magnificent bathing beach. There is good sailing, rowing, fishing and golf. The roads are free from dust, and in excellent condition for a rapid automobile spin or drive. One may leave Arverne at 6:50 A. M., and return from the heat of the city at 5:50 P. M., in time for an ocean bath before dinner.

Catskill Mountains. Catskill Mountains.

"THE WORLD-FAMED VIEW" FROM

The Catskill Mountain House

"Here's to your good health, and your family's good health. May you live long and prosper." OPEN JUNE 26

Whatever and no matter how widely spread the praise of the natural beauties of the Catskill Mountain House, no less might be said, and with equal truth, of the hotel as a health resort. Its peculiar situation, its foundation literally upon a rock, the neighboring pine woods, the clear dry air of the altitude—these combine in their beneficial effects upon all who are afflicted with malaria or hay fever, or with general debility. It may also be noted that, in the eighty-two years in which this famous hostelry has been open to the public, it has never known a case of typhoid fever—a record which it would be hard to match and which is the more noteworthy when the vast numbers of its patrons are recalled, coming from all parts of the world, and in that great lapse of time, encountering many periods of widespread disease. The water used is from a spring whose absolute purity is guarded from all possibility of contamination. Here is invigoration in the fresh, cool air, a tonic to tired body and harassed nerves alike.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The transaction, reported below, involving properties at Broadway and Cortlandt Street, valued at over $1,000,000, easily takes rank as one of the most important of the year. The plot is one of the largest unimproved parcels with a Broadway frontage, between Fulton and Rector Streets, and while existing leases may make it necessary to defer a building operation for some time, the improvement of the property at the earliest possible date is practically assured by the sale announced yesterday.

The real estate fraternity has become so accustomed during the last six or eight months to having some particular section, or perhaps two or three sections upon which to concentrate its attention, that there is a tendency to look upon the present course of market events as ordinary in the extreme. Some "Summer talk" is heard, but it is certainly not justified in view of the well-sustained volume of dealing in all classes of property, except vacant lots, and anything that might be said about a quieter feeling in the market would be only in a comparative sense.

Fourth Avenue achieved a new record figure last week with the sale of the southeast corner of Thirty-second Street for a reported price of $150,000. The whole district bounded by Twenty-third and Fifty-ninth Streets, Fourth and Fifth Avenues, continues to show encouraging evidences of activity, and brokers report a better inquiry within these limits than at any time within two years. On lower Seventh Avenue, a corner was sold at Twenty-sixth Street, and in the block to the north the site was bought for a new ten-story mercantile building. The sale of 327 Madison Avenue served to arouse some further speculation as to the probable future of the block in which it is situated. This block, which will have the new Grand Central Station on two sides and Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue on the other two, will possess unique qualifications for business purposes, and the desire of owners in it to piece out their holdings into form available for future improvement, has created a scale of values there second only to those on Fifth Avenue itself.

The deal for the Temple Israel property, at the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and the purchase by operators of a large plot on the same street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, have served to emphasize the increased future possibilities of Harlem's great thoroughfare by reason of the development of Washington Heights and the Bronx. If One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street's business growth and the enhancement of its property values were sources of wonder, owing to the building up of Harlem, there can be little question as to the effect of several thousand additional new houses being made tributary to it.

LATEST DEALINGS BY BROKERS.

The City Investing Company has bought from the Broadway-Cortlandt Company the Parmly Building, an old six-story structure, at 165 and 167 Broadway, together with the Smith Building at 15 Cortlandt Street, the two properties forming an "L" around the southwest corner of Broadway and Cortlandt Street. The frontage on Broadway is 77.6 feet and on Cortlandt Street 65 feet, the area of the entire plot being 11,400 square feet. The price paid for the property was something over $1,100,000, or about $100 a square foot. Frederick Southack and Alwyn Ball, Jr., were the brokers for the transactions.

No immediate improvement of the site is contemplated, some of the leases on parts of the existing buildings having two or three years yet to run.

The Broadway-Cortlandt Company took over these properties about Jan. 1, 1903, from Henry Corn, who had acquired them from the Hoffmans in a big trade, which also involved the building at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street and the Cluett Building on Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, just west of Fifth Avenue. The Parmly Building on Broadway had been owned by the late Dean Hoffman for many years, and in 1898 he bought at auction the Smith property on Cortlandt Street.

New Rochelle Property at Auction.

H. E. Colwell, auctioneer, will sell on May 20, at 11 A. M., seventy-three acres of Sound shore property, at New Rochelle, formerly owned by C. Oliver (selfs, on the Post Road, New Haven Railroad, and the line of rapid transit extensions. The Post Road property will be sold in lots, the rest in acreage. The Sound Shore Realty and Title Company is the present owner of the property.

THE AUCTION ROOMS.

Aside from James L. Wells's successful sale of lots on Sedgwick and Undercliff Avenues, last week's offerings of vacant property were rather disappointing in their results. A long list of Bronx properties met with slight support, and, although the sale of a syndicate's holdings on Washington Heights fared somewhat better, a good many of the parcels apparently were simply bought in for the account of one or another of the syndicate's members.

The improved properties offered during the week, however, found a ready market, particularly those of the highest class. Auctioneer Day sold on Tuesday two lower Fifth Avenue properties, No. 108, at the southwest corner of Sixteenth Street and No. 166, near Twenty-second Street—the successful bidder in either case being $175,000. At the same partition sale Heilner & Wolf bought 31 East Twenty-seventh Street for $31,750.

By comparison with other recent schedules this week's is noticeable by reason of the small number of its offerings and the even smaller number of those of voluntary character.

On Tuesday, Bryan L. Kennelly will offer 5 and 7 Hamilton Street, two tenements, rear of Catharine Street, and on the same day the property 18 Avenue A will be sold by Auctioneer Day. An adjourned partition sale, also down for Tuesday, covers 330 West Eighteenth Street, running through to 349 West Nineteenth Street, and 24 Albany Street, near West Street and opposite the site bought recently by Gen. Howard Carroll.

Among the legal offerings for Thursday are the loft buildings 127 to 133 Bleecker Street, 50 feet west of Wooster Street, and 16 Greene Street, near Grand Street. Both sales will be conducted by Auctioneer Harris B. Fisher.

MORTGAGE FILINGS FOR WEEK.

There were recorded last week 700 mortgages for $13,021,382; of which 415 for $5,459,903 were at 6 per cent.; 16, for $206,700, were at 5½ per cent.; 201, for $3,041,000, were at 5 per cent.; 72, for $2,586,809, were at 4½ per cent., and 25, for $80,010, were at 4 per cent. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 696 mortgages for $9,705,586, of which 211, for $4,407,923, were at 6 per cent.; 293, for $3,084,961, were at more, and 95, for $2,276,209, were at less.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

THOMAS H. BRADY.—Thomas H. Brady, manufacturer of silk petticoats at 28 East Twenty-second Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $8,963 and assets of $2,912, consisting of stock, $300; machines and fixtures, $1,200; accounts, $750; claims, $155, and cash in bank, $1. Among the creditors are the estate of Peter Daulton of Brooklyn, $7,000, money loaned; Rusch & Co., $847, and People's Bank, $500. He was formerly employed by Peter Daulton, who died four years ago, and Mr. Brady started in business for himself in November, 1901.

M. DEUTSCH & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Morris Deutsch and Rosie Goldman, who compose the firm of M. Deutsch & Co., manufacturers of millinery trimmings at 287 Mercer Street, by the following creditors: G. Robison & Son, $83; Kahn & Feldman, $242, and Moeller & Littman, $294. It was alleged that they are insolvent, on May 9 gave a bill of sale of their merchandise to an auctioneer named Goodman, and on the same day money on deposit in the State Bank was withdrawn. They have been in business only a few months.

SAMUEL L. PEWTRESS.—Samuel Lester Pewtress, who was in the steam laundry business at 681 East Sixteenth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $4,384, all contracted in 1905, and assets of $235, in accounts. Of the liabilities $2,266 are to relatives in Bridgeport, Conn., for borrowed money. He bought the business in July, 1905, for $5,000, and gave up two weeks ago.

JOHN W. S. MONTGOMERY.—John W. S. Montgomery of 1,896 Lexington Avenue has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,487 and assets of $18. Most of the liabilities are as Vice President of the William M. Montgomery Company and as indorser of its notes.

LOUIS KLOSEK.—Louis Klosek, residing at 322 East One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,330 and no assets. The debts were contracted as a partner in the Star Confectionery Company.

JOSEPH RETTIG.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Joseph C. Reynolds, who kept the Hotel Webster, at 40 West Forty-fifth Street, have been filed by Orlando F. Metcalf, the receiver, and show liabilities of $20,187, of which $17,000 are for rent, and nominal assets of $20,411, consisting of furniture and equipment $20,400 and cash $11. Among the creditors are the Mortgage Realty Company, $18,000, secured, and the Forty-fifth Street Company, $2,000, secured.

Sixty years established speaks for itself. Honorable dealings during that time has made us a host of friends as well as clients. We want to know your patronage will follow. We have a man who thoroughly knows the building business, handling our sales department, and he is constantly on the lookout for good things. We do not hand these out promiscuously, but to a select few whom we care to favor. The entire time of our representative is given to our clients and he will call by appointment, or you can see him at our office. Courteously yours,

PALISADE

Five minutes from the ferry and you will be in Palisade.

Up the face of the palisade climbs the trolley winds amid the grandest as well as the most romantic surroundings—scenery that never loses its charm.

If you live in Palisade, your residence will become more and more valuable every year.

Why? Because of the location—its accessibility, the grandeur of the view which it commands, and—equally important—because the sale and building restrictions will not only keep out all undesirable persons, but also prevent the construction of all undesirable buildings.

Let us tell you more about this beautiful place where, amid sunshine and cool breezes, high above the Hudson, you may find health and happiness and a profitable investment.

Houses range in price from $10,000 to $30,000—some a little less.

A Property Owner

always has something tangible to fall back on, if in one's own business dull times come, as they do in all businesses, the rent payer has to cut down expenses with nothing to help him tide over, but the man who owns his own home has no rent bills staring him in the face, and if worst comes to worst can be renting his home and moving temporarily into smaller quarters, supplement his income and often save himself from serious loss or worse. Larchmont Park is the ideal place for home seekers, easy of access to New York, high, healthful and with all the advantages of both city and country, it offers to the business man a home on terms so easy that to neglect to take advantage of the offer is to fail in his duty to his wife and family. To read the description of the property and then to look at the property costs you nothing. I will gladly give you full information.

Amelie Rives: An Impressionistic Interview

An Hour With the Author of "The Quick or the Dead" and "Selene" Before She Sailed for Europe Last Week.

The Princess Troubetzkoy — Formerly — Amélie Rives

"She looked like a girl scarcely out of her 'teens."

"The Quick or the Dead' was written when I was very young."

The First Sketch from Life in Seventeen Years---Not the Woman of "The Quick or the Dead," but a Happy Princess-o'-Dreams Who Holds the Secret of Eternal Youth ---The Poet of Selene

I am sunlight and moonlight,
The fire in the jewel,
The blue in the blossom,
The dew on its petals,
The pearl and the ocean,
The pang and the pleasure,
The gift and the giver,
The prayer and its answer—
Immortal and mortal!
—From "Selene," by AMELIE RIVES.

THESE verses, written by Amélie Rives in her latest poem, "Seléné," are practically its closing lines, and they epitomise herself, not analytically, but with that strange, mystic power that is as a fairy web of psychic threads given by the gods to poets only, in which these poets entrap the most exquisite and elusive symbolism of life.

It is not about "Seléné" I am going to write, except so far as it establishes Amélie Rives among the great poets, contemporary by an accident of time only. Nothing more stately, more delicately fanciful, more aglow with the Greek flame of classical thought and vision has been written since Keats gave "Endymion" to the people, the too small world of people who are in harmony with that music of the spirit called poetry. And it is important that we should acknowledge her, drape her shoulders with the mantle of honor and rank that she deserves and that she has been denied in the contemporary falsities that have been told about her personality. The critics and reviewers of books have in the large majority discovered her distinction in "Seléné," (which the Harpers published a month or so ago,) although she has written innumerable poems and stories that established her standard of genius to the discriminating long ago, such as "The Farrier Lass of Piping Pebworth," thirteen stanzas entitled "Grief and Joy," written not for publication, but to soothe the sorrow of a neighbor who had lost his wife, and "Marianne," a dramatic poem. Yes, and she wrote "The Quick or the Dead," without thought for its value so much as the delight in the labor of it, for, as she has written,

"I am sunlight and moonlight,
The fire in the jewel,
The blue in the blossom,
The dew on its petals * * *"

Fruitless as it may seem to dive from the safety of commonplace expression into the limitless depths of symbollic fancy, as the poets do, and although they can rarely see in the dull light that ordinary mortals see by, they have a purpose in their divine waywardness, and it is to refresh and invigorate the dust worn and the cowardly.

"I am in love with my race," said Amélie Rives, and when, with the naïveness of contemporary instinct, I classified the race as being American, she said:

"No; I mean from farthest Greenland to the shores of India; from the temples in Athens to the gods in Japan!"

The poet holds the great secrets of the world in the hollow of a hand; the rest of us need libraries, and colleges, and maps.

Doubtless a man would have a long and tedious hunt in New York if he set out to find a poet, and it was contrary to the atmospheric principles of poetry that I should seek one in the district of gaudy crowds not a block from the Waldorf-Astoria.

Of course, a reportorial instinct seeking the Princess Troubetskoy might lead to one of those big social institutions for the unreformed called hotels, because in New York a princess is associated with bridal suites and a staff of flunkeys; but she was not a New York Princess.

Her title was not a thing with which she wished to dazzle the envious, nor her character a bit of glitter for society news. So I found her in the heart of the hotel district, but hidden away in a quiet apartment, timidly waiting in the shadow of the homes of peacocks for a ship to take her off before another night had passed, a ship such as she had dreamed of in "Seléne," where the "* * * bubbling soft and limpid gush

Of music, airy, low, mysterious,
Like that which fluctuates on stilly nights
About the hollow silence of a ship,
Wherein a poet lies awake for love."

Seventeen years had passed, she told me, since a personal sketch of her had been written; that is a true one, taken from life. There had been innumerable unauthorized tales about her, descriptions of her, that were as far from fact as imagination could make them. Her retirement from the reach of eager interviewers and snap-shot cameras had been complete, and had so added to the mystery of her personality that there was nothing left in the public eye of her as she is.

Nor can one do justice in a pen portrait of so complex a being as a woman who is a Princess-o'-Dreams. Just when it seemed I had seized upon some dominant main trait of her character, all unconsciously revealed to me, she did just what she has described in the vision of "Seléné:"

"* * * suddenly she vanished, for my veil
Whirled up by a gush of air so sweet
That from my childhood's island seemed it blowing.
Thrice wrapped itself around my crescent," and the moment of fact was carried away in the swift current of her fancy.

I had been told, or I had read, that Amélie Rives was a tall, statuesque personality, with golden-yellow hair, audacious lips, and eyes that "twisted a man's soul" (if he has one it usually is twisted) into some delicious but undignified impulse. It was known she was considered a beauty, and upon this information there appeared in the press as many types that answered to as many appeals for beauty as there were papers and writers, with a singular leaning toward the statuesque blond type.

All this was wrong; nowhere had I seen a portrait of her that bore even a most faint resemblance, and nowhere had I read a description that seemed to be written by some one who had seen her.

Prince Troubetzkoy brought me to her, and with a certain eagerness that was half fear, half curiousness of mood, and wholly natural in its simple grace, she glided between a narrow opening between the doors of an adjoining room—before me.

A slender figure in a soft, flowing robe of white, a little woman, perhaps a trifle above the average height, with large gray eyes that looked straight at me calmly, with a reserve in them that tried to be stern, but knew not how; a mouth that was perfect in a woman, feminine in its tenderness, yet clear, bold in its outline, such as the Greek sculptors molded in their statues, depicting the poetic qualities of a nature governed by chaste ideals, and thus fearless of mere impulses, her soft, brown hair worn low on the neck in girlish fashion, and twisted into a knot, where it was tied with a plain black bow, a nose that was Grecian in its shape and proportions, a low, wide brow, and a smile that was all happiness and health.

Contemporaneously her face suggested Langtry, the Mrs. Langtry whom the gods intended before the fashion of the world had claimed her. And there was in her the eager, half-suppressed, intense sincerity and simplicity of the Annie Russell type.

These comparisons are made merely to assist a mental vision of one who is far from being a contemporaneously modern woman, for Amélie Rives is Southern born and Southern bred, where women are encouraged to be children in impulse, to dream of the chivalry and romance that clings to their hearthstones even in this mushroom age.

Memories of "Barbara" and "Jock" were in my mind, and the impression the story had made upon a public curiously interested in the personality of the author, whom they knew only as a Southern beauty and whom they suspected to be of as fervent and erotic a timbre as her book, "The Quick or the Dead."

Was it twenty years ago, or less, since then? She was described as a very young writer, even at that time.

What had she done with the years intervening, for as she sat in the corner of the sofa I saw only a girlish figure, her gown open loose about her soft white throat, and as we talked the fair skin of her cheeks flushed gently, or grew bluish pale as if the heart had tossed her years away and pumped unceasing youth into her veins.

She looked like a girl scarce out of her teens, and yet the stern statistics of dated time showed she must be nearly forty, and then the lines of "Seléné" came back:

"I am sunlight and moonlight,
The fire in the jewel,
The blue in the blossom,
The dew on its petals,
The pearl and the ocean,
The pang and the pleasure,
The gift and the giver,
The prayer and its answer—

That was it. I was sitting there talking to the Princess Troubetzkoy, and at the same time I was before a not uncommon but rarely noticeable fact in modern life, the mystery of the light within, that in some people burns so brightly and buoyantly that age cannot snuff it out, for, as Amélie Rives believes, youth is an enchantment that is given to those who trust implicitly in it.

It was not merely the simulated reminiscence of girlishness, but she had actually the halting sensitiveness, the half wondering gaze, the delicate deftness of feeling that is not youthful, but is the veritable source of youth.

Her husband, who is a tall, athletic man of much personal charm and sensibility, sat down in front of her and tried with a brave but clumsy masculine assumption to hide his adoration, but they were both so happy, and they were both so close to each other in sympathy, that he couldn't.

"Those members of the press I have met I have liked," she began, with a little catch in her voice that was akin to something like stage fright, "but I have met very few. This is the first interview I have given for—for—seventeen years."

"And that is why you are a mystery—but you are entirely different from anything we have read about you," I said.

"I must be, from what I have read about myself. I suppose I ought to have seen them all; but you see I live away from people, and then I have been quite ill, but now, ah! I'm so well, and steady and strong. I lost interest in writing for a while, but now I think I've got my second childhood; it's perfectly delicious, perfectly delightful." And the Prince gazed rapturously at her, and she looked shyly down to avoid his telltale eyes, and a little flush came into her cheeks, and—well, she was ingenuously young, there was no doubt about it.

"Our home is in Albemarle County, in Virginia," she said, adroitly filling an awkward pause. "It's a dear, old-fashioned, rambling country house, and I love it. All the associations of my childhood are about me there; then we take trips to the Prince's home on Lake Maggiore, and there we find ourselves amid all the reminiscences of his childhood; it's perfectly delightful, he comes to my childhood days in Virginia, and I go to his in Italy, and we enjoy ourselves; it's delicious."

She was so sanguine of happiness, so genuinely simple in its expression, it was like talking to a girl who was just starting on a honeymoon, and it was interesting, because it was Amélie Rives, a notable figure in literature.

"You will always be remembered by 'The Quick or the Dead,'" I said, tentatively, and I could see that she wished it were otherwise.

"I suppose so, but that was written when I was very young. I should never write another book like it. 'Barbara' was really a composite study of a hysterical woman."

"Some one you knew?"

"Yes, no one I knew well; it was just a story written as I saw it, and like all my stories, entirely apart from myself. I always see a story out there in front of me," she said, drawing an imaginary frieze of characters in the air, and holding them at full arm's length, not intimately, but rigidly, firmly. "The Quick or the Dead" had evidently had no closer relation to the conservative principles of the author than the people she kept at arm's length in life.

"You know I have always written stories since I was a little girl. I used to make little paper books of loose sheets, and sew them together neatly after they were written in pamphlet form." And her hands, slender, nervous, artistic hands, illustrated the laborious industry of the child's fingers sewing the little books as neatly as possible.

"Once they decided that I was using up too much paper, and they wouldn't give me any more, so I used to wear little starched frocks with a wide flounce at the bottom, and found I could write splendidly on the flounce. It really was better than paper to write on; but my mother discovered it, and she was so puzzled that she came to me to explain what the hieroglyphics meant. After that I got all the paper I wanted."

It was as necessary for her to write as it was to walk or sleep.

"You saw the dramatic version of 'The Quick or the Dead'?"

"Yes, I was caught in New York one night, and being obliged to stay over, I went to the theatre to see it. There was really nothing in it I could recognise as mine."

"Didn't they seek your advice or assistance in the staging?"

"No, no, they did not," she said, and her eyes opened wide with innocent surprise. "I think somebody wrote me a letter asking how 'Jock' should be dressed, and I replied: 'Like any country gentleman.' And I found him wearing a velveteen jacket. Just think of it!" And the pointed tip of her shoe beat a mild little tattoo of resentment on the air.

"The Quick or the Dead" was, after all, very unimportant in the mind of Amélie Rives, who had quite passed through the first symptoms of poetic genius in prose, and reached the Elysian fields of blank verse and stateller form.

"I don't like prose, and I don't write very much of it now," she said. "The editors tell me they want prose, but they will have to take my poetry or nothing."

"Your inspiration is drawn from—"

"From the air," she said, helplessly. "I really don't know where I get it. The thought and the form come together."

"But she creates more than she gives; there is always a reserve," said the Prince, prompting her meaning into words.

"Of course I have a great many manuscripts that I do not give for publication, because I do not think they are ready."

"Contemporaneous reading?" I suggested, as a possible source of creative influence.

"No, I read very little of modern work. It all seems to be like one taste, it all retains the same flavor—if I could only express just what I mean," and she struggled silently a moment, then burst rapidly into the symbol that is her native element:

"I mean that if you put a lot of things together in an old chest that has had rose leaves in it, you will find that everything in that chest will have the same perfume; that is the effect contemporaneous reading has upon me."

While we were probing the effects of modern influences I asked her what was the effect of New York.

"Oh! what a distracting, fearful, grinding place. I feel when I'm here, which is very rarely, as if I were in a network of cross currents, intangible, unattainable, nothing that the mind can seize or settle upon. There is a great hollow roar that is metallic here, as if there were a big chute out of which great tons of gold were pouring and rattling out," but this is how she had written the thought in "Seléné," where Endymion

"Dreamed for himself another destiny,
* * * * * * *
* * * * for thus the gods
Tenderly mock the ignorance of man,
Who, often while the fair gold fruit of joy
So near him hangs that on his eager brow
He feels the mystic stirring of its leaves,
Within the darksome earth will delve and toil,
Seeking that other gold, whose mightiest bulk
Is not so precious as one little seed
Of that which hangs above him."

The Princess Troubetzkoy was still Amélie Rives, the poet of broad human sympathies; she had no politic affiliations with the woman of fashion and her muddled energies that frequently wrought only pains and scandal.

"Those poor people, with their masks and their sins, and such little, mean, unprincipled sins," she said sadly, "sins as incongruous as tin carts with diamond wheels."

"You could never endure the life of a woman of fashion?"

She smiled the wise but knowing smile of a child.

"You know a physician wrote me once to send him the secret of what he called my perpetual youth, and I wrote back that he must consider the cost, a cost that few of his presumably fashionable patients could make, for I rise at 7 or 7:30, ride or walk in the country roads, live close to my books, see few people, and retire at 10. What fashionable woman could endure my life? I remember thinking about it one Winter morning, when I was walking along; the crisp, crackling snow under my feet, the fairy outline of a gossamer frost revealing every twig of brush and tree, and I was so invigorated and happy I could have whistled like a boy with delight; but if I had been a woman of fashion I couldn't have endured the silence, the empty distances, the quiet; why, a woman of fashion would die in my place, and I am quite sure that I should in hers," and the fingers were busy smoothing the bow in her hair, while she smiled a pretty sympathy for the woman of fashion.

She was a Princess-o'-Dreams, and always would be, in spite of the fact that her grandfather was W. C. Rives, the distinguished Senator from Virginia, and one of the first American Ministers to France, at a time when France was in political tension with other European countries. It was in her grandfather's library that she spent her childhood, and in her veins lived the true aristocracy of the South.

There was never any sign of petty spite or selfishness in her, for she had written:

"So loveller far appeared to me the lives
Diverse of those who, sharing not their souls
Each with one other only, give to all
Freely of what in freedom they acquire,
Nor by such gifts ought lose, but rather gain."

"But I must have a sense of humor," she said, "for when I was reading again all about the lives of the Greek gods, their domestic troubles, their weaknesses, and their reasonings, there was something extremely modern and funny in their point of view," and she illustrated the dilemma of a god who could neither think effectively in heaven or earth, and so was hoisted in a basket and there suspended in air between the two, where he thought long and deeply.

It was not a religious instinct that inspired Amélie Rives, as with other poets, nor was it the egotistic vanity of a Byron, although her mother is an extremely pious woman.

"I am not a believer in any sectarian influences, although I suppose by family instinct and association I am an Episcopalian," she said.

"You go to the Episcopal Church?"

"With my mother, but I scarcely feel that any religion is greater than another; they are all part of the broad way to human sympathy and human sentiment."

"And what are you writing now?"

"I have been working on a story of Augustin—before he became a saint," she added, with a little humorous smile. "It is told in blank verse, and I have enjoyed doing it, for I feel so well, and steady, and calm that my work is like a new revelation, a new vision of life and all its secrets. I think, perhaps, I am paying more attention to form than I did, but my thoughts will always mold themselves."

This Princess-o'-Dreams had lived in too close affection with nature where literature grew neither on shrub nor tree, but where all was made perfect under the pulses such as she had felt when she wrote:

"How from my birth I loved the free, wild life
Of wood and meadow. * * * *"

"What does literary mean?" she asked me, with a guileless simplicity. No answer would have convinced her, for she had absorbed books as the earth absorbs the moisture, and then she had kept out under sky and trees to grow her own way, to think her own problems out, to see her visions as literature alone could not show them to her.

Quite different was Amélie Rives from the woman many of us had thought her to be, and yet if we had read closely the best that she had published there would have been a glimpse of the real woman that might have made us understand even the mood of "The Quick or the Dead," for she is neither literary, ostentious nor a student of style; she is a natural, pretty, ingenious Princess-o'-Dreams, and as variable and elusive as the poetic figure of the goddess "Seléné," who said:

"I am sunlight and moonlight,
The fire in the jewel,
The blue in the blossom,
The dew on its petals,
The pearl and the ocean,
The pang and the pleasure,
The gift and the giver,
The prayer and the answer—
Immortal and mortal.

MYTHS FOR MODERNS.

ULYSSES had just gathered in a bunch of his heroic sailors who had eaten the lotus and promptly deserted, having forgotten all about home and mother. Their faces were pale, and they showed in other ways the unmistakable effects of their spree.

"You're a nice lot," exploded the hero, surlily. "If I didn't need you in my business, if I didn't have to have you to work the ship, you can bet your last denarius I'd never have looked for you. No dope fiends for mine, if you please!"

Zeus had ordered Apollo and Artemis to exterminate with their terrible arrows the children of Niobe the naughty. The monarch of Olympus was in a frightful rage at the rash mortal female, and even her glorious beauty failed to move him.

Then Aphrodite came to the throne, bringing little Eros with her.

"I think your Majesty is making a mistake," she ventured. "Niobe is a good mother, and her children are all—"

"Enough, wanton! I know what you were going to say, but this is no case for you. It's not race suicide at all."

And a liveried porter showed the Goddess of Beauty the door.

Orpheus went to hell, seeking the fair Eurydice. He passed terrors and shapes not to be named, and at last found the maiden, her foot still sore where the adder bit her.

"Come back, my love, and fly with me," sang Orpheus, sweetly.

But the maid merely replied: "Prove your love."

"Haven't I proved it?"

"Not enough," she answered.

And the bard, looking thoughtful, swept the strings of his lyre while the wind blew through his whiskers, and all hell joined in the chorus of that sweet air, as he extemporized on the spot:

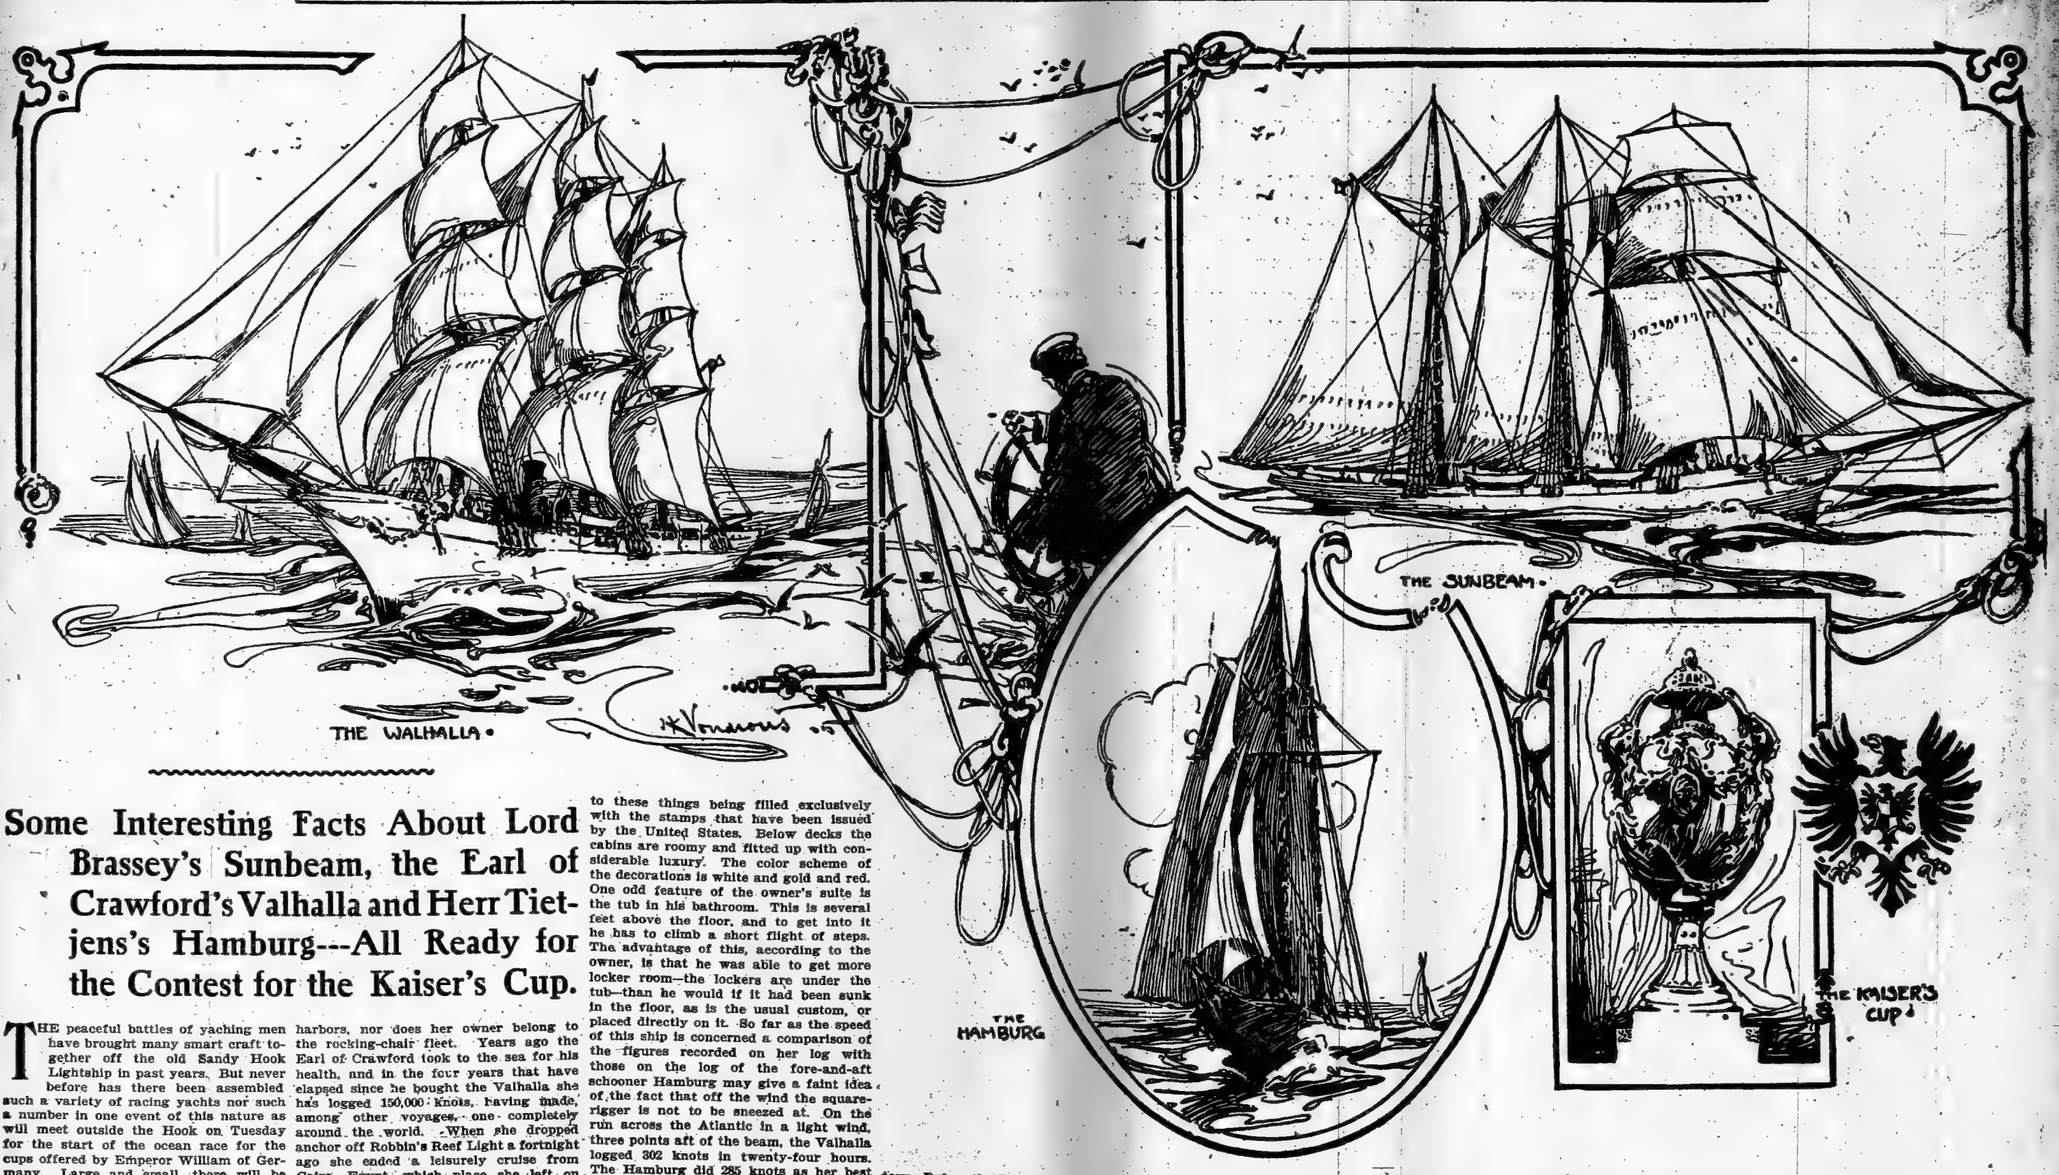
"I've left my happy home
For yoo—oo—oo—oo—oo."

Theseus stood at the edge of the sacred Styx and wanted Charon to ferry him over. The old man refused, and the warrior grew impatient and noisy.

"Hang this river!" he roared. "Why don't they dam it and have done with this old fool of a ferryman and his clumsy punt?"

Charon regarded him sadly as he let some other souls by. "How is—well, that is, they can't, my boy. It's decreed by reason."

The Foreign Yachts in the Ocean Race



Some Interesting Facts About Lord Brassey's Sunbeam, the Earl of Crawford's Valhalla and Herr Tietjens's Hamburg---All Ready for the Contest for the Kaiser's Cup.

THE peaceful battles of yaching men have brought many smart craft together off the old Sandy Hook Lightship in past years. But never before has there been assembled such a variety of racing yachts nor such a number in one event of this nature as will meet outside the Hook on Tuesday for the start of the ocean race for the cups offered by Emperor William of Germany. Large and small, there will be eleven yachts entered, the flower of the yachting fleets of Germany, England, and America. And in rigs they will range from the big Englishman Valhalla, the only yacht full-ship rigged afloat, to the little Fleur de Lys, the smallest craft entered for the race and a perfect type of the American racing schooner.

Varied as these yachts are, the personalities of their owners and commanders are even more widely differentiated. They include a Scottish Earl, an English Lord, a Wall Street banker, who holds a master's license and is his own navigator and sailing master; a Gloucester fisherman, who is the original of the character of Johnnie Ohlsen in J. B. Connolly's stories, and the hero of the two last America's Cup races. And the guests include half a dozen "Honorables" in the British peerage, a well-known writer of sea stories, and amateur yachtsmen from the three countries represented in the race.

The eight yachts of American register—Utowana, Apache, Ailsa, Endymion, Thistle, Atlantic, Hildegarde, and Fleur de Lys—have already been described in THE TIMES, and their records are generally well known to the average man or woman who is interested in yachting. With the foreign entries, however, we are not so familiar; for none of them has ever been seen in the Port of New York before they arrived here within the past fortnight for the 'cross-ocean race to England. These include the Valhalla, the Earl of Crawford's entry; the Sunbeam, with Lord Brassey aboard, and the Hamburg, English built, but owned by a syndicate of German yachtsmen and entered in the name of the Hamburg Yacht Club. The biggest and most picturesque of the foreigners is the Valhalla, an auxiliary yacht that resembles, as she lies at anchor, a Government training ship more than she does a pleasure vessel. Even to a landsman she is a striking-looking craft, with her white hull, her low yellow stack, her crossed yards, and the long, slender jibbooms forward. The Valhalla hails from Cowes, is 239 feet 6 inches over all, 37 feet 2 inches beam, and registers 647 tons. She was built at Leith in 1892, and is owned by the Earl of Crawford. At one time the yacht was chartered by the Count de Castellane. She carries a crew of sixty men.

The present race is the second one she has ever taken part in, the first one being a run of 360 miles for the Coronation Cup offered by the Earl at the time of King Edward's coronation. Curiously enough the Valhalla was defeated then by one of the American entries for the present race, Allison V. Armour's Utowana. But the Valhalla is no haunter of harbors, nor does her owner belong to the rocking-chair fleet. Years ago the Earl of Crawford took to the sea for his health, and in the four years that have elapsed since he bought the Valhalla she has logged 150,000 knots, having made, among other voyages, one completely around the world. When she dropped anchor off Robbin's Reef Light a fortnight ago she ended a leisurely cruise from Cairo, Egypt, which place she left on Feb. 24. She touched at Gibraltar, where three of the Earl's four cup guests joined the yacht, these being the Hon. W. North, Dr. Corfield, and Mr. Wilbraham. The fourth guest, the Hon. Reginald Brougham, boards the yacht at this port. From Gibraltar the Valhalla sailed for Porto Rico, touching at the Canary Islands, and made the ocean passage under sail all the way. From San Juan she went to Charlotte Harbor, Florida, for the tarpon fishing, and after a fortnight of that sport went to Key West for coal, and then left for New York. The run from Key West to this port of 1,350 miles was made in seven days. Beyond going into the dry dock to be scraped and have her propeller removed, (according to the conditions of the race, propellers must be taken inboard and lashed on deck,) the Earl has no particular plans for the way the Valhalla is to sail the race. All he is hoping for is westerly winds so that he can get his studding sails out. If it blows from the eastward while the race is on the square-rigged Valhalla, Sunbeam, and the Apache and Thistle, too, are going to make a bad showing of it. With a gale behind him the Earl thinks his yacht can make the passage to the Lizard in from nine to fourteen days. If he does it in less than fourteen days he will have the honor of knocking a considerable hole in the record for that voyage, now held by the Endymion.

The owner of the Valhalla is a retired Colonel of the British Army, though on board his yacht he looks as if the royal navy might have owned him as an Admiral. He wears spectacles, behind which kindly eyes glimmer, has a full sandy beard slightly streaked with gray, and his yachting costume afloat is usually of that nondescript character that titled English yachtsmen cling to. One of the striking things about his make-up is a pair of easy old slippers, and when there is the slightest suspicion of rain in the air he invariably dons an old oilskin coat. Since he lives aboard the yacht ten months in the year, comfort is his main consideration in the internal arrangement of his floating home. To what extent he seeks for this is shown in the big deckhouse amidships that he calls his "workroom," but which in its size and fittings savors more of the most comfortable lounging room in the most comfortable club you know. In the centre of this deckhouse stands a big globe, the last cry in the art of the makers of such things, and the lockers contain a complete outfit of nautical instruments, for the owner of the ship practices navigation for his pleasure.

In this workroom is also to be seen the Earl's remarkable collection of postage stamps, twoscore of the volumes devoted to these things being filled exclusively with the stamps that have been issued by the United States. Below decks the cabins are roomy and fitted up with considerable luxury. The color scheme of the decorations is white and gold and red. One odd feature of the owner's suite is the tub in his bathroom. This is several feet above the floor, and to get into it he has to climb a short flight of steps. The advantage of this, according to the owner, is that he was able to get more locker room—the lockers are under the tub—than he would if it had been sunk in the floor, as is the usual custom, or placed directly on it. So far as the speed of this ship is concerned a comparison of the figures recorded on her log with those on the log of the fore-and-aft schooner Hamburg may give a faint idea of the fact that off the wind the square-rigger is not to be sneezed at. On the run across the Atlantic in a light wind, three points aft of the beam, the Valhalla logged 302 knots in twenty-four hours. The Hamburg did 285 knots as her best day's run from the Channel to Sandy Hook. The latter boat, however, is little more than half the length of the Valhalla.

Just what the Hamburg will do in the race is an interesting question, for she is nearer to the old pure English cutter type, made familiar to us by the Madge, Genesta, and Galatea, than any of the other yachts entered for the cups. She comes rightly by her English appearance, for she was designed by Watson and was raced in British waters under the name of Rainbow. Now she is owned by a syndicate of German yachtsmen, and her racing manager is Herr Adolph Tietjens, the Vice President of the syndicate. She has the long pole bowsprit of the usual British pattern, her mainmast, a whacking big stick, is considerably longer than her foremast, and she carries a cross-jack yard on the latter to spread a squaresail in the event of having light winds from anywhere abaft of the beam. She was built in 1898, is 132 feet 7 inches over all, and is 23 feet 9 inches beam, and carries a crew of thirty men. The Hamburg flies the flag of the "Nord Deutscher Regatta Verein," and the syndicate that owns her was formed in 1903 for the purpose of training sailors for the German mercantile marine. The purchase of the schooner and her entry in this race were a purely patriotic impulse of the syndicate, the members of which wished to see Germany represented in the run for their Emperor's cups. They know how pleased the Kaiser would be if a yacht owned and sailed by Germans won the first prize.

Herr Tietjens, the managing owner, is the Vice President of the syndicate and is sixty-five years old. He is a tall, gray-haired man, with a florid complexion, and has not been in New York before since 1863. In speaking of the Hamburg the day after he arrived in the harbor, he declared that Americans ought to know her well, since Capt. Barr "beat the life out of her with the Ingomar in the Baltic regatta last year." He is to have as his guest on the run to the Lizard, Mr. Piconelli, an amateur yachtsman of Berlin.

In many ways Lord Brassey's Sunbeam outranks in interest both of the other foreign entries. She is the oldest yacht among the competitors, for she was built at Seacombe in 1874. Technically she is called a three-masted auxiliary schooner, but as she is square-rigged on the foremast, to call her a barkentine is more exact. She is 150 feet over all and 27 feet 6 inches beam, and usually carries a crew of 30 men. The Sunbeam has a propeller that differs from the type used in most auxiliaries, in that it hoists up into a well when she is under sail. But aside from her career as a yacht, the Sunbeam has another side to her history. Before the Brasseys started on their first voyage, of which Lady Anne Brassey has written the story called "Around the World in the Sunbeam," they had practically no social position. After the book was published and the Brasseys, who had only been "coal barons" before, set up a town house in Park Lane, Lady Brassey's husband began to ascend the ladder of British naval fame. Lady Brassey continued to write books of the voyage of the yacht she had made famous, and had just finished the pages of the fourth and last one when she died at sea, and was buried in the Indian Ocean. For years Lord Brassey has held a master's license, and navigated the Sunbeam himself, and he is to skipper the big yacht in the present race.

As the American entries stand now they include the three-masted auxiliary schooner Utowana, the yawl Ailsa, and the bark-rigged Apache. These three were designed by Englishmen, and the last two were built in Great Britain. Of purely native design and build are the two-masted schooner Endymion, the top-sail schooner Thistle, the only yacht of that rig afloat; the three-masted schooner Atlantic, and the two-masters Hildegarde and Fleur de Lys. Thus it will be seen that, with the exception of a brig, every one of the regular types of rigs carried by oceangoing vessels will be represented in the fleet that gathers off the Hook on Tuesday afternoon. Knowing ones among the rocking-chair fleet are backing the chances of the Atlantic pretty heavily, partly on account of the 22,000 square yards of sail she carries and partly for the reason that Capt. Charlie Barr is to be in command of her. Commodore Robert E. Tod is to be his own skipper on the Thistle and navigator as well, while the little Fleur de Lys is to be skippered by Capt. Bohlin of the Gloucester fishing fleet, who has a crew of fifteen sailors under him, every one of whom have served in Gloucester schooners.

For the sake of making this record complete it may be mentioned that the idea of this international ocean yacht race was first suggested by Commodore Tod of the Atlantic Yacht Club to Sir Thomas Lipton while the owner of the Shamrocks was last here in 1903. The Irish Knight promptly offered a cup to be sailed for in 1904, but withdrew his offer when he learned that the Emperor William was desirous of giving such a prize. A controversy arose between the Atlantic and the New York Yacht Clubs over the management of the race, which was settled by the Kaiser in his characteristic fashion. He placed the arrangements for the race in the hands of the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club of Germany and a committee in America made up of Commodore Hebbinghaus, Naval Attaché of the German Embassy; Allison V. Armour, New York Yacht Club, and C. L. F. Robinson, Atlantic Yacht Club. The race is to start at 2:15 o'clock on the afternoon of May 16, though if the conditions are unfavorable the starting committee has been empowered to change the hour. A light wind or the proximity of one or more big liners to the starting point might make this postponement advisable.

The yachts will cross an imaginary line drawn between the Sandy Hook Lightship and a committee boat flying the burgee of the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club. Once across there is no time allowance to be considered, nothing but covering the 3,000 miles of tossing water that lie between our shores and the point on the southwest coast of England called the Lizard. A mile off the lighthouse on that point a big tug will lie at anchor, and the yachts are required by the rules of the race to pass between the tug and the lighthouse for the finish. Although it is usual to speak of this great sporting event as a race for the Emperor's Cup, it will be, as a matter of fact, a race for three cups. The Kaiser has laid down the conditions that at least three yachts must start to make a race of it and has also promised additional rewards in the proportion of one more cup to each three extra starters. Since there are eleven entries, this will make it necessary to send in a royal order to the Court silversmith for three cups whose future owners will have cause to regard them as trophies of the greatest yacht race ever sailed, barring the one in which the America, of immortal memory, figured.

THE FIRST TRANSATLANTIC RACE.

TAKING season for season as they come to us, on an average, the forthcoming race for the Kaiser's Cups will be sailed under very different weather conditions from those which befell the three schooners, Henrietta, Vesta, and Fleetwing, in the first-across-the-ocean yacht race of thirty-nine years ago for a stake of $90,000. Those three yachts made the race in the depth of Winter, starting from New York Harbor on Dec. 11, 1866, and finishing off the Needles a fortnight later, the Henrietta crossing the line on Christmas Eve, the Vesta and Fleetwing finishing in the early morning hours of the great holiday. And for almost the entire length of that 3,000-mile passage they were accompanied by strong westerly winds, heavy seas, and alternate squalls of rain, hail, and snow. Neither the passengers nor crew were in dry clothes from beginning to end of the race, and they suffered every hardship, barring shipwreck, that could come to any one making the passage in the Winter months.

All seasons bring all sorts of weather to the North Atlantic, but it is fair to assume that the passage in the month of May, as in the present case, will be attended by better weather than in that month long ago when the Henrietta beat her two rivals so handily. In the matter of the attending fleet to witness the start of the present race there will probably be a tremendous difference, due solely to season. The newspaper accounts of the start of that first race speak of the "large fleet that went down to the Hook on the morning of Dec. 11, and then mention that the fleet consisted of six or seven steamers, the largest public one having "forty passengers on board."

That it was a nipping cold day, in spite of the fact that the sun was shining, is also disclosed by a statement in the newspaper accounts. This steamer, with its forty passengers, left the dock at 11 o'clock, and by half an hour later it was necessary to pass "the brandy bottle around to warm up." Yachting customs differed considerably then from nowadays, for when the excursion steamers went down the bay, the three schooners were still lying at anchor with their sails furled, on exhibition so to speak. This also gave the yachting reporters time to observe that, whereas the crews of the Henrietta and Vesta were in uniform, the men on the Fleetwing were attired in such nondescript costumes as are common to seamen in the mercantile marine.

The start of the race was from the Spit Buoy, a good five miles inside the present starting point, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. What Capt. Samuells, who was the skipper of the Henrietta, describes as "a good, stiff breeze of from twenty-five to thirty miles an hour" was blowing out of the northwest, and there was little jockeying before the start. When the Henrietta and Fleetwing crossed the line they were carrying all lower sails and gaff topsails on fore and main mast, the Vesta depending on getting along without her topsails. A few moments after the start, however, the first two schooners hoisted squaresails on their foremasts, and the Vesta was compelled to add her topsails to keep in the running. In that fashion they disappeared to the eastward, and, although they reached England fourteen days later, the first news of the finish of the race did not reach here until time for the morning newspapers of Dec. 30. A break in the Newfoundland cable caused this delay of five days. Something other than yachting customs was different in those days.

It was learned that the Henrietta had beaten her rivals handsomely. She passed the Needles at 5:45 P. M. on the afternoon of Dec. 24, while the Fleetwing came along at 2 o'clock the next morning and the Vesta an hour and a half later. The Henrietta's time was 13 days and 22 hours. With the arrival of the Fleetwing came the news of the only catastrophe of the voyage, the loss of six men off her bowsprit on the eighth day of the run. That gale caused considerable anxiety and almost twelve hours' delay to the three boats in the race. From the time they parted company on the first night out, strong westerly winds followed them for seven days, accompanied by rain and sleet and snow. The Henrietta laid her course along the regular steamship line, the Fleetwing going to the north, the Vesta holding to the southward. On the eighth day the wind rose to the height of a gale and it was while trying to stow the jib, preparatory to heaving the schooner to, that the Fleetwing lost her men.

Capt. Samuells, on the Henrietta, prepared for heavy weather and against loss of his men through the sweep of a heavy sea by an old salt's trick. His schooner was running to the eastward under close-reefed foresail and jib when the gale was at its worst and with the furled mainsail hauled up six feet above the saddle. On this perch the two sailors on watch were lashed as were the two hands at the wheel and the two officers. When the gale was at its worst a terrific sea washed over the schooner, burying her almost completely under it. But the men escaped going overboard. The foresail was ripped out of the bolt ropes and then the sailing master decided it was time to stop racing and heave to. The Henrietta lay in this fashion from 3 o'clock that evening until 4 o'clock the next morning. Then the gale dropped down to a dead calm and for four or five hours the yacht made no headway. It was on this day she made her shortest run, 113 knots in the twenty-four hours. Her best run for the same time was 280 knots. With the exception of the time she was hove-to she made the entire passage on one tack.

Her skipper, who is still hale and hearty at eighty-three years of age, is of the opinion that if it blows from the westward during the coming race the ship-rigged Valhalla will beat everything in the race. "When she gets her studding sails out and that big spinnaker of hers," he declared the other day with the enthusiasm of a boy, "you couldn't put your hand between the sails. But if it blows from the eastward then the Atlantic is my choice for a winner. If it blows from the east while the race is on the square-riggers won't stand a ghost of a show."

TWO VIEW POINTS

Brown, a Wall Street speculator.
Smith, a suburbanite carrying home the Sunday dinner.
Scene, a railway train.

BROWN—Have you been in the market lately?

Smith—I should think I had. Isn't it disgusting?

Brown—It suits me all right. You must have been on the wrong side.

Smith—One side is just as bad as the other, to my way of thinking.

Brown—I don't see how you make that out. There was a good chance for a clean-up this week.

Smith—Well, they evidently didn't take advantage of it. They never seem to.

Brown—Oh, some did. I was in it.

Smith—Well, there is no evidence of it.

Brown—Ha, ha! I suppose you want me to buy you a drink. Well, come on, and when we leave the train I'll do it.

Smith—I won't object to a drink, but why should you think I want you to buy?

Brown—Because of the clean-up.

Smith—I don't see why you should celebrate that uncommon event—if there was one.

Brown—Why, it put me on my feet.

Smith—Well, the lack of it threw me on my back. I slipped in the mess and fell flat.

Brown—Didn't you have time to get out?

Smith—I got out and stayed out after it happened, and I am too sore to go back again.

Brown—Where do you do your trading?

Smith—With Packer & Sons.

Brown—Are they a regular stock house?

Smith—They have a connection with the Chicago Stock Yards.

Brown—You mean the Produce Exchange, don't you?

Smith—Well, perhaps I do. All I know is they make a specialty of pork, butter, and eggs.

Brown—What do you want to deal with them for; why don't you get something good for your money?

Smith—Oh, they're all right, except I think they're kind of dirty in their way of doing business.

Brown—Have you ever had any dealings with Stockmann & Co.?

Smith—I never heard of them. I used to trade with Brown, Bean & Co., but they are not much good, except for coffee.

Brown—I suppose they are connected with the Coffee Exchange. You're getting the wrong kind of stuff, old man. Why don't you buy some copper?

Smith—Copper! What do I want to buy copper for? I can't eat copper.

Brown—What are you talking about? Who said anything about stuff to eat?

Smith—What else have we been talking about except things to eat—and a drink?

Brown—I was talking about the stock market.

Smith—Oh, you were, eh? Well, the drinks are on me. I was talking about Fulton Market.

The Wild Beast Traffic: Perilous and Picturesque

DRIVING ELEPHANTS INTO PITS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Probably George Krisel Knows As Much About It As Any Man in the World--A Transatlantic Shipment and Its Preliminaries.

THE rusty old German liner lumbers noisily into Quarantine, and then lies motionless on the tide. An officer with broad, red, bewhiskered face and a soiled uniform stands at the head of the companion ladder, and he smiles a peculiar smile as a husky, screaming ululation rises from below.

"The animals are getting hungry," he explains; "you know we have several hundred of them on the 'tween decks. Want to see them? All right, I shall call George Krissel; he will show them to you."

In another minute Krissel is at our side. Krissel, in his way, is probably the most competent animal man in the world. He is not a trainer, or even a tamer; he is more. He is a sort of an animal cook, and his special business is the personal management of wild animal tours. He receives them—lions, tigers, leopards, elephants, everything—at Hamburg, where they have been brought fresh from their native wilds, and not only superintends their shipment aboard a vessel bound for this port, but he sails with them to make sure that they arrive safely and in good health. And be sure that if the tiger gets off on his diet and needs a nice fresh live rabbit to tone up his system, Krissel will be aware of that fact almost before the tiger is—and, ergo, a nice big jumping bunny is sacrificed in accordance with the precepts of wild beast materia medica. Then, too, one can never tell just when the big boa is going to rouse from his last gorge; when he does he wants a toothsome young goat, and he wants it quick. It is a part of Krissel's duties to anticipate the boa's appetite with all possible expedition.

He is a quiet, unassuming man, with stoop shoulders and bushy whiskers, and he leads the way to the 'tween decks without a word. Perhaps the uninitiated may believe that a tour through the animal section of a freight carrying vessel is an unimpressive experience. Well, let them try it and see! This can be said at the outset—it is somewhat different from a menagerie. It means something to come into close proximity to a hundred and odd wild animals who have been ruthlessly snatched from their lairs in Africa or Asia, or elsewhere, and clapped into little barred boxes, not as large as dry goods cases, slammed in and out of dark holds in the vessels of several seas on the way to Hamburg; then finally placed in the stygian 'tween decks of a German hooker. The swinging cross seas of the North Atlantic have not improved their tempers or their nervous systems, and the visitor at Quarantine is quickly impressed with that fact. The howls and the whines and the barks cease abruptly as the strangers enter. For they bring the smell of land, and the great beasts sniff inquiringly, and hungrily, too, (the reporter was ready to swear to that,) and when he sought comfort of Krissel, the great animal man only smiled.

The cages lined both sides of the gloomy space, with a little passageway between the boxes. Perhaps this passageway was three feet wide, not more. The cages were piled two and sometimes three deep. In the bottom cage, for instance, would be a tiger; in the next above a smaller animal, say, a leopard or a lynx, and above that a parrot, or a bunch of meerkats. Think of it! A three-foot passageway, with ferocious animals, stretching along for 100 feet on all sides. Talk about nightmares! The reporter's hair stiffened out like so many pieces of wire, and he wished most fervently that he had not come. It was more agreeable, he felt, to see these animals in a menagerie where the cages are ample and the bars an inch thick.

"Better keep in the middle of the aisle," says one of the animal men; "these fellows sometimes reach out at you."

Words such as these of course hardly tended to reassure.

It really was too dark to see much. One caught a view of the cages stretching away in gloomy perspective until lost in the darkness, of rows of glowing green eyes, and great teeth with the flash of red tongue writhing between. A zebra switched the reporter with his tail and he turned, only to jump almost out of his skin as an elephant touched him on the other shoulder with his trunk. He was hardly over this scare when, zip! a leopard reached out after his coat tails.

In one way this lower deck section was a good place to visit, the joy and relief in being able to leave it furnished the biggest and most absorbing sensations that this monotonous world has held for the reporter in the past few months at least.

Ever so frequently the newspapers chronicle the arrival of a veritable Noah's ark at this port, but somehow the announcement excites but little attention. In point of fact who of THE TIMES readers will remember that the Minneapolis, packed with animals, arrived here only last Wednesday, and that George Krissel with a load of wild beasts arrived here on the Humburg liner Christiania some time previous? And yet this wild beast traffic, little known and understood as it is, is no small part of our oversea commerce.

There are nearly a dozen firms in this city which carry on an immense business in the transportation of wild beasts fresh from the jungle. And this number, of course, does not include such immense foreign animal firms as the Hagenbecks. It is a paying business, as, indeed, are all businesses where the demand exceeds the supply. The demand for wild beasts is far greater than the supply, and as a consequence prices are good and the dealers men of wealth. The extent of this demand may be appreciated when one considers that most of the great cities in the United States have zoological parks or menageries, and that the animals are constantly being purchased by them. Then there are private collectors and circuses and the like, who are ever ready to pay the highest prices for desirable animals. The animal dealer who could secure and bring to this country three or four gorillas would make a small fortune. But no dealer has ever succeeded in doing this. The gorillas die in a few weeks in captivity; they could not stand an ocean trip for a day.

Bartels & Co. are the largest dealers in wild beasts in this country. The firm has a big animal park out on the Jersey meadows, and a main office on Greenwich Street, this city. A representative of Mr. Bartels, when seen there yesterday, talked interestingly of the business in which his firm is engaged.

"A large wild animal dealer," he said, "imports considerably more than a hundred large wild animals each year. For instance, our record for one year which I happen to have at hand shows that we imported in that period twenty elephants, thirty-five camels, twenty tigers, five lions, forty-five leopards, twenty pumas, eighteen panthers, and hundreds of birds and monkeys and small things. Cubs—lion and tiger and bear cubs—are in special demand by wealthy families in New York, and in fact throughout the country. They are feared and petted like kittens, but in the end they outgrow their playfulness and the families who bought them from us are only too willing to pay us to come and take them away when they attain any sort of growth. We have received many orders for hippopotami, but the beasts are hard to capture, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred they do not live through the voyage. In fact, menageries throughout the country have had to depend of late years upon the progeny of the two hippopotami in Central Park for specimens.

"Like all animal dealers, we maintain expert animal catchers in all parts of the world, and it is these men who fill the ships which arrive here. The Hagenbecks have two collecting stations, one in Calcutta and the other in Aden, Arabia. From these points the animal catchers go forth and spend months in the wilds, returning to the stations with their catch. We ourselves send catchers direct from this country—at present we have twenty-two men in South America, on the hot sands of Africa, in the Himalayas, and elsewhere, filling our orders. One of them was recently in Siberia on a camel hunt, two are now in the East Indies trapping tigers, and so they are spread about in places where wild beasts abide.

"Sometimes we receive an order for a large number of elephants. We telegraph this order to our catchers in the elephant country, who after organizing the natives into a hunting band, proceed to collect the desired number. A huge inclosure is built in one of the main elephant paths, and at night when the big animals come to feed they are driven into the inclosure, or keddah, by means of fires and shouts and the firing of guns. Beaters on tame elephants then ride into this inclosure and rope the beasts, and in a short time they become accustomed to being led about. Elephants are naturally mild, and were this not the case they never could be captured, because of their great, hulking strength.

"The natives also capture elephants in pits, a barbarously cruel method in which more than 50 per cent. are killed by the fall. The animal catchers take tigers and lions in pits also. They dig a hole, cover it with matting, and place on this matting a dead goat. At night the lion or tiger steals from his lair, sees the goat, and springs upon it. The matting of course gives way, and down into the pit goes the roaring beast. Then the catchers run up and throw nets into the pit, and the struggling animal soon becomes hopelessly entangled. Nooses are then lowered into the pit, and the beast is dragged out to the cage. Six out of every ten are killed in this process. Leopards and jaguars and the smaller animals are caught in traps just as mice are caught, and monkeys are also trapped. Such great beasts as the rhinoceros and the like are not captured by the animal men, but are secured from native potentates, who give them away as a mark of special esteem or barter them for brass and other trifling but showy gewgaws.

"The capture of great boas in Sumatra is not attended with any great amount of difficulty. They are either taken when lying in a gorged stupor and dumped into bags or else a dead animal is placed in a huge box. The boa butts into the box and curls about the animal. Then all you have to do is slam the door and fasten it and carry the box away.

"We take comparatively few lions from the wilds now. It is cheaper to buy them in captivity. Polar, grizzly, and Russian bears also are mainly bought and sold in captivity, but other wild beasts are taken in their lairs. When all of our orders have been filled our foreign catchers superintend the shipment of their catches to Calcutta, Aden, or some other port. The animals are transported on elephants' backs or on ox carts, and the task is an arduous one not only as regards keeping the animals secure, but in seeing that they do not fall ill and die. Each year, despite the care of these men, we lose by death about 20 per cent. of our importations. The death of a lion involves a loss of $1,500, a tiger about the same, and so on down to elk, the death of which entails a loss of about $200.

"Agents must know all about animals, their ailments, and the remedies for them, and the success of a firm depends largely upon their skill. When they get on shipboard then George Krissel must look after them, and he realizes that it is of the utmost importance that none of the big animals dies on the trip. If a lion or a tiger dies, then, in addition to financial loss, all our plans have to be changed, and agents who have been sent out, say, after camels, are recalled and sent out to get another lion or tiger to take the place of the dead one. Oh, yes, it is a paying business, but it has its drawbacks and its worries."

Krissel's responsibility is tremendous. He must see above everything that the animals preserve perfect health, and, as they are prone to seasickness, and the close, heavy atmosphere of the lower decks is not especially beneficial to beasts accustomed to the free air, it can readily be imagined that his task is a difficult one. The python must be kept in a tropical temperature near the steam heat, the sick deer must be dieted, and the uneasy tigers and other mammals attended to and cared for in various ways. Most of the food for the beasts is carried aboard the vessel as live stock—steers, lambs, and goats—and they are slaughtered day after day as the vessel progresses on her trip. Raw beef goes to the carnivorous animals, with occasional chickens and rabbits to tone up their systems, while an elephant eats 700 pounds of green fodder in a day. Monkeys like cocoanuts and bananas, and, in fact, it is an elaborate bill of fare that Krissel has to provide day after day.

Usually an animal-laden vessel arrives here with not a single death to report, and that fact goes to the credit of George Krissel. Sometimes, too, a wild beast gets loose and takes charge of the deck until Krissel is summoned. Krissel usually knows how to capture him, but he is modest and would not tell of his experiences in that line.

THE "CAPTAIN."

A HEAVY PASSENGER EMBARKING.

STRONG LANGUAGE.

WHILE passing along Regent Street, in London, one day not long since," said a well-known New Yorker, "I saw a cabhorse knock down a dignified, well-dressed man as he attempted to cross the crowded thoroughfare. The horse was moving slowly at the time, and the man was more jarred than hurt. But when he regained his feet he was simply boiling over with rage. He dashed madly after his silk hat, which was in imminent danger of being crushed by the wheels of a hansom, and then rushed in another direction for his cane. The street was jammed, and the driver had not been able to move more than a few feet from the spot where he had run down the foot passenger.

"After securing his hat and cane the man jumped on the sidewalk, glared up at the driver, and tried to speak, but was actually rendered temporarily inarticulate by his anger. I lingered to see the finish of the incident, as I expected, as soon as his feelings had subsided sufficiently to permit him to speak, to hear an eruption of abuse, thickly intermingled with strong words, such as would be likely to come from the average American placed under similar circumstances.

"Finally, fairly quivering with rage, and all the while shaking both fists at the cabby, he succeeded in uttering the single word:

"'Sir!'

"And then indignantly strode away."

ONE TOO MANY: A THREE-MINUTE SKETCH

A VINE-COVERED PIAZZA. Behind a pretty tea table sits a prettier hostess. Her three friends, and A Man grouped about the table in comfortable wicker chairs. The man looks decidedly out of place, yet evinces a stubborn determination to hold his own.

Hostess—Two lumps, Jack? Three? You are incorrigible. Now I know why you invariably send boxes of candy instead of flowers. You can't share the flowers, but you may—if you call on the heels of the gift—at least hold a post-mortem over your candy. How many, Mamie?

Mamie (with some asperity)—One, dear. (Turns again to May, with whom she is having an animated beneath-breath conversation.)

Jack—Oh, I say, that's hardly fair, is it? What are you two whispering about? (The hostess and Mary put their heads together and exchange an undertoned shot or two.) Come, you might tell a fellow. Its about Jane's wedding, isn't it? I heard "lingerie," and that usually means that some poor father is being bled for a trousseau. Well, she's a lucky girl, that's all I can say for her.

The Three Marys in contemptuous chorus: Lucky girl! Is that the way a man looks at it?

Jack—That's the way I look at it. Why, she's had her eye on Jim since her first long frock. Both eyes, in fact. And if she's brought him to tow at last, I say she's lucky. Can you deny it?

Mary, (chillingly,)—I deny most emphatically that she has had her eye on him, as you call it. I suppose you will say that she became engaged to Jonathan because her eyes were on Jim and she couldn't see what a horrible sort of fiancé she was getting, and that the engagement was finally broken, not because Jonathan could no longer hide his true character from her, but because her eyes were still so enmeshed in the contemplation of Jim that she didn't care what was happening at the other end of the line.

Jack—Well, I shouldn't like to put myself on record for saying that any girl didn't know what was happening all along the line. By the way, it's a fishing line you are speaking of, of course. But I stick to my original statement that Jane has never swerved that compelling eye of hers from Jim since she put on long frocks. Of course, if she chose to cast a line to Jonathan while she was waiting for a bite, that was her affair, but I don't doubt it was some feminine method of pulling poor old Jim in. You see, in my vocabulary, women are all anglers, and men are all fish. Pretty expert some of them become at it, too, I can tell you. As the song says, "All their success depends more or less on the proper kind of bait." Jane's bait is her compelling eye, and Jim rose to it time and time again, until she finally landed him.

Hostess—Jack, you are disgraceful. Do you mean to say that all women are anglers, that they haven't anything better to think about than the bait for their man hooks?

Jack—You interpret me perfectly. Why, may I make bold to ask, are you wearing that becoming mauve gown, and why have you had your tea table placed at just this corner of the piazza, where there is just the stunning setting in leaves and vines that you need to bring out the picturesqueness that is one of your chief charms? Surely not for the benefit of these three girls, who are no doubt appreciative, but who would enjoy your tea quite as much if your frock were green and there were no background at all. Because, if you will permit me to answer my own question, you guessed that I or some other equally discerning masculine creature who happened in, would be lured on by just such bait. Wait a moment. Tell me, Mamie, why you are cultivating your voice so strenuously this winter when you know perfectly well you will never make use of it outside of your own music room? And you, May, why are you going in for athletics when you told me six months ago you disliked any outdoor exercise? As to Mary, will she deny that her highest ambition just at present is to embroider an altar cloth that will meet with the approval of artistically minded clergymen, though she never had a needle 'twixt finger and thumb in all her life before? Oh! don't blush, girls, I'm not going to pry into the secrets of your bait. I merely want you to own up honestly that you are too good anglers not to enjoy the sport. By Jove! there's no use looking daggers at me. I know I am one among four, and a mere man, and that you are all dying to gossip about Jane's trousseau and gloat over her rich haul, but I'm an apostle of truth. You don't hear it often from the flattering lips of men, and I half believe you don't care to hear it, do you? (The girls rise simultaneously.) What, not going! It's too bad to let a mere man drive you away. When am I to hear you sing, Mamie? And, May, we'll have a set of tennis some day if you can spare me an hour. Do, Mary dear, let me lend you some gloves to practice your needlework on. They're sadly in need of— (Exit girls.) Well, thank heaven! Now, sweetheart, I'll tell you how altogether lovely you look in that mauve gown. (He possesses himself of her hand.) Will you forgive me for being rude to your friends?

Hostess—Do you honestly like me in it, Jack? I hoped you would. But what made you say such things? You don't mean them; do you?

Jack—Of course not, my angel. It was rout or be routed, and I had to see you alone. I've brought the ring.

Hostess—O Jack!

CALLY RYLAND.

Not Up on Astronomy.

According to a story told by Henry Berlinger, Secretary of the Municipal Civil Service Board, a candidate for appointment to the police force was recently asked to tell the distance from the moon to the earth. He wrote the following answer:

"I don't know the distance, but I am sure it will never get on my beat, even when it is full."

Incomprehensible.

Tommy—Who is this Henry James that mamma talks so much about, pop?

His Father—Hush, my son. You're not old enough to understand such things.

Etiquette for Booker Washington.

WHEN the South was startled by the news that President Roosevelt had dined Booker T. Washington, a Fredericsburg lady interviewed her cook. "What do you think, aunty, Booker Washington has been to dinner with the President." The old colored woman was electrified. "What is dat you say, Missy—Booker Washington been to dinner with de Pres'dent?" "Certainly, aunty." "Dat nigger done took dinner with a white man? Sholy not, Missy." "Yes, truly, aunty." "He shouldn't have gwine, Missy; he ought to have said no when de Pres'dent axed him." "Yes, but don't you see, aunty, he couldn't say no to the President." Then, as aunty appeared unconvinced, she added: "What would you have done?" "Me?" asked the old mammy. "I should've said: 'Scuse me, Marse Pres'dent, I ain't hungry."

The Game of Kings.

Lady Playmore (whispering sub rosa)—His Majesty seems slightly embarrassed over something.

Lord Jester—Ah! A royal flush!

Why Move?

Mounted Officer (at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street)—Step lively, there, or you'll be run down, my friend.

Van Tipple—Whaah 'at? Skip. Ha-ha-ha, when ev'body's comin' my way, eh, Jack?

The Men Who Work in the Sunless Depths of Skyscrapers Beneath the Streets and Under the River ---Cooks, Subwaymen, Tunnelers, Pressmen

WALL STREET being its counting room, Harlem and the Bronx its respective attic and roof, and Broadway or Fifth Avenue its dazzling show window, New York has yet a basement extending from the Battery to the Bronx, in an almost unbroken chain of cells, where fifty thousand or more underground workers are obscurely employed—so obscurely that the rushing city seldom pauses to ponder the very interesting fact.

They are the moles of the metropolis, driving their trades by day and night in the sunless catacombs of twentieth century life.

On first thought the reader may prepare for another glance at the Subway—the oldest as well as newest thing in town. But, while the Subway, with its four thousand workers and car shifters, has the centre of the stage, there is a growing army of cave men and women on whose manoeuvres the sun never shines. On the surface, the price of land ranging from a hundred to some thousand dollars a square foot, there is no room for them, so, bowing to the necessity of economizing space, they are driven to pursue their callings underground.

Only in recent years have exigencies of space made it necessary for so many men, women and children to vacate the upper air and descend underground in search of a livelihood. Strictly speaking, the exodus began with the advent of the skyscraper, the tunnels, subway transit, and such contemporary creations. But with the coming of many hotels and office buildings, which not only grope starward, but plant their iron and granite feet three and four floors underground; with the arrival of a twenty-mile Subway and the approach of a great sub-river tunnel from the Jersey shore, a new era has fairly dawned at the mouth of the Hudson.

Take the greater new hotels, such as the St. Regis or the Hotel Astor, or even the now venerable Waldorf-Astoria. Of those who dine at the magnificent hostelry at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street approximately few know that the St. Regis kitchens are buried two full floors underground, while the great engine and boiler-rooms are one and two floors below the kitchens.

Hot enough down there, one may imagine off-hand. But such a one can never have visited the wonderlands of catering and engineering above which the splendid hotel towers skyward. For it is as cool and delightful in the lowest tier down there as it is in the rarefied atmosphere of a hundred-dollar-a-day suite above stairs, the reason being that every cubic foot of air breathed in or under the hotel is equably distributed by a remarkable system of fans and filters.

A dozen engineers, firemen, and supernumeraries toil by day and another dozen by night three floors below the Fifth Avenue entrance, and a hundred cooks and scullions shape and fashion the St. Regis dishes forty feet below ground. Far under ground also are the wine vaults and their keepers, who pass their working hours in cobwebbed silence unbroken by the proud parade above.

At the Waldorf, the Hotel Astor, Delmonico's, Sherry's, La Rochelle, at or under nearly every new café and hostelry in the city it is the same story. Approximately forty Greater New York hotels have subterranean kitchens, not to mention the numerous rathskellers and rendezvous of the beefsteak clubs. Go some evening into the great Astor kitchens and you will find it suggesting a vast catacomb, peopled by flitting, white-capped-and-aproned gnomes. The day is divided into periods of turmoil and repose. It is a sort of checkered pousse café, apportioned in layers of industry and rest.

Before daybreak come the regiment of scrubwomen, with their buckets and brushes. They resemble an army of crabs as they fall upon the floor, retreating ever rearward as they scrub and rub, until the floor shines like a lake of glass. At 6 in the morning the second cook arrives, removes his street attire, dons a snowy apron and a Parisian turban, and begins his fourteen-hour working day.

Hard on his heels come the five roasting and broiling cooks. They also undergo a sudden transformation and are ready for business in the twinkling of an electric bulb, no sun ever reaching there. Presently come others and others, until the region is alive with swarming caps and aprons. By 8 of the clock the order clerk is undergoing a vocal bombardment. Tubes are rattling like Gatling guns, the time clock snaps in terrier fashion, the announcer casts his voice in various directions, and Tom, Dick, and Harry jump hither and thither until their snowy caps are as white pigeons in a wheat field.

While breakfast is raging around him Chef Rudloff sits quietly in his subterranean office mapping out the campaign for the morrow or sallies forth among the scampering waiters who have business in one eye and the anticipation of tips in the other. Thus from breakfast to dinner and then to supper and the smaller morning hours a score of Broadway and Fifth Avenue kitchens are a-swarm with their hundreds of cooks, chefs, and caterers in ordinary. For not until those smaller hours is the public appetite satisfied and Broadway emptied as a sign that the weary waiters and cooks can don their street garb and issue forth into the upper air.

Meanwhile, upward and downward under the island, day and night, trains are moving in the Subway. When the Broadway and Fifth Avenue kitchens are depopulated the Subway trains are running infrequently, which means that the Interborough forces between midnight and dawn are considerably less than during the rush hours of the day and evening.

\+ \+ \+

But as dawn begins to creep into the highways and byways, and incidentally into the great storage yards at One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street and Broadway and One Hundred and Forty-eighth Street and Lenox Avenue, blue uniformed men begin arriving in squads and legions. Near at hand is the hour for the day shift. As it strikes, the men begin manning their respective trains, the motormen, one by one, steer a course for the granite mouths of the great underground caverns and, one by one, put the sun behind them. So begins their artificial day below the city.

Prior to the opening of the Subway an army of ten thousand was marching slowly with pick and shovel under the metropolis—blasting a way for the four thousand operatives who have superseded them. Of those ten thousand—the same number as the army sung by Homer—some twelve or fifteen hundred are still undermining the Battery and the East River en route to Brooklyn.

Day and night the work of finding a subway to Brooklyn is progressing, the submarine tunnel having already been completed three-fourths of the distance. Owing to the need of the extension, there is not an hour of the day or night that a regiment of workmen is not blasting, digging, carting, shoveling, and occasionally stopping to unedge hunger as the giant wedge is driven deeper and deeper under ground and water.

Before long this underground cavern also will be opened for traffic, other train dispatchers, trackmen, switchmen, motormen, guards, ticket choppers, and newsdealers will be recruited, and perhaps another thousand men will be added to the steadily growing army of metropolitan moles.

Simultaneously with the Subway extension the herculean task of building a road under Manhattan island from New Jersey to Long Island is going on deeply and mysteriously. Not one person in a thousand among the multitudes who daily cross the North River thinks or knows of the wonders being woven there out of sight and sound—beneath tug and steamer, ferry, or slimy river bed.

Huge steel tubes, formed segment by segment, are being pushed through the soft mud with a pressure of 5,000 pounds to the square inch, as one would force a piece of gas pipe through a cheese. Some time hence, when comfortable cars are rumbling through these Pennsylvania Railroad and New York and New Jersey Railway tunnels the multitudes will understand the achievement as they understand the Subway now.

Hundreds of workmen are performing this subterranean miracle under the direction of Engineer Charles M. Jacobs—day after day they are facing danger and death, but the work, being an admirable thing, is being pushed along rapidly.

A few days ago a delegation of International Railway Congressmen visited and inspected the new tunnels. They learned that in the south tube of the New York and Jersey tunnel the work was progressing at the rate of thirty feet in sixteen hours, with two shifts of men, eight men in a shift. Incredible, it was pronounced. Having in mind the antiquated method of tunneling in London, the distinguished visitors were surprised that what could not be done under London could be and was being done under New York.

If you listen to Engineer Jacobs you may conclude that the undertaking is very simple and easy. "Of course," he says, "there has probably been nothing in engineering history equal to the rapid progress we are making under the river, but, with the hydraulic shield method and the excellent class of labor employed, it is extremely simple. For instance, the shield pushes forward, forcing the silt to either side and upward, as one would push an awl into leather, and is then followed up with the iron rings placed around the tube. Occasionally we have had our progress barred by rocky formations, the largest of which measured 800 feet in thickness, but the hardest part of the work has probably been completed."

When the 800-foot barrier was encountered, the engineer had to put on his thinking cap. He did it and thought a way around the obstacle. Trap doors in the shield, which formed aprons over the heads of the workmen, were constructed, and through these they were able to drill and blast with comparative ease and safety.

Under improved methods the tunnelers are not permitted to pass immediately from the compressed air locks into the open air, but are required to pass through compartments which prepare them gradually for the atmospheric change.

Twenty-five years ago, in the old tunnel under the Hudson, a score of men were caught in a break and drowned before aid could reach them. Under the present method there is no possibility of such an accident occurring. Electric wires are installed along the line of the tunnel as rapidly as the iron rings are put into place, and Engineer Jacobs, who is physically unable to enter the tunnel himself, owing to atmospheric conditions, sitting in his office at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, can talk by telephone with any workman in the shield, which is now some hundred feet under the river.

When the big tube has been pushed from shore to shore the tunnel will at once be ready for trains. There is no ballasting, no calking, no further finishing touches necessary. The tunnel is being completed foot by foot and the railroad tracks are being laid as fast as the workmen proceed. New York meanwhile drudges and dreams above ground, forgetful of the men who are working day and night under the North River that the city may some day pass another underground milestone by being able to cross on dry land to the Jersey shore.

Still another wing of the underground army is busy pushing the subway up Sixth Avenue. In fact more than 1,000 feet of tunnel have been mined unknown to thousands of pedestrians daily passing overhead. This is the work under way at the Manhattan terminal of the New York and Jersey tunnel. Ten feet below ground the steel tube has pushed its way under West Street and well up Christopher Street, under the New York Central tracks, with heavy freight trains and an enormous volume of heavy traffic constantly passing on the surface of the street.

One tube of the Hudson River tunnel was completed nine months ago and another is nearly half way under the river. It reaches from Hudson Place in Hoboken to the foot of Morton Street in Manhattan, an extension being proposed up Morton to Greenwich Street and through West Tenth Street to Sixth Avenue, thence under Sixth Avenue to Thirty-third Street. Practically all the river tunneling measures thirty-one feet between the tunnel tops and the bottom of the river.

Turning now to the swarm of skyscrapers that has settled on the city, reaching, as some of them do, twenty or more stories into the air, they occasionally descend two, three, and four floors below the street level, and are occupied daily and nightly by janitors, engineers, firemen, and other servants of a twentieth century tower of trade.

Day after day, for 300 days in the year, hundreds, even thousands, of men and women dwell like so many Jonahs in the huge architectural mammals—garnering heat, light, and air for the regiments of tenants above and mustering power to operate the countless elevators plying from dawn to dusk between the earth and sky.

Since New York habitually runs to extremes, it may be cited that, while THE NEW YORK TIMES is edited between the seventeenth and twenty-first floors of its new home, it is printed underground by an army of pressmen, who for some eight hours daily dwell in the metropolitan catacombs.

Down under earth, also, are nearly all, if not all, the Turkish baths of the metropolis, no city in the country having more baths of the Turkish and Russian variety. According to one proprietor, 2,500 persons sojourn every night in these subterranean quarters, the attendants of which number several hundred. Among them are not only pedicures, masseurs, and tonsorial artists, besides swimming masters, but chefs, cooks, and doctors. All of them spend their working hours underground and amid surroundings and conditions as nearly natural as artificial agencies can create.

AN EYE WITNESS OF THE HORRORS OF THE BATUM STRIKES AND RIOTS

MUCH was printed during the months of January and February—especially just after the tremendous disturbances in St. Petersburg—about the riotous condition of the Russian Government of the Caucasus, where a mixed population of Georgians, Armenians, Mingrellians, Imeretes, Tartars, Turks, Jews, Russians, and what not were engaged in strikes, murders, and general disorder. The pied peoples of that part of the country—the isthmus between the Black Sea and the Caspian—do not in general incline to peaceable living together, but a supplementary cause of ill feeling at the time was furnished by the measures of the Russian Government, and especially the action of the late M. de Phleve, then Minister of the Interior, in seizing the property of the Armenian Church. Of the towns in that region the one most frequently mentioned in the dispatches was Baku, but Batum, on the Black Sea, a centre of the petroleum trade and the site of a Russian naval station, though less often mentioned, is not less important. The following is a diary kept at Batum by a business man of the place, beginning with the 18th of January (5th, old style,) the very moment of the beginning of the riots in St. Petersburg.

\+ \+ \+

Short Notes on Recent Events, Batum

Jan. 5-18, 1905, Wednesday—Pozoeff, Mantasheff's manager, fired at in his own house.

Jan. 10-23, Monday—Heavy snowfall last night. Continual snow all day.

Jan. 14-27, Friday—Siderides paid his laborers for four and a half days, Rs. 8.10 per man plus Rs. 1.80 for yesterday, when he did not work. Others had to do the same. One of leading agitators reported arrested by order of Governor. Police Master notified if he wished to live to release him within one hour—which was done. Burglar caught drilling J's safe. Bribed watchman and policeman—let off.

Jan. 16-29, Sunday—Considerable crowds of laborers on quay. Head stevedore of Schutz & Zimmermann beaten in front of Hotel Orient. Prince Courelli murdered about noon in sight of crowds of witnesses. Murderer got off. A sum of Ro. 1,000 was collected for him on the spot. Weather fine.

Jan. 17-30, Monday—Thirteen murders and attempted murders reported last night. All port laborers stopped work. Also work at Custom House stopped. Ayrel discharging lighters were also stopped, also Russian Company's Railway Company's wharf and Rossisky Company's. All cabs ordered in so as to prevent Courelli's funeral. Also undertakers warned on pain of death not to sell coffins. All priests warned will be killed if attend funeral.

Jan. 18-31, Tuesday—Office staffs struck work at Russian Company and Rossisky Company. All cabs and sledges still turned in. Atbarba worked. Courelli's corpse still in mortuary.

Jan. 19-Feb. 1, Wednesday—Russian Company, Rossisky Company, and Artel still stopped. Man nearly kicked to death and strangled opposite Hotel Imperial (centre of town) about noon. At 3:30 Engineer Alexander shot. Big crowd at Custom House. Police Master tried to arrange with men for Artel, but unsuccessful. Then, escorted by Cossacks, he came along quay ordering crowds to disperse, at which they laughed and jeered. All lighters full; all work stopped, only Groveland loading manganese. In evening Betanoff sailed, paid workmen Rs. 1,400—to workmen Diana.

Jan. 20-2, Thursday—During night certain parties drove customs guards from port. No boats allowed out. Baker's man went for water, was mortally stabbed. It appears Baker's man had taken Rs. 5 extra for fetching water instead of water carrier. 100 men, issued tickets; as last party were leaving office a party of 10 Cossacks swooped down on them, rode them down and cut them with their nagaikas; three men badly injured. Men sent off and advise all other laborers in harbor and at factories that Cossacks had beaten them and all work stopped immediately. All lighters and boats stopped. Atbara, Lobella, no work. Groveland worked manganese. No police, no C. H. soldiers in harbor. This was the first day that authorities made any show. Up till to-day mob had full charge. Authorities still unable to remove Courelli's corpse.

Jan. 21-3, Friday.—Clerks meeting anti-employers' organization. Floor nearly broke in and meeting broke up. Work in harbor still stopped. Mantasheff, Siderides, Betanoff, and all regular liners still stopped work. Authorities succeeded in getting Courelli's corpse away by night rail.

Jan. 22-4, Saturday.—Reported that yesterday rails torn up at Samtredi. Railway Inspector and police officials forced to carry red flags at head of demonstration of 2,000 people, then two police officials shot and two spies' houses burned to ground, mob with revolvers preventing any attempts to put out flames. Engineer Alexander buried. Lloyd steamer Castore sailed, paid 10 men 6 days, though no work done. Atabara, no work, all lighters full, except 3, and these refuse to go alongside any ship. Groveland worked. Betanoff, Siderides, Mantachoff worked—no boats, no lighters. Gendarme shot this night. Cabs allowed out to-day.

Jan. 23-5, Sunday.—Good many patrols. Strike continues. Window Imperial smashed. During demonstration at night passing cabby shot dead. Two more sotnias of Cossacks drafted into town from Kars. Mob practically in charge. Courelli corpse still on railway truck at Notanebi.

Jan. 24-6, Monday.—Abdul, Tartar, watchman, ordered off duty last night for special good of his health. He was told that he might catch cold through a bullet hole in his body if he remained on. Boatmen declared for a rise—rise agreed to—put out boats. Rain all day. Most bakers sold out bread in early morning. Most shops closed. Strong patrols all day. "Guadiana" sailed without completing discharging and not loading. Governor issued notice and placarded town. Then all printers went out. Baker, policeman and eating house keeper shot in Turkish market to-day. Turk killed with kindjal in Turkish bazaar. Private company's electric light stopped. Town station run by soldiers. Messagerie paid altogether Rs. 428—discharging about 100 tons of her cargo.

Jan. 25-7, Tuesday—A good many Georgians left town. During last night's demonstration one demonstrator shot dead. Cossacks everywhere, shops all shut, market also. Cossack horse killed. Cossacks beating many people, especially Georgians; no trains to-day. Two wagons licorice paste arrived five days ago; no possibility clear up take delivery. Report Cossack cut off gymnasium boy's head. This is a lie. "Tinos" arrived. Authorities still unable to bury Courelli.

Jan. 26-8, Wednesday.—Nine Turks killed in last three days. No work done to-day, though Artel says they expect to commence to-morrow. Still no local paper. One through train only running, and that only by daylight. Local trains running to Notanebi because required by Gourians. One employer's office wrecked. All shop assistants struck. Hotels, restaurants, and coffee shops still without servants and waiters. Tailors and all other such stopped. No cabs, no carts, no shops, no bread, no nothing.

Jan. 27-9, Thursday.—Head policeman Fourth District murdered last night. Foxton Hall. Austrian Lloyd & Tinos commenced with one lighter each. Inner harbor no one working. Soldiers forcing open bazaar shops and making owners sell goods and provisions. No cabs, no carts. Gymnasium scholars fourth class revolted; tore down picture of Emperor, broke furniture, windows, &c., firing revolver shots into ceiling and said picture. All shops closed. Assistants called out, only provisioners kept open by soldiers; all Georgian domestic servants called out, i. e., stopped work. Gymnasium boy and two others arrested by Cossacks; former had red banner. Atbara worked from 11 A. M. till 4 P. M.; about 100 arrests reported; 2,000 revolvers said to have been taken. Cossacks searching people in the streets. Unofficial party would have stopped telegraph long ago, but required for their purposes for communicating with Petersburg, &c.

Jan. 28-10, Friday—All shops closed, no cabs, no drogas, all work stopped, domestic servants not working, no shop assistants. Last night Georgian broke windows all shop, Turkish bazaar that soldiers opened yesterday. Bread and kerosene on sale; pouring rain all day. Bardskys locked up house and came away on foot; where gone unknown. Cause departure known. Laborers said must carry red flag in procession or be shot. Red flag found flying over Governor's door this morning. Red flag put up on telegraph wires all about streets. This afternoon railway watchman shot at Mantachoff's crossing. Drinking water carriers stopped. Evening rain turned to snow. Warning notices sent to Governor, Commandant, and Police Master. Cossacks searching and robbing. Electric lights stopped.

Jan. 29-11, Saturday—Heavy snow fall during night. Bakeries closed. Datchni train stopped by wreckers near Bartskhana. Everything shut up to-day and no work whatsoever. Since noon to-day Cossacks stopped searching and beating; take this in connection with notices mentioned yesterday.

Jan. 30-12, Sunday—Austrian Lloyd boat leaving to-day; 500 Turks want to get away, but she will not take them; no cargo, fears top-heavy; afterward took them. Messageries paid Rs. 428 for discharging about 125 tons cargo. The inhabitants of the village to which the Georgian workmen from here returned on the 23-7 ordered them back to Batum to see the trouble through. Now the Georgians have decided not to have any political or police murders so long as present position obtains. Chikvadze (police officer) warned that condemned, but can have sentence expunged if he retires [illegible]

AFTER A BARRICADE AT BATUM. From a Photograph.

Police ordered poor watchmen on night duty again.

Jan. 31-13, Monday—Three days ago the Cossacks stopped Lominadze, the Town Treasurer, and robbed him of a gold watch and Rs. 100—L appealed to the Governor. The three Cossacks were identified; a gold watch and Rs. 400 were found on them. Reported that all Cossacks were then searched and 180 watches found on them. Siderides men struck in morning. Claimed for 10½ days and did no further work this day. Mantachoff's office has been shut for the last 10 days, also Rothschilds' and other offices closed. Government schoolmaster beaten in public thoroughfare in broad daylight. Mantachoff reported agreed to pay for 10 days to-morrow.

Feb. 1-14, Tuesday—Mantachoff to-day paid laborers for 10 days' work without having worked. "Patria," Portuguese SS, left on Jan. 16-29 with only 82,000 cases on board, after staying here several weeks, not being able to complete her loading, although shippers had 53,000 cases in store. The discharging of 700 tons from SS "Foxton Hall" cost £500.

Feb. 2-15, Wednesday—Hotels "Oriental" and "Belle Vue" came to terms with their servants. Hotel "De France," "Imperial," and others still closed.

Feb. 3-16, Thursday—Last evening, while Cabman Vassili was standing at hospital, waiting for doctor, he saw 7 corpses brought in. One was that of a petroleum seller, 4 wineshop keepers, and 2 shopkeepers who had not immediately obeyed the order to close their shops, after having been warned that disobedience meant death. Cook of "Hotel de France," who previously got Rs. 60 per month, now demands Rs. 390; left, taking key of kitchen with him. Waiters smashed up crockery. For loading (not stowing) cases last year paid Rs. 4.60 per 1,000; then 7.60, then 10, then Rs. 15; beginning of this year Rs. 20; now Rs. 30. No train to-day.

Feb. 4-17, Friday—Discharging planks last year cost 80 copecks, then R. 1, then 1.50, then Rs. 2; now Rs. 3. Freight planks Odessa-Batum two copecks per pood. Cost of landing 2 copecks. Freight earned 2x2—2 equals 0. SS. Peter Rigier lay 18 days in port with full cargo of planks, then left and discharged at Novorossiak. No train to-day. Line guarded by troops. The men guarding the line within the last few days have picked off at various times 15 men trying to tamper with the rails between Batum and Green Point, (a distance of 4 miles.) Messageries and Lloyd paid two gangs of men for two days each, although no work was done yesterday or

"Acting Is All Impulse," Says Bertha Kalisch

"ONE MUST FEEL IN ORDER TO ACT."

Yiddish, Duse About to Make Her Debut on the English Stage in "Fedora," Discusses Her Art and Her Ambitions.

I wonder."

Two words. But they expressed a whole world of apprehension.

Perhaps it was the cold gray of the early morning that had caused Mme. Bertha Kalisch to pause suddenly in the enthusiastic recital of her hopes and plans to voice the only note of doubt that had thus far proceeded from her lips. It is no small thing for a woman who has been a prime favorite with an individual class of audiences suddenly to find herself face to face with the fact that not what she has done, but what she can do, is to again become the test of her power to rise or fall.

"You see," continued the actress, "I have so long hoped for the proper opportunity to appear before English-speaking audiences that the first realization of the fact that I was to have my wish left me little time to think or to feel anything but gratitude at the thought. Thus we are swept along on the pleasures of our emotion. Then suddenly comes the grim thought—the if—the—the—the 'I wonder.'"

The word was spoken, then, the only word that seemed fitting under such circumstances. "Art is universal. If your acting is true—if your hold on life is sure, your grasp of emotion genuine, what difference does it make whether you are playing on Broadway or on the Bowery? Surely you will not deny the intellectuality of your east side audiences."

"By no means," answered Bertha Kalisch. "There is no place where men think more deeply, where the thought is more informed by a deep and far-reaching intelligence. Oh, no indeed! Do not misunderstand me. I am not decrying the perception of the people who have made my career in this city such a gratifying one up to the present time. But there are so many things to be considered. To begin with, though, I have studied hard. I am at times consumed with the fear that my pronunciation of English will be open to criticism."

"Your accent is hardly perceptible, if perceptible at all. I recall distinctly the weird brand of English with which Mme. Ristori tried to give a convincing portrait of Queen Elizabeth. Think of that—the Virgin Queen with the thickest of dialects! But she did not fail. Modjeska to this day has not lost her accent. These things should encourage you."

The actress smiled a protest: "Oh, I am not afraid," she said. "Only it is well, is it not, not to be overconfident?"

A neat, trim, girlish-looking figure, in a short, dark walking skirt, a white linen shirtwaist, with a flaring tie of cherry colored silk, Mme. Kalisch was an exact negation of the average actress at the morning interview, all laces and flounces and apologies for a hasty toilet. The day was yet young, but there were many signs that much had already been accomplished. A yellow-backed copy of "Fedora"—she is to open in the Sardou play with Mr. Fawcett's company at the American—lay open on the table before her. Her secretary had just handed her half a dozen letters, written at her dictation, to which she hurriedly added her signature. Then, with a word of apology for the interruption, she indicated her readiness to go on with the conversation.

"I noticed recently," remarked the visitor, "that Franklin Sargent, in a discussion of Yiddish actors, said that the principle of their acting is impulse, whereas with our own people it is study. Do you agree to the terms?"

"Heartily," she affirmed. "Most heartily. That is undoubtedly a fact. In my own playing the best results always come from the inspiration of the moment. To be sure, that does not mean that one who has not learned something of the technical side of our profession can walk on and give a great performance merely because the spirit moves. One must know one's calling in the first place, but we do not set as much store by rehearsals and the conventional business of acting as do some others.

\+ + +

"I do not play the same part the same way night after night. There are variations from time to time in my voice, my movements, my gestures. Yes, I am impulsive on the stage, and were I to cease to be so I should lose much of my power. The value of such acting as ours is largely dependent upon the way we happen to feel. A big house is often an inspiration—it usually is—but I have known times when there were few people in front and yet, somehow, I was moved to play better than I might have done if the place had been packed."

"Suppose you tell us what you think of the American actors you have seen."

Mme. Kalisch's hands went out in hasty protest.

"Oh, no, no," she said; "you know one is never called upon to incriminate one's self."

"English-speaking players can take that answer either as a compliment or the reverse," was suggested.

But further argument on that subject was useless.

"I will say this," the actress went on, "and with no disrespect, either, to the people who have been good to me. The English-speaking theatres offer a larger field. After all, the east side is only limited. It is because I feel that so strongly that I have been anxious to get a trial elsewhere. Certainly no audiences are more critical than our own. And I fear what they will have to say about my attempts at speaking English more than I do the words of other people. But I am primarily not seeking recognition as an elocutionist. I want to introduce my acting to this larger public.

"This is no new ambition. Three years ago David Belasco came down to see me play 'Sapho.' It was his encouragement that led me to the final determination. I have been studying English zealously for five years. But I have been acting practically all my life."

Mme. Kalisch was born thirty years ago at Lemberg, in Galicia, where she lived until she was seventeen. Her parents were Orthodox Jews. She was gifted with a good voice, and insisted on going to the conservatory. When she was fifteen she succeeded in getting a position as chorus girl in the regular Polish theatre. A little later a Yiddish company came to Lemberg. Among this troupe of actors were some now acting in New York. They offered Bertha Kalisch $25 a month—a princely sum that could not be refused, so she went on the Yiddish stage. The earliest Yiddish plays were operettas, on the model of Goldfadin's "Sulamita." In these pieces Bertha Kalisch took singing parts. At seventeen she married and went with the Jewish company to Budapest, and afterward to Bucharest, where the Christian National Theatre gave her an engagement. For this she learned the Roumanian language, but did not remain on that stage long.

For Mr. Edelstein of the Windsor Theatre, on the Bowery, came along and induced her to come to New York. So, in 1895, she took her father and mother, husband and two children, crossed the ocean, and went straight to the Thalia Theatre, on the Bowery, beginning with Goldfadin's "Sulamita."

"My first distinct success in drama as opposed to opera was in 'The Ironmaster' in 1895. Then the Jewish playwrights began to write melodrama for me, and from that time on I cared no more for singing rôles. I had plays from Lateiner, Seiffert, and Shaurkasky, and among them a translation, by Seiffert, of 'Fédora,' Suderman's 'Ehre,' and Sardou's 'Mme. Sans-Gêne' were rôles I tried at this time."

This brought on a discussion as to the relative merits of playwrights.

"Why have you selected 'Fédora' for your English début?" was a natural question in this connection.

"We call Sardou trashy," she declared, "but he writes great acting parts. He has the actress in mind when he is writing them. With him the underlying idea is not the all-important thing. He remembers that his plays are to be acted by actors in the theatre, and he provides material which enables them to act."

This recalled the story of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's visit to Ibsen and the "unpleasant half hour" that is said to have resulted.

"You remember," said the visitor, "that the English actress seeking to please the dramatist told him that she 'loved to play in his pieces—they had such good parts.' But he retorted, angrily: 'Parts, Madame, parts! I do not write parts. I write plays! And from that time on the relations of the great Norwegian dramatist and the English actress were a trifle strained."

"Exactly," agreed Mme. Kalisch. "With Ibsen the idea is everything—the individual nothing. That is why I prefer to play Sudermann. Frequently in acting Ibsen we are at a loss to understand him. Indeed, it is not an uncommon thing for the actors to go about the stage not understanding each other. That is, I mean, they do not understand what the other characters are—what do you say—oh!—driving at."

Mme. Kalisch's eyes closed in a moment of ecstatic histrionic emotion, and her hand went out convulsively to the little yellow-backed playbook.

"See!" she said, hastily turning the pages, "there is the death scene. There one can act—must act—and must feel in order to act."

Her hands were tightly clenched. "Over there," she said, with a vague toss of the head toward the open window, "everything is in ensemble. Everything is figured out and rehearsed day in, day out, exactly as it is to be done at each performance. But one cannot rehearse expression. Yes, there must be impulse, inspiration. The actress must feel what she is doing, or she cannot ring true."

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN GETTING READY FOR THE ROOF GARDEN SEASON

THERE are few things more desolate than a Summer roof garden in the Winter time.

All Winter long the Hammerstein Roof Garden as seen from the overshadowing tower of The Times Building had reeked with desolation. Snow had banked the base of the wingless windmill, had piled itself in great white drifts in the empty bed of the lake, had nestled itself into the eaves of the little empty houses, and had stayed there and stayed there.

The sleet had not been behindhand in assisting in this general devastation. It had done so merrily. It had driven the windblown hens into their hen roost, had pelted the variegated roosters.

Not satisfied with this, it had gone on and on, lashing the small leafless bushes with apparent vindictiveness, flinging itself angrily at the stolidness of the windmill, covering the paintless chairs thrown at the walls and into the corners in various and sundry attitudes indicative of despair, and converting the roof floor into an ice rink dangerous enough for the reckless foot unclad with skates.

\+ + +

But a change was rapidly coming over the spirit of the roof garden. From the high vantage of the editorial windows could be seen vigorous signs of preparation for something or other. Somebody was wielding a paint brush, somebody else was spreading tar over the floor from an elephantine tar can, up from which curled thin wreaths of steam or smoke, while still another person—all these in picturesque blue overalls—dug around the base of the little bushes with a patient spade.

And this wasn't all.

The chickens had come out from their shelter to see what it was all about, and were standing flopping gentle wings in the genial warmth of the sun, and a big gray-brown dog had stretched his giant length out on the roof to keep them company.

In other words, Summer was in the air, and the roof garden time was on.

"Go down and see what Oscar is about," were the instructions to a woman reporter who was standing at the aforesaid window, gazing upon all this gayety.

The woman was eventually escorted through devious dark and roundabout ways by a tall and imposing colored gentleman in a uniform uniform to Mr. Hammerstein's office, where Mr. Hammerstein sat at a desk, above which was a horseshoe.

"There is nothing at all on the roof garden," declared Mr. Hammerstein, "but if you want to see that nothing, I will show it to you."

"You believe in horseshoes?" she asked, as she followed him downstairs before he led her upstairs.

He raised a large bar to a door leading to the gallery, and opened the door.

"I believe in horseshoe luck," he said, "and telepathy. We have to put this bar here to keep the small boys from stealing into the theatre."

On the roof garden he waved his hands explanatorily about.

"You see," he said, "it is as I told you. There is nothing here."

The big dog the woman had seen from the window rose, stretched himself lazily, and came toward them. Mr. Hammerstein patted him on the head.

"It is good luck," he smiled, "for a cat to come to you. I don't know about a dog; but this dog, he came to us. He is a beautiful dog, too, is he not? He walked into the lobby of the theatre about a month ago. A Great Dane, you see. We do not even know his name."

"Haven't you given him a name?" asked the woman.

"Not yet," replied Mr. Hammerstein.

The woman occupied a brief moment in thought. Then:

"Why not call him Jerome?" she asked.

Mr. Hammerstein vaulted indignantly back.

"Do you think I would offend this beautiful dog," he cried, "by naming him after Jerome?"

"Well, then," soothed the woman, "name him for me."

Mr. Hammerstein quieted down.

"Very well, then," he concluded, "I will name him for you."

The dog lay down on the roof, and Mr. Hammerstein pointed out the beauties of the inner garden that were to be evolved out of its present chaos.

"We are going to make it a good deal larger," he told her. "We are going to stretch it out here and open it up there. Then we are going to have extra attractions this Summer, brought over, some of them, from England. We are going to have new turns every week. You see, we must cater to that crowd. That is why we must change the programme so frequently. They won't go to a play but once, that crowd, and you can't blame them. It was only this morning that Jerome served me a notice to close up on account of the skylights. They are not large enough, he said. Close up!" the voice grew louder; "well, I should think not. Didn't you see the people downstairs coming right along into my show?"

"What makes him treat you so?" asked the woman sympathetically. "I have often wondered.'

"I don't know," plaintively, "and me the handsomest theatre manager in the city, too!"

"I know Mr. Jerome very well," said the woman. "I will see him and tell him to let you alone."

The handsomest theatre manager in the city drew himself proudly up.

"That is very kind of you," he said, "but I can fight my own battles. You see the windmill is going now. They have put on the sails. Look at the little bushes, too. They are beginning to put out their green leaves, getting ready to look pretty for the people. We will have a very beautiful roof garden this Summer, more beautiful than ever, in spite of Jerome."

"There is one thing certain," remarked the woman. "He can't complain of the [illegible] roof garden," looking at the inverted blue dome brightly covering them.

"I should think he couldn't," assented Mr. Hammerstein.

"I want to see how the windmill works from the inside," said the woman. "I haven't seen a windmill at close range since I lived in Kansas. The landscape is full of them there," she added. "They take the place of trees."

She walked up on the bridge that led to it. The workman kindly started it for her. Just beneath was the waterless pond.

"When we fill this with water," explained Mr. Hammerstein, "it is very pretty, very pretty, indeed. The boats float about in the water like real boats on real water."

"There were some real ducks, if I remember," said the woman. "Where are they?"

"We keep them in the country in the Winter time and bring them back in the Summer."

"Do you think that it is fair to reverse the thing so with the ducks?" questioned the woman. "The city in the Summer time!"

"It is not fair," said Mr. Hammerstein, "but it is very necessary. You cannot keep ducks without water. In the Winter time when we stop the windmill the supply of water stops. Even if we kept it up it would freeze. It is much better that the ducks remain in the country in the Winter. Much better," thoughtfully. "You see this little house near the water. There used to be a fisherman in the door of that little house. He sat there all Summer long pretending to fish. Of course, he didn't fish, because he was a wax fisherman, but he just pretended to. He caught about as many fish, though, as a good many real fishermen, notwithstanding their stories."

"Where is he now?" asked the woman.

Mr. Hammerstein executed a despairing gesture with both hands.

"He is nowhere," he frowned. "He no longer exists. When the trouble broke out with Jerome he fell out of the door and broke his neck. He wasn't any good any more as a fisherman, so we had to throw him away. It was a real pity. He was a very nice fisherman."

"Going to get you another?"

"Yes. We'll have to get us another. That Jerome, he costs us a good deal of money first and last, but we'll have the best of him yet," defiantly.

\+ + +

The woman went to the window of a little house under the windmill and looked in. She started back amazed. Inside the little house sat two people at a table, German people, playing cards. The dust was thick on the people. It was thick on the table and on the cards.

"Have these poor people been here all Winter long?" she asked of their owner.

"All Winter long," he answered.

"Didn't they nearly freeze to death?"

"They are wax people," said Mr. Hammerstein.

"I should think, anyway, you would have built a fire for them once in a while," mused the woman. "It has been a bitter Winter."

"I tried it," said he, "but it didn't work. One of them melted."

"There were three of them playing, then?"

"Yes. Three. The one that melted was the nicest one of the three."

The woman glanced hesitatingly at him.

"Did that other one melt about the time of the trouble with Jerome?" she asked timidly.

"Just about that time," groaned Mr. Hammerstein.

They now stood in the centre of the roof garden, looking aimlessly about them.

"What do you think of the possibilities of Times Square?" asked the woman, changing the subject.

Again Mr. Hammerstein waved his hands about, but with a different gesture.

"The possibilities of Times Square," he repeated. "Why, with my roof garden here and the Times Building there," indicating the beautiful tall white tower with an upward wave of a palm, "there is no end to the possibilities of Times Square. As a matter of fact, it is the only square worth mentioning in the city.

"But, by the bye, I have warned THE TIMES editor of one thing. I will make it impossible for him to write editorials up there in his perch above my roof garden. Just as soon as he gets deep in one of those learned essays concerning the deep questions as to what ought to go on in the city and does not, do you know what I shall do?"

"No. What?"

"I shall start up my roof garden band. I will have them play a few selections from Wagner. I will begin the overture from 'Tannhäuser.' Then we will see what will become of his editorials. Oh, yes, I have given him fair warning. You can tell him that from me when you go back. Fair warning," and he laughed delightedly.

The chickens had gone back to their roost.

"I want to see where they live," said the woman, and Mr. Hammerstein led the way to their roost, a little to the side, back of the boathouse out of which the fine wax man had fallen and broken his neck.

The chickens huddled together at sight of her. One red and white hen screamed loudly and tried to scale the wall and land on the heads of innocent pedestrians in Forty-second Street.

The woman grabbed her by the wings and dropped her carefully over the wire netting into the little yard where she belonged.

Safely there she hustled fluffily off and stood leaning against the protecting wing of a friendly rooster, staring at her out of one round eye.

"She never even thanked me," complained the woman.

"You needn't ever expect anything from those chickens," Mr. Hammerstein informed her. "They are very strange chickens, especially the [illegible] chicken-hearted, these

"They used to lay personal eggs for my breakfast, but do you know what they did?"

"No," replied the woman; "what?"

"Exactly on the 10th of January," Mr. Hammerstein continued, "on the day that Jerome commenced this trouble with me, those hens they quit laying. They stopped short—"

"Never to lay again?" broke in the woman anxiously.

"Never to lay again, perhaps," replied Mr. Hammerstein sadly, "or maybe never again until Jerome gets ready to quit his foolishness and let me and my theatres and my skylights alone."

"I'll go to see him to-morrow," determined the woman as they wended their way down the dark stairs again, "so you can have eggs for your breakfast."

The Demands of Etiquette.

A traveler from the regions of Central and South America vouches for the following:

A United States man-of-war entered the harbor of one of the smallest of the Latin-American republics. At anchor in the harbor was present what the traveler describes as "the entire navy" of the republic. When the situation was explained to the officers of Uncle Sam's vessel the customary salute was immediately fired.

But among the officers of the navy of the republic satisfaction at the homage thus paid to the dignity of the republic was sadly impaired by the impossibility of returning the courtesy. In "the entire navy," which the traveler states consisted of one "converted tug," there was no powder! Gloom prevailed, until the commanding officer had an inspiration.

The officers of the man-of-war now beheld a rowboat leaving "the entire navy" and approaching them. They received the bare-footed commander with all due courtesy, did the honors of the ship, and finally, with controlled emotions, loaned him the powder for which he asked.

Safely there she hustled fluffily off and stood leaning against the protecting wing of a friendly rooster, staring at her out of one round eye.

"She never even thanked me," complained the woman.

"You needn't ever expect anything from those chickens," Mr. Hammerstein informed her. "They are very strange chickens, especially the [illegible] chicken-hearted, these

No Sinecure Has the N. Y. C. O. Mendicancy Officer

Mr. John D. Godfrey.

Mr. James Forbes

Brooklyn Which Has Been Infested by Mendicants Will Receive Special Consideration From the Bureau of Charities---All Beggars Not Hopeless

CITIZENS of New York who nowadays enjoy comparative freedom from the annoyance of street beggars have little idea of the amount of thought and hard work that certain men are putting forth to compass this desirable end. But the beggars themselves have a generous appreciation of the fact, and see in it a relentless behest to move on. Finding that for such as them Manhattan is no longer a happy hunting ground, where the bars are down and the latchstrings out, the great majority of them at large have sought other fields which they can "work" with less molestation. Many of them, probably thinking that Brooklyn's homelike qualities compensate for her lesser opportunities, have hied themselves across the bridge. But they are not to be left in peace there either.

With regard to her mendicant parasites Brooklyn, like the other divisions of the greater city, has hitherto been cared for by the mendicancy officers of the Charity Organization Society of New York. But now, probably as the result of the influx of professional beggars within her gates, the Bureau of Charities in the borough across the bridge has decided to organize a mendicancy department of its own. At its head it is proposed to place John D. Godfrey, who for the last three years has been attached to the New York Charity Organization Society's mendicancy squad under James Forbes, and has also been a probation officer for the Charity Organization Society. During Mr. Godfrey's period of service here he has investigated something like 2,500 cases of professional beggars whose records are now on file. Altogether the mendicancy department has now about 7,000 such records, and the number is constantly being increased.

In stamping out professional beggardom, this collection of definite and systemized facts, supplemented in most instances by photographs and identifying details of each case, is simply invaluable. Men familiar, as officers of the Mendicancy Department naturally are, with every phase of beggardom can tell almost infallibly from personal knowledge plus complete records just who is the latest panhandler gathered into the mendicancy corral, unless he happen to be a new light on the metropolitan horizon, in which case his pedigree and history are as carefully inquired into and mapped out as if he were the heir to a title or a fabulous fortune. All of this means endless vigilance, patience, and work to the men of the Mendicancy Department. There is probably no more persistent individual in the world than the truly professional beggar. No matter how often he is "sent away," which is the euphemistic phrase describing a workhouse term that may be ten days or six months, the sweets of the life of ease and the lure of easy money seduce him back to his old haunts and habits time and again. Every neighborhood has its few local beggars, who are driven from their old haunts, but return repeatedly, like the bad penny.

It may astonish many to know of the large number of beggars that still infest the city and operate occasionally as time and tide permit. "In Greater New York now," said James Forbes, "there are at large 12 yeggmen, 30 to 35 German 'schnorrers,' and 100 Jewish 'schnorrers,' 80 to 90 professional repeaters, which class includes the few remaining blackhoods, floppers, and town bums of various sorts; 3 or 4 begging-letter writers, probably anywhere from 200 to 300 professional mission, church, and society workers, and 3 or 4 charity swindlers. Three-fourths of them all are now hanging out in Brooklyn. We have succeeded in almost or completely stamping out some classes of old-time beggars. There are comparatively few 'yeggs' now in New York; 'blackhoods,' who, as you know, were women, are scarce, and most of the blacklegs and strong-arm men have quit the begging business. I should say that no more than three or four strong-arm men are still operating in the city, whereas there used to be scores.

"The men whose business it is to suppress professional begging need to be exceedingly cautious, alert, and painstaking. The beggars of to-day are on the watch all the time for the mendicancy officers detailed to the Charity Organization Society, and in many instances know every member of the squad by sight, so that considerable strategy is often required to get near enough to the mendicant to get a case against him.

"The members of the squad cover especially such elevated stations as are principally affected by the homeward-bound throngs of workers, first by the Wall Street business men and later by the working girls of the big department stores. Such elevated stations as Chambers Street and Cortlandt Street on the lower west side, Grand Street and the Bowery, Grand and Allen, and the Bowery and Houston on the east side are examples of points it is necessary to maintain unceasing surveillance over at certain times of the day. Within one year thirty arrests were made at one station alone. That was at Grand Street and the Bowery.

"Three or four nights a week, too, the different ferries are watched for 'throwouts' who operate in the ladies' cabin. These fellows go through a regular schooling in which they learn from older associates wonderful skill in simulating deformities of hands and arms caused by paralysis. Mondays and Saturdays are their best nights on the ferryboats. They use begging cards, one being given to each woman, and when he reaches the end of his cards the 'throw-out' retraces his steps to collect them and the coins which soft-hearted women give up. Should a woman refuse, she is liable to be insulted. In the course of a year about twenty-five 'throw-outs' are arrested, not all of them on ferryboats, but in sweatshops, loft buildings, on railroad trains, race tracks, and at the gates of factories on pay days.

"Of 'floppers' we pick up as many as 125 a year in Manhattan, a majority of whom are repeaters—that is, professionals arrested again and again.

"The night of the beggars' richest harvest is Saturday. They have their fingers on the pulse of the financial world to the extent of keeping well informed as to the pay days of the masses. And so on evenings when tens of thousands are hurrying home with snug little rolls in their pockets and in their hearts good will toward mankind, the crafty mendicants distribute themselves—or, rather, used to in their palmy days—along the great arteries of city travel. Their easiest prey was the working girls, who readily gave from a nickel to a quarter, although they could ill afford it. But the giving was not confined to them, and during a Saturday rush hour it was not uncommon for a beggar to make $7 or $8 easily in an hour and a half.

"An odd thing about it is that when one of these shameless impostors used to be arrested the very people whom they imposed upon would obstruct the officer in the performance of his duty. Occasionally even now it is necessary to arrest some too boisterous sympathizer, and when the procession of three arrives at the station house the sympathizer soon learns that his sympathy was wasted on a rank impostor. In general, however, a healthy public opinion now prevails, and it has gone far to curtail the 'earnings' of professional mendicants not only in New York, but all over the country."

The mendicancy officers who watch out for beggars and make arrests when they can find their position no sinecure. Perhaps no class of beggars gives them more hard thinking and leg-work, too, than the able-bodied beggars who "work" in the Wall Street district unless that district be closely watched. Their plea perhaps is family distress, a sick wife, or a child to be buried and no money, or again a job to go to in the morning or a job out of town. As it is difficult to get an audience with busy business men, some of these fellows carry begging letters, and when it is considered whom they are dealing with they meet with singular success. Such beggars have a surprisingly good working knowledge of human nature and know just whom to approach and how to approach them. With a good tale of woe, one of them has been known to get as much as from $1 to $5 from every office he visited in a big building. They seem to meet with little or no interference from the janitors or Superintendents of office buildings or from the police. Mendicants of this stamp are slippery customers and lead the officers a merry chase, entering a building by one door and leaving by another, and dodging pursuit up and down elevators. A majority of this type, however, confine themselves chiefly to accosting business men on the street, although some specialize upon politicians, Judges, or office holders.

One begging dodge that was nipped in the bud was attempted not long ago in Brooklyn. A woman organ grinder was noticed who carried on her left arm a baby that cried lustily. She pinched it to make it cry. The sympathy of passers-by was of course aroused. But a hard-hearted policeman arrested her, and when she was haled before Magistrate Higginbotham she put on a front of injured innocence that was truly appealing. The fact, however, came to light that a gang of women panhandlers was successfully "working" Williamsburg with the identical plan, only they hired the babies that they carried around on their organ-grinding trips.

"As I was going through Catharine Street one day," said a mendicancy officer, "I observed a man passing from store to store, hat in hand. He seemed to be a paralytic and a deaf-mute besides. I arrested him, and Magistrate Barlow committed him to the Workhouse for six months. The Warden, who was instructed to keep a close watch on him, appointed a "trusty" to find out if the fellow were actually a deaf-mute, as he was to all appearances. Well, heavy hammers were dropped near him, and other things were done to make him jump, but the fellow never budged. Seven weeks passed before he forgot himself one day and spoke to the "trusty." He was certainly a clever fakir and a stubborn one, and his name was never found out. He passed as John Doe. On being released, after serving his full time, he must have concluded that the game was played out in New York, for he dropped completely out of sight.

"Shortly after the Slocum disaster last Summer I had a man arrested over in Queens County. He was going about with a book "collecting" for the Slocum disaster sufferers, and his line of graft was a good one. In a few hours one day he picked up $11.

"I could tell you of hundreds of cases, some of them fakirs of extraordinary cleverness and ingenuity, but the majority just sordid cases of wretched humanity. We get to know them all. A mendicancy officer is apt to be a suspicious-minded person, for every minute that he is on the street his eyes are roving hither and yon in quest of them. When one is 'spotted' the officer 'tails' him sometimes for hours until he lands his man, as he does nine times out of ten. But some cases will keep him on the go for a week or longer."

When a beggar is arrested and found guilty, he is either committed for a term up to six months or put on probation for that length of time. In the latter case probation papers are made out the man himself keeping one, the other going to the probation officer of the Charity Organization Society. The beggar has to report to the probation officer once, twice, or four times a month, according to the case. During this time the probation officer has to see that he does no begging and aids him to find employment. As a general thing, on account of the close watch kept by the probation officer, mendicants dealt with in this way quit begging, and at the end of their probation period are mostly found making an honest living. Men who are put on probation are usually novices up for first or second offenses. The hardened professionals are always sent up to the Island, and when let out before the expiration of their time to take positions that have been found for them they are placed upon probation for the rest of their time. Not infrequently money is sent to a man by his family, who undertake to aid him toward an honest way of living.

When a man is in the workhouse a complete record of his case is built up, so that the officials may understand how to handle him after he gets out. If found suitable he is fitted out with a peddling outfit or otherwise put on his feet. Not a few of them, especially cripples, are equipped for selling newspapers, where they can make from $1 to $2 a day. Some thirty or more ex-beggar-cripples are to-day supporting themselves and making a very fair living selling newspapers. Even a number of blind men have proved successful in this field. One young man of twenty-one, blind, who was playing an accordeon and begging with his hat out, at Coney Island, was warned, and came to the Charity Organization Society's office next day. The Mendicancy Officer procured him a newspaper stand and a week's papers free, and he has made a good living for about a year, supporting his mother and two sisters. A wealthy man of Brooklyn, becoming interested in the case, placed him in a blind asylum, where he is now learning a trade. Another case was that of "Sailor Jack," a young man who was found "flopping" in front of the "Berlin," on Broadway, Brooklyn. His right leg was off, and he had been confined in different institutions most of his life. With the Magistrate's consent he was placed on parole instead of being committed. It was felt that he had not had much of a chance in life. He was fitted out with clothing and a set of cobbler's tools and established in a little shoemaker's shop. He succeeded, got thoroughly upon his feet, and is now earning $2.50 a day as a watchman.

Constructive work like this is an important part of the work being done to stamp out professional begging. Special work for crippled beggars is provided in the society's woodyard, and some are placed as watchmen, but it is at best a difficult task to place a cripple in a self-supporting way, especially as a great majority of all crippled beggars are addicted to liquor. Most of them have been hurt while riding on freight trains as tramps, and have no trade. A great majority of all beggars live in common lodging houses, but some of the higher rank impostors have furnished rooms, and even comfortable homes.

In conclusion, the officers at the head of the anti-mendicancy crusade feel that they cannot emphasize too strongly this fact that, in spite of the most efficient police measures, there will continue to be beggars until the public is thoroughly educated and systematically refuses to give on the street or without investigation.

Organized charity is amply able to cope with all such occasions of genuine distress as may tend toward creating beggars, and the public must be trained to make full and sufficient use of the advantages to head and heart which organized charity offers. It is distinctly unkind and unjust to "help" a man or a woman to self-debasement by giving alms on the street.

Five Freshman Lawmakers Who Made Worthy Records at Albany

THERE are five men serving their first term in the Legislature this year whose service has been of such a conspicuous and creditable character as to win for them a reputation which few men who go to Albany achieve in a single session. Two of them are Republicans and three are Democrats. The Republicans are Senators Page and Saxe and the Democrats are Senator Marks and Assemblymen Tompkins and Fuller. All of them are from Greater New York, a noteworthy fact.

At a recent dinner in Albany, Supreme Court Justice Victor J. Dowling referred to Assemblyman Tompkins as "The Boanerges from New York." The appellation was fitting, for Mr. Tompkins has thundered away at "grab" bills and other bad legislation in such an effective way as to strike fear into the hearts of the members of the Republican majority, even though he was unable to bring about their conversion and reform.

Mr. Tompkins is a Professor of Law in the New York University. His experience as a teacher and expounder of law has been of great value to him in analyzing proposed legislation at Albany. Senator Grady, who has had longer experience as a legislator than any other Democratic representative at Albany, with the exception of Senator McCarran, said of Prof. Tompkins that he knew of no man who could better be trusted to find out the joker in any bill if there was one in it. Mr. Tompkins's policy as a member of the Assembly has been to ask no favors and to grant none. Every bill which he has considered bad on its merits without regard to the effect which his antagonism might have on legislation which he was desirous of getting through. He announced his position on the floor of the Assembly the other day when, through a little pique, there was an attempt to even up scores with him for a terrific tongue-lashing which he gave the Republicans because of the "grab" legislation that members of the majority were seeking to promote. Referring to the defeat of one of his bills, he said:

"If this bill has gone down to defeat because of a lack of merit, then I hope that every bill I introduce which is lacking in merit will meet the same fate. I do not want to further or help along measures which do not merit the approval of this House. I have not asked a single man for his vote, nor do I expect to. If the measure is a just one, it is no fault of mine that it does not pass if log-rolling, pique, and ill-nature are the basis for its defeat. On the other hand, I do not expect to be approached and my vote asked for measures I do not consider just or meritorious, and I intend to use my judgment in regard to them."

Prof. Tompkins is not an orator, yet he never fails to command attention from the Republican as well as the Democratic side of the Assembly for the reason that he always comes to the discussion of a measure armed with facts.

The principal legislation to which Prof. Tompkins's name is attached is the city water measure introduced at the request of Mayor McClellan, the Municipal Lighting Plant bill, a bill increasing the powers of the Police Commissioner to regulate traffic in the streets, and the bill for publicity in the promotion and organization of corporations. The bill preventing the emasculation of "The Star-Spangled Banner" was the outcome of his uncompromising attacks upon City Superintendent Maxwell and the present system of education in vogue in the city schools.

Assemblyman Charles H. Fuller of the Flatbush District of Kings County came to the Legislature with the prestige of having defeated Jacob D. Remsen of gas legislation fame. Remsen had been in the Legislature for years and was something of a figure. Representing a strong Republican district, his defeat came as a great surprise, and there was a natural curiosity about the personality of the man who had successfully opposed him. Those who asked to have the man who had beaten Remsen pointed out to them saw a stockily built man of medium height with a countenance that suggests pugnacity.

The impression of force and determination which one gets from Mr. Fuller on first meeting he fully sustains upon further acquaintance. While his legal training restrains him from rushing into the fray of debate heedlessly, he is always ready to take part in a discussion upon any measure of importance, and generally his views are so well digested as to give him the best of the argument. It is generally admitted that he has been the most forceful assistant that Mr. Palmer, the minority leader, has had during the present session with the exception of Prof. Tompkins.

Mr. Fuller has lived nearly all of his life in the section of Brooklyn in which he now resides, and is prominent in the affairs of the district and in church circles. His election as a member of the Assembly is, however, "his first offense" in politics. He did not seek the nomination. He was importuned by the leaders of his own party and prominent Republicans in the district as well to make the race, the argument used to get him to consent being that he was the one man to beat Remsen, whose gas record had made him extremely unpopular. Mr. Fuller is what is known as a Cleveland Democrat. He does not always vote for party measures, believing that the sentiment of his district is broad and liberal enough to permit him to exercise independent judgment.

Senator Jacob Marks succeeded Victor J. Dowling in the Senate as the representative of the Eighteenth District when Senator Dowling was elevated to the Supreme Court Bench. He polled the largest vote ever given for a Senator in that district, being elected by a plurality of 6,614. Although a strict organization man on purely political matters, Senator Marks has endeavored to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor, Senator Dowling, in voicing his own opinions upon all legislation not of a partisan character. He has established a reputation for independence of thought and action which is enjoyed by no other Senator on the Democratic side.

Senator Marks has been conspicuous by his opposition to all of the "grab" bills. His voice has been practically the only one raised against them on the Democratic side. He has not contented himself with declaring hostility to them on a single occasion, but has voiced his protest at every stage of their progress. And now that the Goodsell "grabs" have gone through the Senate he has sent to Gov. Higgins a long protest against their approval, setting forth his reasons for believing them bad legislation.

Senator Marks is a lawyer and is a member of the Law Committee of Tammany Hall. He was elected a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1894, and was one of the active members of the convention, serving on the Committee on Powers and Duties of the Governor and State Officers. He is a member of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. Among the measures introduced by Senator Marks are the bill providing for the placing of a uniformed fireman on all the excursion boats and barges leaving the city; a bill providing for the fire-proof construction of excursion boats and barges, and an insurance resolution calling upon the Judiciary Committee for an investigation of the affairs of insurance companies and the manner in which their surpluses have been invested and used.

Senator Martin Saxe defeated Senator George W. Plunkitt in the Seventeenth District. Plunkitt had been going to the Senate for so many years that both Democrats and Republicans thought he had a life tenure. Senator Saxe, however, showed himself to be the best campaigner that Plunkitt had ever had to contend against, and when the votes were counted it was found that Saxe had won, to the amazement of everybody and the stupefaction of Plunkitt. He had changed a Democratic plurality of over 4,000 into a Republican plurality of 585.

From 1902 to 1904 Senator Saxe was the Assistant Corporation Counsel in charge of the Bureau for the Collection of Arrears of Personal Taxes of the Law Department of the City of New York; and during those two years that bureau, through his efforts, recovered over $600,000, as against $157,000 recovered in the four years preceding. It was the experience which he gained as head of the Department for the Collection of Arrears of Personal Taxes which led him to draw the bill, which provides that personal property may be taxed wherever its situs is. If that bill becomes a law the New Yorkers who claim a residence at Newport, Lakewood, and other places, while maintaining at the same time magnificent mansions in New York, will have to pay personal taxes in this State on all the furnishings of their residences in this city.

Senator Alfred R. Page, while a man who would not have been lost in the Senate in any circumstances, owes the distinction which he has achieved in his first term somewhat to kind fortune. At the time when the Republican programme was against a gas investigation and in favor of the introduction of an eighty-cent gas bill upon the facts ascertained by the Senate Finance Committee and previously known, to Senator Page was handed the resolution for an investigation sponsored by a prominent Democrat, whom State Chairman Odell was anxious to please for political reasons. Later, when the Republican plan was changed and a gas investigation was decided upon, Senator Page, as the introducer of the resolution for the investigation, could not be ignored. Senator Elsberg wanted the Chairmanship of the committee, but Page insisted upon his rights. He said that if any New York man went on the committee he must be the one. His position was impregnable, and so the Republican leaders concluded that Elsberg must be turned down and Page made the New York member of the committee. Page did not insist upon the honor of being made Chairman. He himself urged that the place should be given to Senator Stevens.

Although his position as a member of the Gas Investigating Committee has given him more prominence than anything else connected with his brief legislative career, Senator Page's name has been identified with other legislation of importance. By the introduction of a Recording Mortgage Tax bill last week at the request of the allied real estate dealers, who are opposed to the Annual Mortgage Tax bill now in the hands of Gov. Higgins.

Senator Page is a lawyer. For a number of years he acted as attorney for the Excise Board and for the Special Deputy Commissioner of Excise of the Borough of Manhattan after the passage of the Raines law. He represents the Nineteenth District of New York. He is a member of the Judiciary and Insurance Committees, two of the most important committees of the Senate.

"MEN IN BLUE OVERALLS CARRYING TIN BUCKETS"

"BEFORE HER WAS A TALL FORBIDDING RAGGED HILL."

"BROUGHT THE WOMAN A GLASS OF MILK."

"TAKING HER HAND IN HIS HORNY ONE."

What an Adventurous Woman Who Invaded Upper Harlem and the Distant Bronx Discovered in Her Explorations.

THE woman traveled for an hour or so on the elevated train looking into the windows of four-story flats, passing tall gray towers, passing wide avenues on which stood trees with tender new green leaves, passing around the great double curve with the view of the Park, passing on and on by more pink and white flats, by subdued red flats, by delicate gray flats tricked out daintily with cobwebby curtains, till she came to the place of the impromptu Saturday ball games, the tennis courts, and the walls and walls of advertisements telling all about what was going on at the theatres in New York.

Then she came to the grassless grass plots and the end of the elevated.

It being the end of the elevated, there was nothing for her to do but take a street car, which she did.

She had no sooner taken this car than the scenery began to change.

Not only the scenery, but the people.

Strange-looking bonnetless women carrying large unwieldly bundles came in and sat by her. Men in old blue overalls carrying tin buckets brushed elbows with her. A few hatless negroes reading newspapers a day or so old sat not far away.

She traveled in this strange company through a country of signboards and preparations for blasting and devastated boulders and attenuated trees upon which nimble signs had climbed even to the topmost twig and more grassless grass plots, upon which played ragged, hatless and shoeless boys of sunburned countenances plentifully sprinkled with freckles and tan.

Then all at once the street cars gave out and she was forced to go the rest of her way on foot in her still hunt for the northern edge of New York to see what sort of people were there and what they were doing.

The way went down a hill toward a little river. Lazy boats lagged along this little river. Lazier boys swung out long lithe lines, then lay in the tall grass, waiting for a bite. Children led curly big dogs hitched to small wagons. Blue overalled men worked quietly on the road, taking their time. Some built a few houses slowly, taking their time. One walked back of two huge white horses, the harness trailing, the dust rising in a golden cloud about the heavy feet of the big white horses.

Those who had no vehicles walked with the woman. Those who had rode slowly, all taking their time.

Now and then all scattered wildly, making way for an automobile.

These were the only vehicles that were not taking their time. Hampers adorned them. They seemed bound for the north pole, to which they must get before sundown. The numbers on the backs of them receded so swiftly that though one ran it would be impossible for one to read them.

When they had passed the cloud of dust they had left was once more filled with the slow pedestrians, the woman among them.

A girl walked by her. She ate an apple as she walked. The woman drew nearer.

"What country is this?" she asked her timidly, for surely, she said to herself, this cannot be New York.

The girl took another bite of her apple. Then:

"This country," she answered, "is Harlem."

"Thank you very much," said the woman politely, and walked on and on till she came to the little river which was not now so very far away.

At first she thought to herself:

"I will stand here and say, 'Huddle Duck, Huddle Duck,' then all the little ducks will huddle together, and I will get on their backs and go across," but though she craned her neck and looked this, that, and the other way, not a duck was in sight.

Thus foiled, she looked about her for a bridge.

One of the fishermen raised his head from the tall grass and said to her: "If you go along and go along till you come to that big gray rock over there, you will find a bridge," and his head sank in the grass again and he covered his eyes with one arm to shut out the sunlight.

She thanked him and obeyed. On the other side of the big gray rock was a crowd of blue-overalled workmen. These were lazily engaged in wheeling little gray stones, some of them not so awfully little, over two wobbly planks, dumping them into the water and coming back again.

The woman stood hesitating, a little afraid of the bridge.

Then she decided to risk it.

When she got half way across she began to be very much afraid, for the water was deep, and she had forgotten to bring her bathing suit along.

The foreman shouted out to her:

"Wait, and I will give you a helping hand!"

She waited, looking up for fear if she looked down she might lose her head and her balance, till he came to her across the wobbly bridge and taking her hand in his kindly horny one led her safely across.

She thanked him very politely indeed, for she was not quite sure that she might have to come back by that way, and walked across a marshy marsh into which her feet kept sinking fearfully, and then she came into still another country.

Back of her were the hills of Harlem, but before her was a tall, forbidding, and ragged hill.

There were no elevators ascending this hill. If she desired to look over on the other side to see what sort of people lived there she must climb.

At the foot of the ragged hill a few rows of trim frame houses turned their backs on New York and looked the other way. They were two-story houses up the hill a little way and three-story houses at the foot.

Fastened together as they were, these houses sat fairly plumb, but here and there an isolated house leaned sidewise, stood on one foot, lost its head with the hilliness after the manner of houses on mountain sides in Switzerland.

The hill was not unoccupied.

There were women, children, and dogs in gay groups participating in quiet Saturday morning picnics apparently. There were also chickens scattered plentifully about, a few matronly hens cluckingly scratching for earth worms with which to feed small bunches of fluffy yellow chickens not long hatched.

The woman climbed and climbed.

Once she stopped to look back at New York.

The tall gray towers had disappeared as if the earth had opened and swallowed them up. One or two cupolas of colleges showed mistily. The hill came mistily down to the river she had crossed and whose ripples the lazy boats plied.

To the right of her was a fine blue mist, the Hudson; to the left of her was one not quite so blue, which was the East River.

She was so tired by now she was almost ready to give up seeing what was on the other side of this ragged hill, but just at the top was a toy house in a tall tree which tempted her.

At length she reached it, stood at the fence, and looked over.

If she had expected to see a continuation of raggedness she was destined to pleased disappointment.

What she saw was a green and beautiful garden and a man bent over hoeing it. Further on a placid lawn, a man mowing it. On this lawn were beds of flowers, blooming flowers, interspersed with green leaves, hyacinths, tulips, geraniums. White linen bleached on the grass in places, and some children played.

But all at once barking rent the atmosphere, and a big black dog, about the size of the house, sprang from the veranda toward her.

The woman dropped into a clump of tall green grass and pretended she wasn't there.

The dog concluded after an anxious period that she wasn't.

He walked sedately back to the veranda and lay down again, observing the spot where he had thought she was, however, with a watchful eye.

When she had given the eye about time to close she arose with great cautiousness, and crept along the wire fence to the road.

She advanced upon the open.

A beautiful country it was she advanced upon, a wide, green, glorious country basking in the morning sunshine. A country of sloping lawns and flowers and benches and green shorn hills for the resting of the weary wayfarer, and sloping roads along which people came in dog carts and open buggies, and once two small boys in a little runabout drawn by a fat brown pony with a curly mane and tail, a pony that took many steps up and down the hills but didn't seem to go very fast after all.

She could hear the voices of these people talking a long way off in this quiet country, whose silence was broken only by the songs of birds and the rusty music of the lazy lawn mowers.

She walked along the sunny highroad, looking delightedly about her.

On one hill two boys and a girl played together. They fought with dandelions. One boy and the girl caught two dandelions, held them by the stems, and snatched hard at them, to see which head would come off first, to see which would marry first, while the second boy looked rather sulkily on.

The woman sprang hastily aside, for three bareheaded girls in another runabout bore unexpectedly down upon her from an unknown turn in the road.

A long time after they had passed she could still hear the sound of their gay voices in the quiet country.

At last she stood before a narrower road that led to a neat frame cottage, shut in by vines that bore delicate lavender blossoms, great, fragrant, elongated blossoms of a flower she knew, but whose name she had forgotten. Lilac trees stood about. Crocuses bloomed. Dandelions dotted the grass like yellow stars, and an old and quiet man smoked a pipe out on the veranda.

She walked in on the road and stood a little way off looking timidly at him.

He took his pipe out of his mouth and stood.

"Will you come in," he asked, "and rest awhile?"

It seemed to her to be a charming invitation. It sounded to her like the invitation extended in her old Kentucky home, where she knew of a man who went to a house to spend the day and stayed for twenty-three years.

"I thank you very much," she answered, "and I believe I will come in awhile. I have come a long, long way," she added. "I came from New York."

"Did you walk all the way?" the old man asked her.

"I had to walk," she answered, "when the street cars gave out."

She took the rocking chair he gave her and rocked gently back and forth, looking out at the lilacs.

"Will you have a little glass of milk?" he asked, and when she had answered smilingly in the affirmative, he called toward the door:

"Mary!"

Mary the maid came out and received his order. Then she brought the woman not only a glass of milk, but a slice or two of bread and butter on a tray and a saucer of red strawberries with some clotted cream.

The woman thought she had never seen such red strawberries or such creamy cream.

Really it was a lovely country. She was very glad now that she had climbed up over the ragged hill.

"What country is this?" she asked of the old man as she ate the red, red strawberries.

"This is the Bronx," he answered, and smoked again.

The woman paused with a strawberry between her teeth, looking hard at him, wondering within herself what pipe it was he smoked.

Verily he would soon be telling her, she thought, that Brooklyn was all right and Philadelphia was a maddening place to live in, maddeningly gay, that is.

"I thought the Bronx was a country filled with wild animals," was what she said.

"This is the other side of the Bronx," explained the old man. "You are thinking of the Zoo. And what is going on in New York, may I ask? What have they done with Nan Patterson?" he questioned eagerly.

When she had sufficiently recovered the woman told him all about what had happened to Nan Patterson the week before.

"It is very gay out here in the Bronx," the old man said then brightly, evidently pleased with her effort in the way of news. "Very gay, indeed. Now, to-night, for instance, a night-blooming cereus is going to bloom. We have been looking forward to it for months. The girls, my daughters, are going to have an entertainment in honor of its blooming. Wouldn't you like to stay out with us and see it bloom?" he asked eagerly.

But the woman refused gently, with many thanks. She was sorry, she said, but she was afraid she would have to go home.

The old man put his pipe back in his mouth.

"It don't bloom but once in a hundred years," he said wistfully. "I am very sorry indeed that you can't stay out and see it bloom."

ZOE ANDERSON NORRIS.

Has Spain Profited by the Late War?---Poultney Bigelow's Observations and Opinions

HISTORY would be better if historians studied less paper and more people.

It is not so easy to study a people as to sit down in a cozy corner of THE TIMES office and leisurely peruse diplomatic correspondence. This applies particularly to Spain.

Last night my trunks were unloaded at Granada, and they had to be inspected by the town customs (octroi) official before I could drive away with them to the Alhambra. A Castilian nobleman stood near me, who advised me to offer one peseta (about 14 cents) to another noble-looking Castilian standing near me. I did so with some inner compunction, for I had never before offered a bribe. The noble guardian of the royal purse pocketed my modest insult and with stately dignity ordered my baggage set at liberty.

So much for Spanish corruption within my experience. But it would be unfair to generalize from this and conclude that the people in general are corrupt.

If my personal experience is worth anything after four journeys through this strange territory I am inclined to think that Spain is to-day corrupt only at the top—that her administration, military, civil, and otherwise, is more like China, Morocco, or Brazil than like anything in Europe.

To talk of public opinion in Spain is to talk of tennis in a harem—it has a ring of convention about it. But in search of this novelty I bought a third-class ticket from the Franco-Spanish frontier (Cerbere) to Algeciras (opposite Gibraltar)—or, rather, I tried to. But so long a stretch was too much for the railway authorities to contemplate. I was allowed to buy only between towns near together, for instance, the first day to Barcelona; the second to Tarragona, the third to Valencia, the fourth to Balmacete, the fifth to Baeza, the sixth to Granada, and the seventh to Algaceres.

Between Barcelona and Tarragona a Spanish land owner of considerable intelligence and property told me that trade had suffered much through the loss of Cuba and the Philippines in 1898. I informed him that in the United States there was a corresponding feeling that the war had done no particular good to the country in general.

"Ah! but Cuba has profited!" exclaimed my Spanish fellow-traveler.

"How so?" quoth I.

"The Cubans are no longer compelled to buy Spanish goods; they may buy where they choose and they may sell where they choose!"

"Well," I said, "then you are glad at least for the Cubans?"

"But that is not the worst," he added, "no one will buy our goods excepting under compulsion."

"But do you think it is right to compel Cuba to buy from you?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"What are colonies for?" said he simply. "The Government robs us—why should we not plunder others when we can?"

"But now," said I, "there will no doubt be reforms in Spain, and prosperity will follow!"

"On the contrary," answered he. "All the corrupt and worthless functionaries who were turned out of the colonies by the American war are now saddled upon us, and we must find places for them, and they eat up everything that we have!"

There was not much optimism in this merchant of Barcelona. He said that the present Government of Spain was despised by all but those who were making money out of it; he had no confidence in a republican form of government for Spain—his fellow-Spaniards were far too ignorant and superstitious for anything but a firm hand and a one-man rule.

What becomes of English railway carriages when they have outlived their usefulness—when they have proved unfit for suburban service—underground—or any other?

They turn up in Spain by some mysterious process—they are the carriages that were in vogue half a century ago—the same bad buffers and couplers—the same rackety movement that makes the traveler feel as though he had made the journey in a two-wheeled springless native cart of Manchuria.

In Cape Town the curious traveler makes a discovery of analogous interest—he finds there the old Fifth Avenue "stages" which crawled along the chief thoroughfare of New York as late as 1878 and which were running about the chief city of South Africa twenty years later.

The Spanish people are to me a sturdy mixture—at least the real people that travel on foot, on mules, or in the cheapest class by rail. They are strong of wind and limb. Their eyes are clear and courageous. They are courteous one to the other and to the stranger. If one pulls out cigarettes, he offers them to his fellow-passengers; the same with his bottle of wine or his orangcs. It is declined, as a matter of form, but it is not infrequently pressed upon one as a genuine offer.

Indeed, we Americans get our custom of "treating" directly from Spain. Would that we had also the courtly dignity which appears to be born with the peasant of La Mancha or Catalonia!

The third-class car gives as many opportunities of studying national life, for there are seventy-two seats in each carriage, and therefore a dozen times as many persons to study as in second or first.

And, besides, those who travel in the first two classes are pretty much the same anywhere—Germany, France, England, or the United States.

In the bottom class, however, we get strong types—the rough peasant of the East Coast, with his long red bonnet; then, further down the coast, the bronzed fisherman of Valencia; then in the country of Don Quixote we find the men with a species of bandanna handkerchief about their heads. Then on through Andalusia we find the peaked black felt hat, suggesting the conventional stage brigand. Each province has its local peasant type, but all this is lost to the conventional tourist of the cushioned classes.

At every meal I was sharing my food with fellow-travelers, or my flask of water. And my observations lead me to think that, much as the Spaniard cultivates wine, it is pure water which he mainly craves. At nearly every station, however small, (and we stopped at all,) we never failed to hear the cry of children with water jugs and mugs offering us to drink, and they were the only ones who invariably did a good business. Nearly all my rough fellow-passengers had bottles of water as part of their baggage, and it seemed to me that they prized this best of drinks more than wine. So far as price is concerned, there was little difference, wine and water cost about the same —5 centimes a glass.

The sleepy ones curled up on their blankets, the lively ones sang and chatted and joked with those within reach in or out of doors. It was give and take for all—no one could fail to be good humored in such good company.

Nearing Valencia, there sat by me a Spanish merchant, who had a son studying at the University of Granada. He himself owned some land near by, and spoke freely regarding the conditions of the country. Like my former acquaintance of Tarragona, he declared the Government to be corrupt, but yet insisted that there was a public sentiment which had a certain rough-and-ready way of making itself felt. He pointed out the houses to the northward of Valencia, each one with a wooden cross nailed to the apex of the gable. And he pointed to them as symbolic of his country.

"Some centuries ago," said he, "a Spanish King came down here from Madrid for the purpose of driving out heresy. He gave notice that all would be expelled who did not immediately turn Christian. And so they all planted crosses on their houses as a sign that they were Christian—or at least that they did not wish to be expelled. And that is why we are all good Catholics to-day," said he, somewhat grimly.

Referring to Spanish public sentiment he said: "The King last year appointed a Bishop for Valencia. Valencia would not have him; we protested and said we would not receive him. The Minister of State answered that Valencia must receive the Bishop appointed by the King, and that in order to assure to him a good reception he [the Minister] would accompany the Bishop."

"'Very well,' said Valencia, 'if you come we will shoot you also!'

"Neither the Bishop nor the Minister has yet shown himself, and that is more than a year ago. Last month, however, that same Minister passed through this province on his way to Madrid, and we riddled his carriage with bullets."

So much for public sentiment about here.

And that makes me think that Judge Lynch may have a drop of Spanish blood in his veins.

It must be a superficial traveler, indeed, who is not struck by the manly carriage of the average Spanish peasant and the resemblance to the men of our own conquering race. If we will for a moment eliminate the matter of speech and costume, we will note in looking about a country crowd in Spain features recalling market days in Cornwall, Yorkshire, or the south of Ireland. This type of man it was who followed Cortez and Pizarro across the waters, and who made the glory of military Spain in the days of Charles V. But this type is not found to-day in the Spanish army, much less in the ranks of Government officials. Spain is to-day governed by a smooth-faced, sallow, and shifty species of man, who incorporates three centuries of human degeneracy, who has never done a day's work, and who could not earn a living under any honest administration. That is the Spaniard whom the tourist mainly sees—the man of the Custom House, the Post Office, the tax collecting force, the officers of every grade, and even the privates in the ranks.

There is a political revolution now preparing in Spain. It will be short and possibly bloodless; the sallow and shifty army of degenerates will be turned out into the highways along with tramps, beggars, and other social wrecks to make room for others of more robust physique.

No one to-day would oppose a revolution in Spain save those who are the cause of their country's shame.

SOCIETY AT HOME AND ABROAD

MAY 1905

THE outdoor season is now at its full. The suburbs and the various near-by resorts are very gay and there are many house parties. In town it is dullness itself. There are a number of departures for Europe, and those who do remain divide their time between coaching to Ardsley or running out to the Turf Club at Belmont Park. The entertainment for the benefit of the widows and orphans of Japanese soldiers was the one event of interest in town. A dozen or more of the patronesses came in from the country to participate therein. Summer plans are being universally discussed, town houses closed, and the Park and the avenue present no longer the jam of well-appointed equipages these bright Spring afternoons. The bookings this week for England and France are very heavy, and Italy is not without its charms at this season.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt are booked to go abroad for a short trip, and so are Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. James Henry Smith is to leave this week, and the Gerrys, sailing with Mr. and Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart and Mrs. Charles Marshall and Major and Mrs. Colin Campbell, are among other announcements. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont will sail this week, to be absent until the opening of the Newport season. Mrs. Storrs Wells will remain in town until her daughter's marriage to Harry Peters, which event is now fixed for May 25. Mr. and Mrs. Peters will join Mrs. Wells on the other side. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Peter Moller, Miss Moller, and Mr. Clarence Edwin Moller sailed for Italy. They are to tour through the Dolomite country, and then to Paris, and in August they will be at Aix.

Mrs. Frank Sturgis left during the week for Lenox, and her sister, Mrs. Lydig Staples, went to North Hately. Mr. and Mrs. John Sloane and Miss Sloane, who have been abroad all the Winter, have arrived in this country, and have gone to Lenox. Mr. and Mrs. Field will be at Elm Court this Summer, and Mrs. Westinghouse and Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster are opening their cottage. Other Lenox people who are getting settled in their Summer homes are Lady Durand and Miss Durand, the Walter Cuttings, Mr. and Mrs. David Lydig, and Mr. and Mrs. Folsom.

The visit of Mrs. Mackay and the Princess Stigliano Colonna is over. They sailed last Tuesday. The daughter of the Princess will make her début this year. Other American débutantes will be Miss Anita Stewart, Miss Drexel, Miss Deacon, and perhaps Miss Saidee Jones. Mrs. Ogden Goelet at last accounts was in Paris, and the R. T. Wilson, Jrs., had returned from Germany and are homeward bound. They will be at Newport by June. Mrs. Astor is also in Paris, where the young Draytons have landed after an automobile trip through Southern Italy and France.

Dr. and Mrs. Seward Webb have opened Shelburne Farms, and they will be there and in the Adirondacks all during the Summer. Former Ambassador and Mrs. Choate will open their house at Stockbridge, and all last week they were the recipients in London of farewells from friends, while Ambassador and Mrs. Reid and Miss Reid are being given reluctant speeding on this side of the water.

With the exception of the Alfreds and Reginalds, the Vanderbilt family will have a symposium abroad during June. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt, who have been giving May parties and entertainments of all kinds at Biltmore, are to be in Paris early this Summer. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt have been entertaining King Edward in a very quiet way in Paris at their loge at Auteuil. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have been interested in their automobiling, and motor boats, and racing and other sports. They remain on Long Island until July. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs is soon to return to this country, and will be one of the early Newport arrivals. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt are in London. They are to visit for a short period the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough.

The two weddings of the week which interested society were those of the Rev. Philip Mercer Rhinelander and Miss Helen Hamilton, and of Mr. Ruthérfurd and Mrs. Davis. The first marriage unites two historic New York families. Miss Hamilton is a direct descendant of Alexander Hamilton, and the Rhinelanders have been very prominent in New York social life since the days of New Amsterdam. The Ruthérfurds are also among the very old families, and Mrs. Davis was the widow of one of the descendants or Mrs. Van Beuren, whose house with its wide grounds and famous trees is a landmark on West Fourteenth Street.

The whips in the coaching parade of last Saturday are having their annual tour, and to-day are at Blairsdale. Yesterday they were at Tuxedo, the guests of J. Henry Smith. The Philadelphia Four-in-Hand Club was also in line, but owing to the tour and other attractions in the vicinity of New York this city had not the representation of other years in that function. The weather and unkind, and, like on the opening day at Belmont Park, Spring attire was most uncomfortable. Still many of the young women at the risk of meeting the same fate as Tennyson's May Queen, braved it out in the lightest and flimsiest of Summer gowns. It was noticed, however, just as soon as the parade was over, that mothers and maids were waiting with wraps. Miss Natica Rives was one who was enveloped immediately in a comfortable coat and was driven away in a motor. The Riveses will be at Newport this Summer, and the old rumor is being revived that an engagement exists between Miss Rives and Roger Winthrop. No authoritative announcement, up to date, however, has been made.

On Tuesday Miss Mabel A. MacAfee, the granddaughter of James B. Haggin, will be married to Lewis Butler Preston. St. Thomas's Church will be the scene of the ceremony. Mrs. Neville Moberley, who is the sister of Mrs. James B. Haggin, the "step" grandmother of the bride, will be the matron of honor. Mrs. Moberley is from Lexington, Ky., and is also a cousin of the bride, the two wives of James B. Haggin having been related. The maid of honor will be Miss Lida Burpee of Waterbury. George Rutledge Preston will be best man, and the ushers Capt. Henry Rogers Wintnrop, I. Townsend Burden, James Ben Ali MacAfee, J. Dodridge Peet, Jr., Hugh D. Scott, Percy Houghton, Willing Spencer, Walter Cutting, and Williams Burden. The reception will be at the Fifth Avenue residence of Mr. and Mrs. Haggin.

On Thursday Miss Elsie M. Otheman will be married to the Rev. Henry Lathrop Reed. The ceremony will take place at the Madison Avenue Methodist Church. Albert Reed will be his brother's best man, and the maid of honor will be the bride's sister, Miss Margaret S. Otheman. The ushers will be Gofford Pinchot and Dr. Horace S. Stokes.

Miss Angelica Gerry gave a coaching party on Wednesday to Belmont Park. Robert L. Gerry was the whip. Alfred Vanderbilt has been tooling the Pioneer during the week. On Wednesday Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt was the guest of Worthington Whitehouse, and his guests included Miss Cynthia Roche, Miss Natica Rives, Williams Burden, W. F. Whitehouse, Monson Morris, and T. B. Clark, Jr. The Squadron coach has been running to Woodmanston Inn. Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., had it one day last week, and on another occasion it was tooled by Putnam A. Bates. The Defiance was the coach used by the members of the Coaching Club when it made its start Friday afternoon from the Metropolitan Club en route for Tuxedo and Blairsdale. Alfred Vanderbilt was first whip; O. G. Jennings succeeded him at Hackensack, and T. Suffern Tailer drove from Hohokus to Suffern, and J. H. Smith from there on to Tuxedo.

The Squadron coach will ply between Woodmanston Inn and the Holland House for the present.

Mrs. Frank Mackey has taken Mrs. Adair's London house, and consequently will do much entertaining during the "season." Mrs. Adair is living a little distance from London and entertaining week-end parties. Craig Wadsworth has taken a house in London, where he will be one of the bachelor hosts of the year. Mr. and Mrs. Leggett have been giving dinners at their Bruton Street house. Miss Sturgis, Mrs. Leggett's daughter, who was visiting on the Continent, is with her mother. Mrs. Frederick Bell, who sails this week, will go to Paris, and thence a bit later to London. She is building a house in the former city. Lady Cunard is again in London, and was one of Mrs. Leggett's guests at a recent entertainment given by her. The Princess Hatzfeldt is in London for the season, and will have several parties during June. Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, moves into her new house next week, and the King is to be one of her first guests. Miss Cavendish Bentinck is on the Continent traveling with her aunt, Mrs. Ogden Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane, who have been in London, are off this week for the Continent. Lord Charles Beresford, who has been visiting in this country, sailed on Wednesday for England. Mrs. Kip McCreery and her child and Miss Helen Stokes were among those who went abroad last week. Miss Stokes will return in time for the wedding of her brother with Miss Pastor in the early Summer.

Tuesday is the day fixed for the starting of the ocean race. Lord and Lady Brassey, who are here with the Sunbeam—a historical vessel—have been the recipients of much attention. The number of yachts and craft of all kind which will go down the bay on Tuesday for the start will open the yachting season with much éclat. Those who are going abroad on the big liners will have a splendid view of the race as they steam out from Sandy Hook. The New York Yacht Club has a steamboat and a reception committee, and a large number of guests will be entertained by them.

Many of the yachts belonging to well-into commission, and parties will be arranged for the day. Usually the yachting season does not open until after Memorial Day, and it is at its height at the time of the cruise of the New York Yacht Club, generally in July and August. Among the yachts, the Electra will be much missed. The Gerrys will not be at Newport this Summer. They intend making a very long visit abroad, and will not return before the Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Lehr have returned from Europe. They will go to Newport this Summer, and are now arranging for a cottage at that place. Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will close their Washington house in a fortnight, and Mrs. Fish will be at Garrisons-on-the-Hudson until it is time for the Newport season. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Harriman and the Misses Harriman will for the present divide their time between town and their place at Arden, near Tuxedo. Col. and Mrs. De Lancey Kane may go abroad this Summer. Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Kane are at Newport, where they are to be for the rest of the season. The Misses Kane are contemplating a European tour. Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones are at present in Greece. They will be in England by the beginning of June. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel have arrived at Marseilles and are going to Paris, and from there to England for the rest of the season. Oliver H. Payne has closed his house at Thomasville, Ga., and is about to go abroad and take a party with him.

Isleboro, Dark Harbor, will have a large contingent of fashionable people this Summer. Thither will go Mr. and Mrs. Pruyn and Miss Dix and Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock. The health of the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix has improved. He has been out driving in the park with Mrs. Dix. Mr. Henry Sloane and the Misses Sloane will also go to Dark Harbor for the Summer, and other visitors will include Coleman Drayton and Miss Drayton.

+ + +

The late Spring has been a boon for the Riviera and for Italy. Visitors are remaining very much longer than usual. Among the Americans at Cannes are M. Von Hoffmann, who has been entertaining his sister, Mme. de Mores, and her daughter. Young de Mores is being educated in America. At the same resort are Frank Otis and Almeric Paget and his daughter. Mrs. Louis Hegeis and the Countess Rattazzi, who leave Rome for England in the middle of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto Fabbri, who are now in this country, will spend the late Summer at Bar Harbor. Their yacht is put in commission this week. Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard has been the guest of her brother, George Vanderbilt, at Biltmore. Among the recent arrivals from Europe have been Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Bostwick and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon.

+ + +

Mrs. Orme Wilson has been visiting in Washington. Miss Janet Fish has also been at the capital for a few weeks. Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger is now in New York, but will go to her home in Washington next week, and later will visit in Connecticut and in the Adirondacks. Mr. and Mrs. Luther Kountze and Miss Kountze will be at their farm near Morristown until July. Miss Kountze will be one of the débutantes of next Winter. She and her parents will pass the late Summer abroad.

+ + +

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker open their home at Tuxedo this week. Mr. and Mrs. William Goadby Loew will go to their Summer home at Monmouth Beach the latter part of this month. They are to give a number of large house parties there during the Summer. The wedding of W. Gould Brokaw and Miss Howard of Washington takes place late in June and a number of entertainments will be given in their honor. Mr. E. Victor Loew may go abroad for the polo. Foxhall Keene is still busy arranging for the American team which he is to take to England.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard are now in Washington. Mrs. Lorillard will sail shortly for Europe. Mrs. Kernochan will also go abroad this Summer, and later Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Seton. Mrs. William E. Strong and Miss Strong sail on the 24th for a Summer visit to England. Mrs. Charles B. Alexander will open her Tuxedo cottage and will be there until July. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Minot, who have just returned from abroad, will go to their country seat near Orange. Their wedding was an event of the Winter season in London for the American colony.

One of the weddings of May will be that of Miss Elsie Waterbury, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Waterbury, and Gouverneur Morris. According to tradition, a Morris should be married in Westminster, where history importance of the family since Colonial days. St. Peter's, therefore, is the church chosen. Miss Waterbury has lived in Westchester all her life, and her parents have been identified with entertaining there on the most lavish scale. The days of the famous Waterbury amateur circus are not forgotten, although many of the actors and performers have passed away or have fallen out from the present fashionable army and retired. Robert Hargous, who was one of the stars on that occasion, is living very quietly in the Adirondacks, more or less of an invalid. The Morris family has a penchant for naming one of its sons Gouverneur, and there are several bearing that patronymic to-day. This young Mr. Morris has made a career for himself as a writer, and I believe that he is a brother of the present Mrs. Stephen Bonsal. The wedding will be followed by a breakfast at the Waterbury residence near the Country Club. Westchester is looking its best, and there will be a fine array of society at the nuptials.

On Wednesday Miss Adele Carstensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carstensen, will be married to John McJ. Shreve at Scarsdale, N. Y. This will be another picturesque suburban ceremony. The names of the attendants have already been given. On the same day on which Miss Nathalie Wells will become Mrs. Peters—May 25—will take place the wedding of Miss Helen P. Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Russell, to C. Russell Auchincloss, at Middletown, Conn. Mr. Auchincloss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Auchincloss of this city. In town on the 25th Miss Violet Richardson will wed Eben B. Knowlton. The ceremony will take place at the Grosvenor, where the bride-elect and her mother, Mrs. Thomas Richardson, are stopping. Mr. Knowlton comes from the well-known Brooklyn family. On May 26 will be the wedding of Miss Eleanor Atwood Scott, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Francis M. Scott, to William Henry Tew, and this will complete the list of marriages in May.

The June weddings will be very numerous. Miss Georgiana Wilmerding, the daughter of Mrs. John C. Wilmerding, is to marry Mr. Ansel Phelps on that day. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. J. Magee Elsworth, who was Miss Van Rensselaer, and a cousin of the bride-elect. Owing to the recent death of Mr. Wilmerding invitations are limited to intimate friends and a few relatives. Mr. John C. Heckscher, an uncle of Miss Wilmerding, has just returned from Europe, where he has been this Winter. On June 1 also there will be a very large wedding at St. Bartholomew's Church. Miss Eva Lawrence, daughter of Mr. Frank R. Lawrence, the President of the Lotos Club, will marry David H. Taylor. There will be a retinue of pretty bridesmaids, débutantes of the season, and a wedding breakfast afterward at the residence of the bride's father. On June 3 will take place the second nuptial event in the Schroeder family this year. On that day Miss Helen White Stevens, the daughter of Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn, will be married to Gilliat Ghequiere Schroeder at St. Mark's Church, where the Stevenses, the Whites, Chaniers, and Rutherfurds, the bride's relatives, have worshipped for generations. June 6 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Louise E. Hollins, the daughter of William M. Hollins, to Henry Chauncey Cryder. On June 7 Miss Janet Stewart Heath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kemble Heath, and Robert Forsyth Little are to be married at the West End Collegiate Church. This date will be very popular with the couples in June, for on this day Miss Helen Barber, the daughter of Mrs. Charles G. Barber, becomes Mrs. Elbert F. Wilmerding; Miss Marie Delmonico will marry Edward Frith Du Vivier at St. Ann's Church, and at Massapequa, L. I., will take place the wedding of Miss Margaret Robison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Robison, to Samuel A. Walsh, Jr. For the beginning of June there are yet a few other weddings. Miss Dorothy Hinckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Parker Hinckley, and Thomas R. Williams are to be married at Far Rockaway, and Miss Augusta Boyiston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Montgomery Roosevelt, will become Mrs. Donald Campbell on June 14. The latter wedding will take place at Roosevelt Hall, Skaneateles. Miss Florence Carpenter and William Henry Gelshenen are to be married on June 1 at the Collegiate Church, West Seventy-seventh Street and West End Avenue.

Horse shows there are in plenty. This past week has seen one in Brooklyn and society has crossed the bridge for that event. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt, Robert L. Gerry, and others have been among the audience. This week will see the Orange Horse Show at the Riding and Driving Club. This is one of the events of the season in suburban New Jersey, and all the Oranges will turn out en masse. Baltimore has a show beginning on the 17th and thither will go Miss Roosevelt and Miss Isabel May and other well-known people. Baltimore is devoted to the horse, and the show is always marked by a red letter in its calendar.

Morristown will have a club opening; Tuxedo various and divers private festivities, and Meadow Brook, besides racing, will have polo, and later a dog show. There is much practicing for steeplechases at the various clubs and private race tracks all over the island.

Mrs. F. Ormond French will sail shortly for this country. She will visit at Tuxedo and at Newport, where her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt, will be then installed, and later she will open her villa at the latter place. Mrs. French has been paying a visit to her daughter, Lady Cheylesmore, at her country seat.

Mrs. Frederick Neilson is going abroad. She and her brother, Frederick Gebhard, have been among the belated guests at the Hot Springs of Virginia, remaining there with the numerous bridal couples. Mr. Gebhard was missed at the opening day at Belmont Park.

Peter Gerry drove for his brother last Saturday at the Coaching parade, but Robert L. Gerry was the guiding spirit all the same, as he did much to arrange the parade. Col. William Jay, who did not take his coach out, is one of the guests at the Coaching Club tour to-day. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont were also missed in the parade, they being on Long Island on that day.

The plans of Mr. and Mrs. George Gould are now changed and they will sail in June. This will enable them to take the entire family, as the boys will have finished their college term. In the meantime, Mr. and Mrs. Gould, who have returned from Washington, will be at Georgian Court, with intervals of short visits to town. Miss Marjorie Gould will not come out next Winter, as she is still in the schoolroom. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould are at Ardsley, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gould are preparing for a Summer cruise.

Mme. Bonaparte sailed on Thursday to join her daughter in Europe. Mr. Bonaparte Wyse, a distant cousin, arrived from Paris last week. On the Coronia quite a number of titled people came over. These included Sir Charles Rivers Wilson and Lady Rivers Wilson, well known here, on their way to Canada; Sir William Mather and Lady Mather, Lord and Lady Trayner, and Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy and Miss Shaughnessy. Lord Trayner is a Scotch Judge and dignitary with a country seat at North Berwick.

near future will be those of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, Sr., who are to go to Scotland in June, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Edgar Shepherd, who will visit the Continent and England, sailing on the Baltic. Mrs. Shepherd is a sister of Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Farewell bachelor dinners included and include that of C. Russell Auchincloss, who is to marry Miss Russell, and that of Harry Peters, who becomes the husband of Miss Nathalie Wells. The Auchincloss dinner took place last evening at Delmonico's and that of Mr. Peters will take place on the 19th.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames are congraulating them on the birth of a son, which event took place recently in Boston. Mrs. Ames was Miss Cryder, one of the Cryder triplets and the first to be married.

The most important engagement of the week was that of Miss Helen Rutherfurd Ely, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ely, to Mr. Richard Worsam B. Meade. Miss Ely is a niece of Rutherfurd Stuyvesant and Mrs. Henry White and Winthrop Rutherfurd and a near relative of Miss Stevens, who is to marry Mr. Schroeder in June. Her mother is a graceful writer and has published several books. The Elys live in the old Rutherfurd mansion, on Second Avenue, opposite St. Mark's Churchyard.

In the necrology of the week appears the name of Mrs. George Griswold. Mrs. Griswold was a Miss Post. Her father was Edwin Post and her mother a Miss Gibbes. Mrs. Griswold represented, therefore, the older set of New York society. Mr. Griswold is a cousin of Pierre Lorillard and the manager of Tuxedo Park. The funeral of Mrs. Griswold took place on Wednesday.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

MR. and Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris, who recently gave a reception for the Radcliffe Club at the Metropolitan Club, had a rather romantic courtship and marriage, as did Mrs. Morris's parents, Col. Elliott Shepard and Mrs. Shepard. Mrs. Shepard was Miss Margaret Vanderbilt, a daughter of the late Commodore Vanderbilt, and she met Mr. Shepard at the Church of the Strangers on Mercer Street, long since torn down. Dr. Charles F. Deems, a young Southern clergyman, had come North at the close of the war, and Commodore Vanderbilt, seeing the simple faith and sterling worth of the man, bought the church for him to preach in, and afterward attended it until his death, with the members of his family. Col. Shepard, as owner and editor of The Mail and Express, had a fashion of printing Scriptural texts of various sorts at the head of its columns. Mr. Morris is a grandson of the late David Hennen of Louisiana, a famous lawyer of his day in the South. His mother, Mrs. John A. Morris (Miss Cora Hennen) lives in Westchester at Engelheim. Both Mr. Morris and his elder brother, Alfred Hennen Morris, are interested in horses.

Mr. Morris and his wife, who was Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard, live in West Seventy-second Street. Neither cares much for society. Both Miss Shepard and Mr. Morris were interested in the mission work of St. Bartholomew's Church, and it was at the Sunday school at that church's mission in East Forty-second Street that they became acquainted, and finally became engaged. Both were young, and as Miss Shepard had had rather delicate health Mrs. Shepard was somewhat averse to her daughter's marrying so young. However, the wedding took place, and it was not until after that that the bridegroom completed his studies at Harvard, being graduated at that university nine years ago. The marriage has proved a notably happy one. They have two children, one born five or six months ago. They have besides their city home on Seventy-second Street a cottage at Bar Harbor, and also a farm in the southern part of Mississippi, near the Bogue Chitto River. There are lots of places about this place, and here their fad is the raising of small fruits.

Miss Florence M. Rhett, who makes her home with J. Pierpont Morgan's family, and who has charge of the correspondence and the household matters, is a distant relative of the Morgans. She is a descendant of the old Rhett family of South Carolina, the members of which were ever prominent socially in Charleston. Miss Rhett, like the daughters of the Morgan household, is very tall and is large, rather stout, in fact, and is regarded as a sister rather than a remote relative of the family. Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan was Miss Tracy of Boston, and while she is tall, large, and distinguished looking, with gray hair, she is not at all stout as are her daughters. Mr. Morgan's yearly allowance to his daughters is not a large one, considering his fortune, but it is never increased, and from it they must take all their charitable contributions. It is stated that he considers self-denial in contributing to charity most desirable.

The house taken by the Hon. Hugo Baring and Lady Evelyn Baring, who was Lady Megharamorne, and leased by them from the Benjamin Guinnesses, at Douglaston, L. I., is the property of William L. Douglas, and is situated on a headland extending into Little Neck Bay. The grounds are extensive and the house large and old-fashioned. As soon as the Guinness family took possession they had placed a large sign inscribed "Douglas House," at the entrance to the grounds, and also posted a notice to trespassers. The cottage on the grounds, which will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Guinness while they are over here, was formerly occupied by Mrs. Randolph, while Capt. Randolph's widow, she who later married the late William C. Whitney and finally died at the Whitney country place on Long Island after a long and painful illness following an accident while hunting. Before Mrs. Randolph lived there her sister, Mrs. Wright, occupied it. When the Guinnesses

In the early eighties when the then Miss Emily Stevens married Adolph Ladenburg, they had a hunt wedding; a revival of such picturesque proceedings on the part of those who hunt to-day would be an agreeable divergence from the stereotyped marriage programme. On the occasion of the Ladenburg-Stevens nuptials the members of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club rode to the church, and afterward, in pink coats and on their horses followed by their dogs, serenaded the newly married couple on horns. Some ten years ago at Westchester there was another hunt wedding, but this differed from the other. It was that of Miss Caroline Jaffray Hurst and George H. Mairs. It took place in the Spring and the wedding breakfast was served at small tables arranged on the lawn. After this came a Virginia reel, led by the bride and bridegroom, and this, in turn, was followed by a meet and run with the hounds.

If Mrs. Clarence Mackay is elected to a position on the Long Island School Board, for which she is soon to run—and it goes without saying that she will be, for no woman on Long Island is more popular than she—she will be the second young woman of fashion interested politically and practically in school matters. Mrs. Victor Sorchan has for some years been on the Newport Board. Mrs. Sorchan, who married Mr. Sorchan eleven years ago, was Miss Charlotte Hunnewell, daughter of the late Hollis Hunnewell of Boston and sister of the present Hollis Hunnewell, who first married Miss Maud Jaffray and later Mrs. Bell Neilson Kemp, his wife, who divorced him, marrying John Tooker. Mrs. Sorchan was a niece of the late Frederic Bronson and a cousin of Mrs. Lloyd Griscom. On the death of her parents Egerton Winthrop, Sr., became her guardian. Mr. Sorchan's mother was originally a Miss Thorn, one of the Thorns whose city home was on West Sixteenth Street, where the New York Hospital now stands. Mr. Sorchan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sorchan, live in Paris at 10 Rue Lincoln. Mr. Sorchan is her second husband, her first having been M. La Chaise. Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sorchan go over yearly to visit them.

The beautiful Misses Gunning, whose blood flows in so many titled English men and women of to-day, made their début into Dublin society through the kindness of an actress, Mrs. Bellamy, who herself loaned them frocks in which to make their entrée into the Dublin drawing room. They were only half-educated, and were the daughters of a run-down Irish squire. Their first idea had been to go on the stage, where their beauty might prove a drawing card, and this led to their meeting Mrs. Bellamy, a noted actress of the day. From Dublin, where their beauty created a furor, they went on to London, where they were almost mobbed when they appeared in public, and were acclaimed the greatest beauties in the metropolis. The Duke of Hamilton, who had several times proposed to the handsome Elizabeth Chudleigh, a maid of honor at the Court of the Prince of Wales, and who was later the Duchess of Kingston, became infatuated with Elizabeth Gunning, the eldest of the sisters.

The Duke was a spendthrift and a rake. So anxious was he to have the knot tied securing him the beauteous Miss Gunning that he sent one morning for a minister to marry him at once. As there was neither license nor ring when the parson arrived, he naturally refused to wed the couple. However, the Duke threatened to send for the Archbishop. The result was that at 12:30, in Mayfair Chapel, with a bed curtain ring in lieu of a golden circle, Miss Gunning became the Duchess of Hamilton. She was presented on Friday, and even nobility in its anxiety to see her climbed on top of all the furniture available for the purpose of getting an unobstructed view. On another occasion she stopped at a country inn, and a hundred people, determined not to miss her, sat up all night in order to see her enter her postchaise the next morning.

After her marriage to the Duke she lived in great state, although she is said to have remained modest and unspoiled throughout her long career. In his memoirs Horace Walpole states that the Duke and Duchess walked ahead of their guests to the dinner table, where they sat together at the upper end, eating off of the same plate. They never drank to any one under the rank of Earl. After the Duke of Hamilton died the Duchess married Col. Campbell, who later became the Duke of Argyll, but before this she had refused the Duke of Bridgewater. By her first marriage she became the mother of two successive Dukes of Hamilton, and by her second the mother of two successive Dukes of Argyll.

The younger Gunning girl, Maria, was still more beautiful, but she died at twenty-six, poisoned by cosmetics, for, handsome as she was, she desired to be still more so. She had married the young Earl of Coventry. Her character was not so admirable as that of her sister, for she was very vain, and also extremely silly. Followed when she walked by those who wished to gaze on her beauty, she claimed to be frightened, and the King ordered a guard to protect her while she strolled, an attention that greatly pleased her. She was married when only eighteen, and at twenty-six, when mortally ill, she lay on a couch with a handglass by her, and when she saw the frightful change in her looks she went to bed and kept the curtains drawn, and for the last two weeks of her life she would allow no light in her room save that from the lamp heating the tea kettle, and food and medicine were slipped through the curtains to her, as she would allow no one to look at her.

Sir Alfred Cooper, the English physician who was knighted as a coronation honor, married a sister of the Duke of Fife. The Duke of Hamilton gave them a delightful country place on the Isle of Arran, where they pass the Autumns. At the time of the gift no buildings were permitted to be erected on the island except the shooting box of the Duke. Lady Cooper is much interested in the hospitals to which her husband is attached, especially at the present time, when there is widespread poverty and the number of patients is greatly increased, thus taxing the hospital resources to their limits and taking much time and money from those interested in them. Sir Alfred Cooper is one of the Trustees of the Cancer Research Fund. His father was a member of the bar and practiced at Old Bailey. Sir Alfred was for some years the Devil's Own surgeon—which sounds a bit ambiguous.

Despite the unwritten law of England that a Queen Consort must never make country visits to untitled subjects, Queen Alexandra has been the guest of Mrs. Willie James at West Dean Park. Mrs. James, who is a special favorite of the Queen, is petite, a good hostess, and an amusing and witty conversationalist. Although Scotch born and bred, she does not in any way indicate it. She was Miss Evelyn Forbes, a sister of Lady St. Oswald, of Sir Charles Forbes, and of Mrs. Blundell Leigh.

Mrs. Thrale, whom Johnson's friendship and admiration made notable, and whose marriage to an Italian music master after Thrale's death cost her the friendship of the famous Fanny Burney, maid of honor and authoress, and almost that of Johnson, was a plump, short, brisk, and active woman who rouged her cheeks a bright red and was considered by many, including Johnson, to be extremely pretty. Undoubtedly she was attractive, bright, and witty. Johnson's verses ending "Look at Thrale on Thirty-five" are too well known to be quoted here. The immortal Samuel first met the Thrales in 1765, and it was not until 1820 that Mrs. Thrale, then Mrs. Piozzi, died from the effects of a fall. The Thrales lived most of the time at Bath, and thither Johnson went in 1776 for his health; thither also went Boswell, but the latter did not get permission to do so until after he had sent Johnson a reproachful letter.

In his inimitable "Life of Johnson" Boswell describes their stay at the Pelican, the inn at Bath, in detail. Among the diversions of Bath were trips to Bristol by diligence, the latter leaving Bath at 7 in the morning, arriving at Bristol at 9, and returning at 4. It was on one of these trips that Johnson investigated in Bristol the supposed discoveries by Chatterton of the Rowley manuscripts. One of Mrs. Thrale's recollections was of being carried at Bath, when a child, in the arms of Beau Nash. Driven from Bath by the Gordon riots, the Thrales went to Brighton, and there, in 1780, they met Piozzi, destined to be Mrs. Thrale's second husband.

Piozzi went abroad and, Thrale dying in 1781, his widow returned to Bath. Thither on his return in 1784 from abroad went Piozzi. The two met again on July 2 of that year—a day that Mrs. Thrale afterward referred to as "the happiest of" her life, and twenty-three days later they were married. Johnson, who had been ill, hearing of the projected match, wrote to Mrs. Thrale asking her to permit him an hour's conversation and saying he would at once start by chaise for Bath, if she would permit it. She wrote back that until he changed his opinon of Piozzi she preferred no converse with him. Her marriage to the music teacher estranged many of her friends. She moved frequently from place to place, but lived almost entirely in Bath and Clifton, dying at the latter place eighty-five years ago, in 1820.

It happened on Staten Island, and not so long ago that the fair has been forgotten, although the incident here presented was known, fortunately, to a limited few, who formed a corporation in the matter.

A certain well-known man had loaned to his young nephews and nieces the use of his house for an entertainment in aid of a church. On the day of the event he went to the dining room, where the refreshment tables were placed, in search of a glass of something cool. As he entered he observed several of his nieces and nephews grouped around two different tables some little distance apart. On each was a large punch bowl and a lot of glasses. By one bowl was the sign: "Nice lemonade, 10 cents." The other bore a similar sign, only the amount specified was 15 cents. The first bowl was emptied of all but a glass or so of the liquid, while the other and 15-cent bowl was nearly full. Suspecting a childish and, in his mind, ill-timed rivalry in the matter, he reproved one of the children, saying it was not fair to make the price of one bowl lower than the other, and thus deprive the others of the pleasure and profit of selling their lemonade.

"But," responded the boy, in very low tones, "we had to, you know—we really had to."

"But I don't see why."

"Well," said the boy, whispering into his ear, and pointing to the veranda, where a small, fat, and very black-haired puppy lay basking in the sun with a remarkably sticky gloss on his coat; "you see the pup fell from the open window into our bowl this morning just before we brought it in here, and as we had no more lemonade we couldn't afford to fling it away, so we made the price 10 cents, and Jim and Alice (indicating the children at the other bowl) said they didn't mind, for they would get as much fun out of seeing people pick the hairs out of their mouths as they would from selling their own bowl. But there's where we fooled 'em, for we picked out all the hair with a toothbrush—of course, we washed the brush first."

The Landgrave of Hesse, who makes lengthy visits to London, so lengthy, indeed, that he practically makes it his home, is now in Vienna. He is the head of the Hesse family, and represents the elder and also the non-reigning branch, as the Grand Duke of Hesse belongs to the younger and reigning branch. The Landgrave, whose eyesight is so defective that rumors have arisen that he is blind, is devoted to music, and himself composes music said to be of much merit. Before leaving London he played several of his compositions at the special request of Queen Alexandra at Buckingham Palace, and she expressed herself as delighted with them. The Landgrave is proficient also in the art of improvisation on the piano, but dislikes doing so save when very few people are about him. He has a remarkable touch. At the Opera he uses a large magnifying glass through which to look at the stage. The Landgrave is setting to music some verses called "Butterflies," written by Miss Violet Kay, an Englishwoman whose poems are much talked of by those who have read them, but which she declines to have published.

Dinners here have been growing simpler and shorter for several years, and in England also this latest and sensible fashion is leading. King Edward dislikes long dinners, and consequently few last over an hour, while three-quarters is the usual time. Drinking, too, is simpler. Weak whisky and water, Moselle and lemonade are preferred beverages. The smart dishes in London are now rather American than Parisian. For example, there are poulet à la Waldorf, bananas au beurre à la Vanderbilt, and other dishes suggestive of America. Made dishes are preferred to joints and fowl cooked whole, and at dessert there are always large dishes of shelled nuts, oranges and grapes, and also some foreign fruit, such as grape fruit or Wickson plums from South Africa. The grape fruit comes from Jamaica, while peaches are another imported fruit. Rice, macaroni, and cheese are also much liked.

Recently in England, at Grosvenor House, the Duke and Duchess of Westminster had a historical loan collection for a charity, and the souvenirs on exhibition were quite remarkable, not so much in themselves as from their origin. For example, there was a set of baby linen made by the hands of Queen Elizabeth for her sister Mary, and similar garments from the nursery of the Cromwell family and from that of Henrietta Maria. The bonnet worn by Queen Louise of Prussia and left in a farmhouse near Berlin, when she fled from Napoleon; shoes worn by Queen Anne and Queen "Bess," and the gold brocade train that adorned the Princess Charlotte of Wales at her wedding will be on view, as also will be etchings and drawings by Queen Victoria. There were also a collection of the seals of famous women, many of which are original and unique. The manuscripts of novels by Jane Austen, Mrs. Gaskell, Miss Edgeworth, Mrs. Somerville, and others were also on exhibition.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

MRS. B. FALES BROWN of Tenafly Town invites you to a Spring party the twenty-seventh of May, full of frolic and play, with a merry May-pole dance, also music, song, and chance. Erie train, 12:25." This is the way the invitation reads for a lawn party to be given by Mrs. Brown at her country home in Jersey to a number of her New York friends, on Saturday, the 27th.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zuckerman and Miss Nellie Zuckerman of the Hotel Ansonia have opened their cottage at Deal Beach, N. J., for the Summer.

On Saturday, May 20, the Little Mothers' Aid Association will take its first Summer outing to its country home in Pelham Park. Nearly 5,000 children were entertained there last year, and the association hopes to increase the number this year. Four hundred and twenty-eight dollars have been turned in so far as the proceeds of the Davenport lecture given a short time ago, and there are two more committees to be heard from. The nursery at 16 Greenwich Street will be opened soon. Some of those interested in the work are: Mesdames H. Johnson, F. Hermann, F. A. Hackley, Henry Siegel, C. E. Sprague, J. H. Maher, T. A. Smith, S. C. T. Dodd, H. F. Kiddle, and C. C. Shayne.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Kingsford have returned to this city from a visit to their country home in Oswego, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Stoddard of the Ansonia are spending a few weeks in their villa in Port Chester, N. Y.

There was a dinner of the Sunrise Club Monday evening at 6:45, in the Café Boulevard. The topic for after-dinner discussion was: "Can We Offer Higher Education to the Orient?" Edmund Russell was the opening speaker.

A number of upper west side society women acted as patronesses at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre entertainment on Wednesday. Some of them were: Mesdames F. G. Burke, E. A. Greely, Caspar Dean, J. A. Corsino, L. D. Blake, C. F. Naething, J. H. Judge, Jacob Litt, J. H. Parker, Miss Della Fay Norris, Miss Mary G. Hay, and Miss Sadie American.

Mrs. W. I. Cheesman and Miss Gladys Cheesman have returned from a visit of two weeks in Atlantic City.

There was a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Silver Cross Day Nursery, of which Mrs. Henry T. Pierce is President, on Tuesday, in the home of Mrs. Frank Overton Evans, 147 West One Hundred and Thirtieth Street. Plans were discussed for next season's work and entertainments. The Junior Auxiliary of the nursery, of which Mrs. Evans is Honorary President, held its biennial election of officers recently. Miss May Elderd has held the office of President for two years, and has had a most successful administration, seeing the auxiliary grow from three or four members to its present roll call of twenty-five. The newly elected President is Miss Alice Van Wort Smith, 183 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street. Last year this branch of the nursery raised over $400 to devote to the work, and it hopes to do even better this year, and to this end has planned a sale, to be held the first week in November.

Mr. and Mrs. James McDonough, 505 West One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, gave a reception recently for their daughter, Miss Frances, who has lately returned from an extended visit to Liberty, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Minthorne Woolsey of the Stuart, Broadway and Ninety-fourth Street, have had for their guests for seven weeks their two daughters from the South, Mrs. James Wood Reed and Mrs. Olden Howell. A number of affairs have been given in their honor, and Thursday they were the guests of Mrs. Sneed at the Empire Theatre. After the play the party lunched at Martin's. Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Howell will return to their Southern homes on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Woolsey will visit their home, in Selma, Ala., for two weeks, leaving on Wednesday.

Invitations have been issued to the members of the Metropolitan Hospital and Dispensary to take a trip to Bay Ridge to-morrow. They will meet in the home of Miss Josephine M. Lowe.

Miss Frankie Johnson is making a visit of about six weeks in Nashville, Tenn., with some of her school friends.

The shirt-waist dance of Tuesday evening in the Hotel Endicott was a much larger affair than had been anticipated. The Palm Court of the hotel was hung with small lanterns and streamers of gayly colored ribbons and crepe paper, and the effect of the myriads of tiny lights was particularly attractive. The young women to whom credit is due for the artistic decorations are Misses Margherita and Allene Pierce, Rita Maas, Florence Abrams, Florence Liebes, Blanche McHugh, and Stella Wolf. There were about 250 guests present, and during one of the dances they were showered with confetti from the balcony. One of the pleasantest features of the dance was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elsie Stormer to H. C. Schwall, a resident of the hotel.

C. F. Tucker of the Colonial Hotel returned yesterday from a four days' stay in Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Philo Scoville Hagar announce the marriage of their daughter, Sarah Scoville, to James Mayer Halsted on Wednesday, May 3.

Mrs. Leroy Andrews and Mrs. H. Schwartz are spending a few weeks in Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Thurston and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sheridan of East Orange are stopping for a short time with Joseph H. Steinhardt at the Ansonia.

On Friday the annual election of officers of the Rota Club was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur A. Stillwell, 118 West One Hundred and Twenty-first Street. It was the last meeting for the season of this literary and parliamentary club, which gets its name from the fact that new members hold office every year, each taking a turn as President for a term. The outgoing President was Mrs. Frank H. Daniels, 103 West One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, and the incoming Mrs. Willard Laird. The membership is limited to twenty-five members.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Borchers and Miss Borchers, residents of the Hotel Ansonia, are taking an outing of a month in their country place at Charlottesville, Va.

On Monday afternoon there was a meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the Hotel Astor. The constitution was revised at this meeting, which was an unusually long one, the session being held from 10:30 to 2. There were fifteen delegates chosen for the convention of the U. D. C. to be held in the Fall in California, some of whom are: Mesdames Parker, Schuyler, Corbin, Woolsey, Martin, Hicks, and Craink.

The Thursday Afternoon Euchre Club, which was to have held its last meeting for the season on Thursday in the Endicott, postponed the game until the coming Thursday, on account of the illness of the President, Mrs. Lillard, and the Secretary, Mrs. Pierce. Mrs. Lillard will leave for Sea Bright on Saturday, to be gone all Summer.

Early in the week Miss Abrams will leave the Endicott for a visit of a month in Syracuse, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Degnan and Miss Degnan have gone to their Summer quarters in Red Bank, N. J.

One of the largest club receptions of the season was held in Sherry's on Saturday of last week, when the New York City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution welcomed their Regent, who is now President General of the society. Mrs. MacLean addressed her friends and well-wishers in a few words, telling them that, after all, their applause and good wishes meant more to her than all the other criticisms or praises that she had received. The Rev. Nevitt Steele, Chaplain of the chapter, made the opening address. Numbers of the most prominent club and society women in the city were present, and all were discussing the question as to whether Mrs. Vernon Mansfield Davis or Mrs. Clarence Postley will be elected to the office of President of the chapter.

Mrs. Emilie Van Biel, 34 Gramercy Park, who is making a tour of six months in the East, is at present in Egypt.

WHAT SMART WOMEN ARE WEARING

THIS is certainly a checked—or should one say checkered?—season in the modish world, as every fashionable woman with any pretensions to youth has at least one shepherd's or other plaid or checked gown in her wardrobe, and just at present they are in evidence. Indeed nothing is smarter for traveling, shopping, and walking than these checked gowns, and as they may be made with either long or short coats, of either chiffon veiling or heavy mannish cloths, and also in many different colorings and blends of the same color, as well as size of checks, it is no wonder that plaids reign triumphant in town and country.

Many of these checked costumes in heavier materials are trimmed with groups of short and narrow bias strappings, the ends of which are ornamented with tiny gilt, silver, or other small buttons, or when the section of the costume these strappings ornament is cut on the bias the strappings are straight. Narrow bands of braid, either black, white, or of some color corresponding with one of the plaids is used instead of straps of the material. The woman who wriggles her shoulders when she walks should, however, eschew the Eton coat with straps and buttons on the back so arranged as to form the upper half of a similar section on the skirt just below the girdle, for the effect is, to say the least, extraordinary when the straps and buttons above begin to lose their balance and slop from side to side. One such costume seen recently, noted at a fashionable restaurant, was in plain dark blue; the braid was white, the buttons gilt; the costume itself was smart and pleasing until the wearer began to walk and wriggle her shoulders, and then it was ridiculous.

Miss Alice Roosevelt, lunching the other day with Mrs. Robert Goelet, was in a pale gray plaided coat and skirt, trimmed with red cloth and black and white braid. The plaid was almost invisible. At a distance the effect was of plain gray, but close to it resolved itself in a half-inch plaid composed of fine lines of gray and white, with now and then a line of red, but the red was so fine a line as to be practically invisible. The round-length skirt had a few deep, straight plaits; the coat had an Eton top, a black belt, and in the back below the belt were short and wide extensions of the gray cloth. The extensions were between the hips and the centre back, and were tabs of the cloth outlined with three-quarter-inch widths of braid, the first white and the outer one black. Just above the tight belt the coat bloused out a trifle, but was almost close-fitting about the shoulders and bust. The collar was on the sailor order in the back and of red cloth bordered with white and black to match the tabs. In the front the revers were very wide and very short, the coat being cut away at the top in rounded fashion to show the white underblouse. The coat closed in almost double-breasted fashion. The coat sleeves had upward turning points of red cloth as cuffs, and these were finished in black and white. Her large round hat was of shirred red tulle, trimmed with a wreath of red poppies.

Mrs. Robert Goelet wore a curious costume of dull china blue cloth, having a satin finish, and carried over one arm a voluminous wrap to match. Mrs. Goelet is very tall and slim. The gown had a decidedly long train with a double skirt. The upper skirt was laid in pressed-in box plaits, allowed to swing loose at the bottom. This upper skirt or tunic ended perhaps fourteen inches above the bottom of the plain, trained under jupe. There was a belt of the cloth and the top of the coat had a deep, rounded cape of the same cloth, in the back and over the shoulders. This cape escaped the waist line by several inches, and rounded up much narrower, or shorter, at the sides. It was plain as to plaits and gathers and simply hemmed, but silk braid perhaps three-quarters of an inch wide described a series of deep loops from top to bottom. There were four or five of these looped sections with four or five loops forming each section, there being perhaps the width of the braid between each section of each loop. The sleeves appeared to be quite full and to have cuffs trimmed with the silk braid. In the front of the coat top there were small wide revers, elaborately braided. Her hat was one of the most exaggerated French chapeaus of the turned-up order, tilted well over her forehead, small in size, and showing all of her coiffure except a small section at the top and front. This chapeau was also of blue to match the costume and was trimmed with rosebuds in nearly all colors, lavender, blue, yellow, and pink.

Among new materials used for two-piece costumes are white mohairs marked in one-eighth-inch squares by black lines the width of a pinhead. A number of fashionable young women have costumes made up of this new short plaid or checked material, among them Miss Katharine Barney and Miss Natica Rives, the latter having the larger check. Both wore these costumes at the Wickes-Haven wedding, Miss Barney's has two sets of revers and cuffs, one set of turquoise blue and the other white, and both, of course, worn together. Her chapeau at the wedding was a tricorne turned up across the front with a flattened piquet of turquoise blue feathers starting from under a dash of brown feathers in the exact centre front. The hat itself was pale blue; she also wore this at the parade of the Ladies' Four-in-Hand Driving Club.

Miss Rives wore a hat small and close at the back, but rising in a halo flare at the front, where a wide bow of yellow velvet ribbon was fastened. The costume was an Eton coat and round skirt. Miss Barney's skirt, too, of course, was short. Miss Rives's skirt was laid in boxplaits some three inches wide at the top by five at the bottom, and between them at the top (,) the skirt and exending down far enough to form a hip yoke were narrow strips of the cloth strapped on and caught with tiny buttons. The Eton coat was similarly trimmed.

Mme. Lillian Nordica, lunching at Sherry's the other day, wore a beautiful green chiffon cloth gown, the white foundation slip gleaming softly through. The gown had a trained skirt, and the shade of green was a soft dull hue, on the mignonette order. The stock and pointed guimpe were of Irish lace over white, and overlapping this guimpe was a shaped collar of the lace piped with green and forming a still deeper point, over which lapped, or appeared to lap, the bodice proper of green chiffon cloth. The bodice had practically the same effect in front as in the back, and was fitted to the figure by the folds of the material being drawn in at the waist line. The bottom of the bodice was slightly pointed, and was finished without a girdle. The sleeves were full and wide, but not puffed, and extended to the elbow, where each was shirred at the centre of the outside seam and drawn up slightly in the lower centre, and from under these upper sleeves of green drooped full lower sleeves of white lace that ended at the wrists. The skirt of the gown was gathered at the waist line and fell in straight folds to the floor, where it was bordered with rosettes of green chiffon the shape and size of roses. The skirt was also divided from waist to hem in paneled sections, some twenty-four inches wide at the bottom but only a few inches wide at the top, by smaller and looser rosettes of green chiffon. These rosettes were from five to seven inches apart, and appeared to be of chiffon rather than chiffon cloth. Topping this costume was one of the small turned-up hats to match the costume, trimmed with green.

One of the prettiest brown costumes of the Spring was seen at Sherry's, where the wearer lunched with Miss Amy Phipps, whose engagement to the Hon. Frederick Guest has been announced. Miss Phipps wore a light-gray skirt and a long, almost close-fitting, coat, topped by a gray hat of moderate size turned up at the left and trimmed with gray feathers. The brown costume referred to was a bright golden brown mohair; the round skirt was sunray plaited with a brown girdle, and the Eton coat with plain, bias belt, a plaited effect being given to it by the half-inch tucks or folds in which the entire back was arranged, the folds being an inch or two apart and tapering from the shoulder seams and round the neck to the bottom. In front there were only sufficient of these folds to shape the coat in to the figure; the fronts swung loosely, however, and closed in double-breasted manner, with big buttons, covered with the cloth, closing it. At the top, around the neck, the coat was simply rounded out in the back at the base of the neck, and in the front it described a long, oval-shaped opening. A plain, shaped band of the cloth outlined the opening. The sleeves were the modish, moderately full, three-quarter-length affairs, ending midway between the shoulders and wrists in plain bands; in the centre back the fullness of the sleeves was gathered in a bit to the band. A small brown toque, exactly matching the costume, topped the costume.

The costume worn by Mrs. James Speyer on the opening day at Belmont Park was a cream-white voile. The short skirt was full, and was trimmed with three shirred and waving lines of ribbon of the same color. The little Eton coat was embroidered around the edges in scarlet poppies and leaves in their natural hues, and across the back of the coat were two crossing, surpliced bands of plain red. The neck was embroidered, as were the sleeves, and the hat surmounting the toilet was red, the color of the poppies, one of the French hats much turned up. At the left side near the back were red roses, and near the front on the same side were roses of that soft, shaded yellow that blends with red, and on the right side were still more flowers.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, lunching at Sherry's, was in mourning for her father. Her dress was a simple black voile with a Dutch neck, and sleeves of little more than elbow length, both neck and sleeves showing a narrow line of white against the skin. The waist was laid in simulated box plaits, and so was the short skirt. Her large hat was black tulle shirred on wires. It had a low, round crown encircled by a wreath of black silk poppies. The wide brim was shirred three times, first at the crown, second midway between crown, and again at the edge, the latter finished by a piping of solid black. The hat was set on so as to produce a slight halo effect. In the back a box-plaited crêpe veil extended nearly to the waist line. Her long gloves met the rather short and rather close plaited sleeves.

At a recent English wedding the bridesmaids wore gowns of pale yellow crêpe de chine with wide girdles and fichus made of net, and their large hats of shirred brown chiffon were trimmed with pale yellow roses.

Lady Evelyn Hely-Hutchinson, known to many Americans, had her wedding gown copied from a mediaeval Florentine picture, and the gowns of her bridesmaids were of white velvet, fashioned in a curious and picturesque manner.

A beautiful wedding gown, of French design, is of satin crêpe de chine, a princess robe fitted in the back and over the hips with many seams, each seam corded. From the under arm seams the bodice part is drawn in folds over the lining, an invisible seam joining the waist portion to the skirt at the waist line from these seams to the front. These folds meet in the front, and are gathered there, the shirring and joining being concealed by the lace decoration. The top of the robe is cut rather low and round in the back, and in the front forms a deep V, a high stock and a narrow guimpe of white tulle tucked around the neck and across the front in groups of narrow tucks being inserted. Then an eight-inch flounce of point d'Alencon starts from the left side of the bodice in the centre front; after being caught there in three tiny plaits, it is carried along the edge of the neck opening over the shoulders, across the back, and down the right side, where just below the bust line it crosses in surplice fashion to the left side and is laid at the waist line in a few small plaits caught with sprays of orange blossoms, and then continues down the front, its outer edge turned toward the centre front and forming a panel effect to the hem of the gown. The gown has a moderately long round train, and a flounce of point d'Alencon nine inches deep is applied flatly around the bottom of the robe, including the train. The sleeves are scant, shirred, single puffs to a point covering the elbows, and are finished there by scant single ruffles of the point d'Alencon. The entire veil is of point d'Alencon, and is a long scarf caught in a point at the top of the head under an aigrette effect in orange blossoms.

The little girl maid of honor will wear a white mull frock trimmed with valenciennes lace. The short skirt is shirred six times about the hips, and around the bottom is a flounce of mull finished in three half-inch tucks; this is joined to the skirt with a two-inch insertion of lace. The bodice is full and shirred, with a stock and little round guimpe of solid lace and having a two-inch ruffle of the lace at its edge; from under this lace ruffle starts an eight-inch ruffle of the mulle bordered with valenciennes lace an inch and a half wide. The sleeves are single puffs ending at the elbows in two ruffles of the lace, the under ruffle four inches wide and the upper three. Knots of pale pink satin ribbon are fastened at the outside of the sleeves above the ruffles and a similar knot is fastened at the left of the bodice on the upper ruffle. The sash is also of pale pink satin with a knot instead of a bow in the back and with long knotted ends. A round hat of white chip encircled by a wreath of pink rosebuds and moss and showing a pale pink bow in the front and another and large one under the brim at the back tops the frock.

Some notable and noticeable hats were worn by the women guests of the Coaching Club at its annual parade. Mrs. Clarence Mackay, on the box seat of J. Henry Smith's coach, which led the parade, wore a very large all white hat, with a broad brim that shaded her face. A tremendously long and broad white ostrich plume floated from front to back, and in addition there were bird of paradise plumes in white. Her gown was all white, and in her lap was a large bunch of cornflowers, matching the color of the coach.

Alfred Vanderbilt's was the last in line having women guests. Mrs. Vanderbilt was on the box seat in a robe of pure white silk, a soft Oriental silk, heavily embroidered about its various edges in white silk. The outer sleeves of the body or jacket portion were very wide at the bottom and had a stiffened appearance, owing probably to the heavy embroidery. In the front of the bodice a shaped band of turquois blue formed an up-turned crescent, and her small very much knocked up hat was also blue and trimmed with turquois blue feathers.

Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, also on her brother's coach, wore a modest and unassuming small white hat with a decided but low wide brim turned up at the right, and here pink ostrich tips were caught. The hat was straw. The tips on the hat and its crown band matched exactly the color of the fine dotted pongee that made up her simple costume. The skirt was long enough to lie on the walk, with a deep hem, and had two or three deep tucks about the bottom and was gathered at the top under a belt to match. The bodice was also gathered and had a wedge-shaped guimpe and stock of white; the full sleeves were gathered at the tops and also at the bottom, into simple bands; these sleeves hung very full at the wrists in [illegible] Vanderbilt

Mauve chiffon cloth with tucked chiffon and Irish point guimpe and fancy appliques of heliotrope. White hat, trimmed with Parma violets.

Plaid volle in light and dark brown, trimmed with soutache braid, and collar and cuffs of tan cloth. Tan hat, with yellow and brown daisies.

Pale blue Rajah silk coat and skirt, trimmed with braid and embroidery. Under blouse of Irish crochet and linen gauze. White hat, with shaded blue plumes.

coach, wore an elaborate turquois blue voile or pongee, the writer not being near enough to determine. It had a long skirt and a coat top with postilion effects at the back, and topping it was a very large, light blue crinoline hat, with a narrow brim and practically flat crown, the hat being nearly all in the flaring front brim. This front brim widened from back of the ears to the centre top, and formed a wide-spreading frame. Against this expanse of brim, which, while decidedly immense, was not unbecoming to the wearer, was fastened an irregular true lover's knot in blue velvet ribbon. Similar ribbon trimmed the crown. A mass of scarlet and white carnations fastened to her corsage looked especially brilliant in hue against the pale blue background.

On the box seat of the Gerry coach was Mrs. William Woodward, who was Miss Elsie Cryder. She wore a brilliant shade of lavender or lilac colored crêpe de chine, elaborately shirred; it was topped by a big tulle and chiffon hat of the same color, and trimmed with ostrich plumes that exactly matched the hat. A long and full boa, also matching, completed the toilet. On the box seat of another coach was a plump and handsome little woman in light coral-colored satin-finished cloth, severely made; her hat was a polo turban of the same color, with shaded pink wings applied flatly at each side, the point tips of the wings turning backward and downward.

Mrs. William Wheelock, who was Miss Katherine Dix, was in pale blues and white, and Miss Natica Rives and Miss Harriman, in apricot and pink respectively, were pictures; in fact, nearly all of the women guests at this function were handsomely and some gorgeously arrayed.

An American woman in London writes in a private letter that some of the parasol handles shown there are more odd than beautiful. For example, one pink colored taffeta had a handle of ivory, the end being carved to represent a white rabbit and having pink stones for eyes. Another in golden brown silk had a tortoise shell handle shiling in a cat's head with topas eyes. Beautiful, however, are the crystal handles studded with amethysts, while another, still more beautiful, was set with tiny opals.

NO WOMEN NEED APPLY.

OUTSIDE the door there was a sign announcing rooms for rent. The woman went up the steps and rang the bell.

Finally a man opening the door asked her what she wanted. He was a dark complexioned man with bias eyes and straight hair plastered carefully down on each side of his head. The woman thought he seemed to be fatigued.

"I should like," she said politely, "to see a furnished room."

"We rent rooms to gentlemen," said the man. "Never to women."

"Why?" asked the woman.

The man shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't know," he answered, "except that we prefer men."

Then, though he stood still there, he maintained a silence so profound that the only thing for the woman to do was to take her leave, which she did.

She went to another place on the same street. A little touseled girl opened the door.

"Sit down, will you?" she smiled, "while I go for mamma."

But the woman seeing nothing to sit down on but a wabbly tabouret and the hatrack concluded to stand.

Mamma presently put in her appearance from the other end of the hall. She had been washing her hair. She apologized because it wasn't dry. The woman said it didn't matter, then asked about the room.

"We haven't a room to rent in the house," said mamma. "Not a single room."

The woman wished to ask a few questions that ran through her head. One, if she happened to have any outside the house for rent—on the roof, perhaps, or in the garden somewhere—why, if her house was full she didn't take the sign off the door, but concluding that it was hardly worth while she said good morning and went out into the street examining the advertisement in that day's paper concerning rooms in that particular house, and discovering that it read: "Gentlemen preferred."

She wended her way wearily to another house, this time a building of flats, where, ringing the bell and groping through a long, dark, narrow hall, she ascended stairs after stairs until somebody said: "Here!" and she halted abruptly.

She stood a moment looking at a small, wiry woman, who looked back at her.

"I see by the paper," the woman began, "that you have a furnished room for rent."

"Yes," was the reply, "one—a large room with an alcove. But you are a woman."

"Yes," returned the woman, in a melancholy way, "I am," and hung her head.

"And I would prefer to rent my room to a man. When I had a large house I didn't mind women so much. I took a few of them. But now I much prefer men since I am so cramped for room."

"Why?" asked the woman.

"Well, for one thing, because a man isn't half the trouble about a house that a woman is. He never wants to potter around half the day ironing handkerchiefs or neckties and burning the gas just for the fun of it, as a woman does, and he isn't always trying to find out how much rent you pay and whether you have paid it or not, or how much the other roomers pay or whether they have paid it or not."

"But they are not all like that, are they?" interposed the woman. "Surely not!"

"Nearly all," decidedly. "That is, all I've ever had anything to do with. A man is different, you see. For one thing, he is hardly ever about the house at all."

"Well," reasoned the woman, "a woman who is out at work all day long, who isn't about the house at all, she wouldn't be more trouble than a man, would she?"

"You never know when they are coming snooping in to see what's going on. You can't count on them. Now, when a man's away he's away. And while he is away you have the use of his room. It's nearly always the same as if it wasn't rented. It's yours until he comes home again at night, and that's a mighty good thing, I can tell you, to have the use of your rented room all day when you are cooped up in a little flat. A woman is mean. She always wants to get the use of her money. Because she has rented a room she wants to stay in it all the time, day in any day out—every blessed day and night she wants to stay in it. Women are mean. But you can look at the room if you like, as long as you are here," she finished.

But the woman said it was hardly worth while and maybe she would call again, and went down the steps and through the long, dark hall, half ashamed of her sex for being so mean as to want to stop in a room all day long and night, too, just because she paid for it.

She rang an old-fashioned bell at a house this time, and an old-fashioned woman opened the door.

"I should like to see your rooms," she said, smiling pleasantly in an apologetic way.

The old-fashioned woman looked at her hard.

"Be you one o' them actress wimmin?" she queried.

The woman started back with a suppressed cry. She wished she had a looking glass to see what was the matter with her hat or her dress to make the old-fashioned woman ask her that, but there was not a glass in sight.

"No," she answered. "Why?"

"You sort of had the look of one," explained the old-fashioned woman. "Yes. We've got rooms, but we don't take nobody but gentlemen. You're less liable to accidents with gentlemen. Now, you, you earn your own living, don't you?"

The woman had to own that she did.

"And I suppose, earnin' your own livin', you are often hard up?"

It was the truth. The woman had to acknowledge it.

"And I suppose, earnin' your own livin', money in the bank now?"

The woman shook her head sadly. "None," she said.

"Then what would you do if you should happen to get sick on my hands?"

"There are hospitals," returned the woman, stubbornly. She had been in one.

"But the trouble and the worry and the expense," objected the old-fashioned woman, "of getting you off to a hospital. Think of that. And all falling on me. No. We don't take women here. We take men."

And the door suddenly shut.

The woman went slowly down the steps, and, seeing a sign of furnished rooms on the same side of the street with a full-grown tree in front, she crossed over and, going up the steps, rang the bell. It was a neat house. The steps showed much evidence of scrubbing. The window panes glistened. The curtains hung spotless and white as much washing could make them.

The woman loved cleanliness. She was so busy rejoicing in this immaculate spot that she failed to hear the opening of the door. Soon a voice said impatiently: "Well!" and looking around she saw an old lady in a white apron.

The old lady's hair was white. Her cap was white. She kept the house in neatness.

The woman kept thinking to herself, "This is the place for me. If I can find a room here I camp here for life," and there was joy in her eye and a smile on her lips as she repeated her formula in regard to a room.

"We don't usually rent rooms to wimmin," said the old lady, looking critically at her over her spectacles, "but if you are a steady going business woman and behave yourself, I don't mind."

The woman said very meekly that she tried to behave herself, whereupon the old lady seemed to melt.

"That's right, that's right," she said briskly. "A woman's got to behave herself or she can't stay in this house a minute, not a single minute. I won't have none o' them there painted and powdered wimmin here a settin' round, I won't."

The woman couldn't help laughing, and there was where she made her mistake.

"Do the men always behave themselves?" she asked, making another.

"Of course they do, "flashed the old lady. "They go out in the morning and come back at night and that's all there is to it. Now, are you a married woman?"

The woman was meeker than Moses by now.

"No," she said. "I am a widow."

"A widder!" repeated the old lady in a tone which filled the woman's soul with dire foreboding. "Well! This room I've got wouldn't suit you. I know it wouldn't. Not at all. I costs too much for a widow woman. If you had a husband now bringing in money all the time you might afford to take it, but a widow with nobody to support her! No. The room wouldn't suit you at all."

"But suppose I am able to earn my own living," interposed the woman. What then?"

The old lady was not to be appeased.

"No," she reiterated, "this is no widow's room. It's a man's room." The woman kept wondering what the difference was, but didn't dare to ask. "It's a man's room," the other declared.

"How much is it," questioned the woman.

The old lady fixed her firmly through the glitter of her glasses.

"Sixteen dollars!" she replied.

"A week?" frowned the woman.

"A week," replied the old lady.

"With board?" further questioned the woman.

"Without board," said the old lady with a clank of lips which served to end the interview.

The door then shut on the woman.

All the doors appeared to have shut on her. She didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. She wished she might sit down on the steps a minute and find out, but she was too much afraid of the lynx eye of the old lady to do that. She thought she saw it peer out at her through the snowy lace of the curtains, so she went down the steps and along the street, wondering what was to become of the women who wanted furnished rooms, and nearly wishing she were a man and done with it, so she could get one—nearly, but not quite.

"A SHEET OF PAPER."

From the Swedish of AUGUST STRINDBERG.

By EDWIN BJORKMAN.

THE last moving van had driven away. The tenant, a young man in mourning, made a last round of the rooms, to make sure that he had left nothing behind. No, he had forgotten nothing, absolutely nothing. And at last he reached the little hall, firmly resolved to think no more of what he had lived through in those rooms. But there, in the hall, beside the telephone, he noticed a small sheet of paper nailed to the wall. It was closely covered with writing in several hands—some of it clear and written with ink, some of it mere jottings made with black or red pencil. All was to be read there, the whole pretty drama that had been played to a finish within the brief time of two years. All he wanted to forget was there—a fragment of human life on a small sheet of paper.

He took it down. It was a kind of yellow notepaper, lustrous as if sunshine had been radiating from its surface. Placing it on the mantelpiece, he leaned over it and began to read. At the top was her name, Alice, the most beautiful name he ever knew, because borne by the girl he loved. And the call number—15:11. It looked like the number of a hymn put up in church. Next came "The Bank." That stood for his work, the sacred toil that brought bread, and a home, and a wife—the very basis of existence. But it had been crossed out. For the bank had failed. He had been saved, however, by getting into another bank, yet not until he had passed through an interim full of anxiety.

And then the florist and the livery stable. Those numbers marked his engagement period, when he had his pockets full of money.

Further down, the furniture dealer and the upholsterer. He was building up a home of his own. The expressman—he and she moved into that home.

The ticket office of the Opera House, 50:50. They have been married recently, and now they go to the opera every Sunday. Those are their best hours, when their own voices are silent and they meet in beauty and harmony in the fairyland back of the footlights.

Here comes the name of a man, crossed out also. He was a friend who had climbed rather high up on the social ladder. The success made him dizzy, and he fell; fell irremediably, and had to flee to some distant country. What frailty there is everywhere!

And now something quite new seems to have entered into their lives. In a woman's hand, written with pencil, there is to be read the word "Mrs."—and nothing more. Who can that be? Oh, yes, the woman dressed in a long cloak, with a placid, sympathetic face, who moved so quietly and never went through the sitting room, but passed straight from the hall into the bedroom.

Under that "Mrs." is written the name of Dr. L.

Then, for the first time, appears the name of a relative. "Mamma," it reads. The mother-in-law, who has kept discreetly in the background as long as she thought the happy two wished to be left alone, is called on in the hour of need, and responds gladly, because she knows that now she is wanted.

What a jumble of scrawls in red and blue! The employment agency: a servant girl must have left, or may be a second one has to be hired. The drug store. Ugh! Now it is growing dark. The dairy store. Milk is needed, sterilized milk.

The grocer, the butcher, &c. The house is being run by telephone. That means its mistress is not in charge. No. She is lying in bed.

After that he could not read anything more. A great darkness covered his eyes. His vision grew dim as it does to one who is drowning and has to look through salt water. But this is what was written next on the paper: "The Undertaker." No explanation needed here.

"One large and one small." One understands so easily that coffins are referred to. And finally a word within parentheses mentioning the kind of coffin wanted. It looks like "dust."

That was the last word. It ended with dust. Such is mostly the case.

But he took the sun paper, kissed it, and put it in his breast pocket.

In two minutes he had lived two years of his life over again.

He did not stoop when he walked out. On the contrary, he carried his head erect, like a happy and proud man, for he felt that the most beautiful of all had been his. And how numerous are the poor ones who never find it!

This Week's New Offerings.

JACOB P. ADLER IN "THE MERCHANT OF VENICE," supported by Percy Haswell and the George Fawcett Company, to-morrow evening at the American Theatre.

THE ORLENEFF-NASIMOFF COMPANY IN "THE KARRAMASOFF BROTHERS," a drama by Dostoevsky, Thursday evening at the Murray Hill Theatre.

GEORGE FAWCETT this week announces the appearance of the eminent Hebrew tragedian, Jacob P. Adler, as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," at the American Theatre. Percy Haswell will support Mr. Adler as Portia.

The tragedian will speak his lines in Yiddish, while his associate players will use the English language. This method was utilized two years ago when Mr. Adler played the same rôle at the American Theatre and the Academy of Music.

Jacob P. Adler was born at Odessa, Russia, in 1855. Here he received a good education, and after graduation from the Gymnase he entered the Russian Civil Service in the Custom House in Odessa.

When the first Jewish theatrical company was formed in Roumania Adler read of it in the papers, and, becoming interested, he wrote several articles for the press, urging the company to come to Odessa. The inferior qualities of the plays produced caused him to urge the literary men of his race to devote a portion of their talents to play writing. Through this interest, at the age of twenty-one, he became the dramatic critic for an important publication. As such he was a vigorous advocate of stage realism. Soon after this he fell in love with the leading woman of a traveling company and followed her from town to town. Naturally, his editor discharged him. Then he married and became an actor.

He played through Roumania, where his efforts were not appreciated, but visits to Paris and London turned the tide. Soon after Mr. Adler was engaged to appear at the old Germania Theatre in New York. Since then his rise has been steady.

The last act of "The Merchant of Venice," which is often omitted, will be used in this revival. There will be a few accessions to the company in the persons of Charles Hammond, formerly leading man with Henrietta Crosman, who will be seen as Gratiano; Alice Chandler, who will be the Nerissa; Guy Nicoll, and Edwin Evans.

There will be only one matinée—that of Saturday.

Paul Orleneff and his company of Russian players, supported by Mme. Nasimoff, next week at the Murray Hill Theatre, will be seen in a repertoire of plays. So great has been the request for an uptown performance of the "Chosen People" that Mr. Orleneff has decided to give the bill Monday and Friday nights. Tuesday night he will repeat "Tzar Feodor Ivanovitch," Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday nights "The Karramasoff Brothers," by Dostoevsky, one of Russia's greatest writers. In this play Mr. Orleneff plays the rôle of a scapegrace son.

The Harlem Alhambra, which opens tomorrow night for a Spring season of vaudeville lasting four weeks, will place Percy G. Williams very comfortably in a position to cater to the best class of Harlem vaudeville lovers. The theatre building which then opens for the first time is situated at One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street and Seventh Avenue, in a district where it will be able to draw from a wide section of Harlem for its patrons.

The structure is a handsome one, and is equipped with all the modern devices for the comfort and safety of its patrons. It was started two years ago, but was not completed owing to a series of litigations whereby the work was held up for a long period. After some negotiation the Orpheum Amusement Company, of which Mr. Williams is President, acquired the property, and since then work has been pushed forward rapidly.

Besides the regular vaudeville theatre the building also includes a roof garden and a rathskeller, the former a complete theatre in itself. These are not ready for use this Spring, however.

The seating capacity of the Alhambra is 1,650, and in the main the seats have the same admirable arrangement as those in the Orpheum, Brooklyn, the balcony floor being lined with boxes on the front. The color scheme of the interior is a Nile green, with more delicate shades of red, and the lobby graced by several mural paintings in conformity with the general tone of the color scheme. The chairs are of morocco leather, wide and comfortable. There are in all fourteen proscenium boxes and ten balcony boxes.

The opening of the Alhambra is the second move in the big vaudeville programme that Mr. Williams has mapped out, whereby he puts in the field a chain of theatres for vaudeville purposes, including the Colonial Music Hall and Circle Theatre in Manhattan, the Orpheum, Novelty, and Gotham in Brooklyn, and, during the Summer season, the Manhattan Beach Theatre at Manhattan Beach. This will give him wide opportunities in securing feature acts for next year, inasmuch as he will be able to give them long bookings. Mr. Williams has arranged a strong opening bill with a double headline, and has booked similarly attractive acts for the remainder of the Spring season. As the theatre is only a block and a half from the Subway and within reach of several uptown lines it is believed that the new Alhambra will command the attention of a great uptown field.

For the opening bill an unusual programme has been prepared. As top-liners Albert Chevalier and Henry Miller are announced. Chevalier this week makes his farewell appearance this season in America, and will present his delightful repertoire, while Mr. Miller will be seen in his success, "Frederic Le Maitre." Other attractions on the bill are Dida, the aquatic mystery; George Evans, the Honey Boy; the Grand Opera Trio, Empire City Quartet, Japanese Imperial Guards, Mayme Remington, the Milliman Trio, and the vitagraph.

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

The revival of "Trilby," with Wilton Lackaye as Svengali, Virginia Harned as Trilby, and Burr McIntosh. John Glendinning, Leo Ditrichstein, Mathilde Cottrelly, and Rosa Rand in their original characters has proved a great success at the New Amsterdam Theatre.

As Bud Young says in Paul Armstrong's comedy, "The Heir to the Hoorah," "There's nothing to it but success." This line might be a good description of the comedy at the Hudson, which has been packed since the opening of the play. New York usually doesn't promise much to legitimate plays during the warm days of late Spring, but "The Heir to the Hoorah" seems destined to remain in town for a long time to come.

David Warfield's last three weeks at the Bijou in "The Music Master" offer the final opportunities this season to enjoy his delightful performance, with its humor and pathos so artistically blended. The closing of this engagement, however, does not indicate the ending of his New York run. Mr. Belasco announces that his star will begin an indefinite run in "The Music Master" at the Bijou, beginning early next September.

Marie Tempest, owing to the continued popularity of her comedy, "The Freedom of Suzanne," will prolong her stay at the Empire beyond the time originally set apart for her when she left London to fill this limited engagement. No performance of the smart comedy in which she is appearing has thus far been given to anything but a capacity house. Her London company has given excellent support, while her leading man, Allan Aynesworth, has made a strong impression.

MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS.

Frank Daniels will begin to-morrow the fourth week at the Knickerbocker in "Sergeant Brue." This musical comedy, with its catchy music and pretty girls, will doubtless have an all-Summer's run. The court-room scene, where Script, Brue defends himself against a charge of burglary, contains enough laughs to satisfy the most greedy.

George M. Cohan and his supporting company, including Jerry J. Cohan, Helen F. Cohan, Ethel Levey, Tom Lewis, and Josephine Whittell, will begin their second week in "Little Johnny Jones" at the New York. The popularity of the young comedian seems to be as great as ever, though this is his fifth engagement in the city this season.

Sam Bernard and "The Rollicking Girl" are providing quantities of fun at the Herald Square. Every performance of the musical play thus far given has attracted a capacity audience. Hattie Williams has made a hit with her song, "Friends That Are Good and True," while the swing song in the second act has caused a sensation.

"Fantana," with Jefferson De Angelis, continues merrily at the Lyric, with the one hundred and fiftieth performance but a short time in the distance. This event will occur on the evening of May 24. The popular Wednesday matinée have been found to be most successful.

COMBINATION HOUSES.

At the Fourteenth Street Theatre Lottie Williams, a popular young comedienne, will be seen in a new musical play, entitled "My Tomboy Girl." In this Miss Williams will assume the dual rôle of Captain Charlie and Josie, a street urchin. The play is in four acts, while the important scenes show Miss Williams in a ride for life on the back of a thoroughbred horse and in a thrilling steamboat explosion. A cast of fifty is announced, together with an elaborate production.

Maurice Freeman will make his first appearance as leading man of the Yorkville Theatre stock company to-morrow evening in the rôle of Archibald Carlysle in the old-time drama, "East Lynne," Anne Sutherland essays the dual rôle of Lady Isabel and Madame Vine, which will give her opportunity for varied work. At the Tuesday matinée a souvenir photograph of Effie Bond and Milt Dawson will be presented to the women patrons.

Eugenie Blair is to play "Camille" this week at the West End. The Saturday matinée of "East Lynne" was so successful that it will be placed in the evening bill for Thursday. This is positively the only performance.

E. S. Willard returns to New York tomorrow evening at the Harlem Opera House for six evening and two matinée performances. The following is the schedule for the week: Monday and Tuesday evenings, "The Middleman"; Wednesday afternoon and evening, "The Professor's Love Story"; Thursday evening, "The Brighter Side"; Friday evening and Saturday matinée, "David Garrick," and Saturday evening, "Tom Pinch."

Williams and Walker will close their tour at the Grand Opera House this week, presenting their popular success "In Dahomey;" Bert Williams is still singing, "I May Be Crazy, but I Ain't No Fool," and George and Ada Overton Walker's dancing remains a big feature of the performance.

There are to be many productions of "East Lynne" this week at the combination houses, and one that is announced with much promise is to take place at the New Star. Leah Lessi, an emotional actress, will there be seen in the double part of Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine.

To-morrow night ushers in the second week of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Academy of Music. Where crowded houses are the rule. The final stanza will doubtless be a record breaker. Helaine Hadley and Phyllis Bostwick are among the favorites in a strong cast. To-morrow evening Neil Burton will play Obediah Strout. Thursday evening souvenirs will be distributed in the shape of copies of the book, "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

The Metropolis Theatre management announce the engagement of the funny cartoon play, "Buster Brown," with Master Gabriel, supported by George All as Tige. The engagement is but for the week.

+ + +

"The Black Mask," the melodrama written by Sir A. Conan Doyle, in collaboration with Mariette Watson, will be the attraction at the Windsor.

VAUDEVILLE.

"The Christian," with a specially prepared scenic production and a carefully selected cast, will be the attraction this week at Proctor's One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre. Beatrice Morgan will be cast in the most ambitious part she has yet attempted, that of Glory Quayle, while the part of John Storm will be played by William J. Kelley. Fola La Follette makes her début with the company this week.

To-morrow at Hammerstein's Victoria Adele Ritchie makes her début in vaudeville, giving as a programme a number of her successful songs. This week will also be the occasion for the first joint appearance in vaudeville of Annie Yeamans and her daughter, Jennie Yeamans. Others are John Ford and Mayme Gerhue, Edwin Stevens, Willy Zimmerman, Haines and Vidocq, Milliman Trio, Maddox and Prouty, Mlle. Latina, and the vitagraph.

At Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre "Old Heidelberg" will be the current revival. The version is that played by Richard Mansfield with much success. The present cast includes James Durkin, Grame Reals, Harold Hartsell, Agnes Scott, Charles Arthur, William Norton, and Laura Lang.

The spectacular feature of Keith's bill this week is Valvero's naval bombardment of Port Arthur, an electrical novelty direct from London, where it has been the season's sensation of the music halls. A vivid reproduction of the shelling of Golden Hill and Tiger's Tail forts by the Japanese, the sinking of Russian ships with torpedoes, and running fights between the two fleets should prove especially interesting on the eve of another great naval engagement in the China Sea.

Standard attractions on the same bill are Murphy, Nichols and company in "From 'Zasa' to 'Uncle Tom'"; Bert Leslie, Rob Dailey and company, in "Going Abroad"; Carleton Macy and Maude Edna Hall, in "A Timely Awakening"; the Quigley brothers, Irish wits; Techow's cats; Kelly and Reno, comedy acrobats; "Happy Jack" Gardner, monologuist; Delphine and Delmora, musical specialists; Will F. Denny, descriptive vocalist; Curtis and May, German comedians, and Ethel Robinson, billed as "a pocket edition May Irwin." The biograph also has some brand-new films.

The star attraction at Hurtig & Seamon's this week is announced as Rose Coghlan, who will present a comedy playlet, entitled, "A Modern Lady Gay." An entertaining Chinese [illegible] and Rich, the Gregsons.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S—Peter F. Dailey, Toby Claude, Dean Esdall and company, Elmer Tenley, Masus and Masette, Howard Brothers, Bennet and Rich, the Gregsons.

KEITH'S—Special concert to-night for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children. The following performers will take part: Helena Frederick, Empire City Quartet, Dida, Cliff Gordon, Techow's Cats, Carlin and Otto, Harper, Desmond and Bailey, Streeter and Bryan, "A Night in Venice," and Montague's Birds.

METROPOLIS—Harry Fields, Mealkin, Lawrence and Dale, Minnie Harrison, Chadwick Trio, Yackley and Bunnell, Hanson and Harris, and others.

NEW YORK—This evening will be Bentham night at the New York Theatre. Once a year M. S. Bentham combines a number of high-grade acts for a closing concert at a local theatre. This year the above house was leased for the occasion. The programme includes Eddie Foy, Joe Welch, Harry Gilfoil, Cecil Spooner, Dorothy Morton, Cole and Johnson, Emma Francis, Louis Wesley, La Petite Adelaide, Ford Sisters, Ferguson and Mack, and the Champagne Dancers.

VICTORIA—McIntyre and Heath, Spessardy's Bears, Trovolo, Four Madcaps, Clarice Vance, Frank and Joe Latona, Mons. Probst, the Great Buckner, and Smirl and Kessner.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

There is an abundance of good acts this week at the Orpheum, and the Four Morton's will have one of the important positions on the bill. This engagement is to be their last in vaudeville, as they star next season in "Breaking Into Society." Clara Morris, the emotional actress, is another important feature on the bill. Miss Morris will offer an interesting talk on stage reminiscences, and as she has already achieved success on the lecture platform, her vaudeville début should prove an event. As the extra attraction, the rural sketch team, Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne, will present the newest of their playlets, entitled, "Town Hall Tonight." A sister act is that of Flora and May Hengler, who make their first appearance at the Orpheum after a two-years' tour in Europe. The Hengler Sisters have an act of the highest order, and in point of originality second to none. Other artists engaged will be the Teines Troupe, a headline European specialty; the Union Gattling Guards, a military act; the Milani trio, whose vocal act this year has been one of the hits of the season; Charles Kenna in a one-man sketch called "The Fakir"; Lawson and Namon, a comedy bicycle act, and the vitagraph with a new series of views to end the bill.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Adelaide Keim will present "Camille" as the opening attraction of her star stock season at the Harlem Opera House on Monday, May 22. Miss Keim's performance of this rôle is said to have won much critical favor in other cities. Her supporting company has been selected with much care, and includes M. L. Alsop, at present leading man with the Blanche Walsh company; Giles Shine, the well-known character actor; Charles Swickard, the translator of "The Fires of St. John," who will be the stage director; Edward Racey, recently of the Bertha Galland company; Charles Francis Gibney, James Allenton, E. E. Gerlinger, Miss Lillian Clayes, Miss Lizzie Goode, Miss Elena Rossiter Powers, and Miss Eda Bothner. Special attention will be given to the scenic details of the productions, and Manager Keim promises that they will be fully up to the standard of the high-class attractions that play at this theatre. The sale of seats opens Tuesday.

The début of Mme. Bertha Kalisch at the American Theatre as the heroine of Sardou's "Fedora" will take place on the 22d inst. Mme. Kalisch will interpret the part in English, which she now speaks with fluency.

+ + +

Theodore Drury announces a performance of "Carmen," with a cast of colored singers, to-morrow evening at Terrace Garden. The cast includes Miss Wagner, Stanley Gilbert, Theodore Drury, and Mme. Randall.

ON NATIVE ART AND FOREIGN.

A marble statue of the late Abram S. Hewitt has been placed on one of the landings of the stairs in the Chamber of Commerce in Liberty Street. It was carved in white Carrara at Florence after the model by William Couper, who has been in Italy for the purpose. The former Mayor of New York stands on a platform with low railing in front, his left hand resting on a table supported by a lion sitting. The right hand holds a paper. Couper, on his visit to Florence, returned to a city where he had spent a large part of his life, working in the studio of his father-in-law, Thomas Ball. The commission was given him by a committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce.

The replica of the "Pilgrim" statue at Springfield, Mass., by Augustus Saint Gaudens, was dedicated last week in Philadelphia. In preparing this gift to Philadelphia from New Englanders and their descendants in Pennsylvania, the sculptor has made various changes from the original. At present it stands on the south plaza by the City Hall, but is to remain there only until a site has been selected, either in the Parkway or in Fairmount Park itself.

Aberdeen in Scotland is the proud possessor of a Sculpture Gallery well equipped with copies of representative pieces belonging to the various periods of art. The gallery is in the nature of a rebirth, the original building having been opened in 1884. Thanks to Mr. James Murray of Glenburnie Park, it has been rebuilt within. There is a central court lighted from the roof, surrounded by columns of granite (Aberdeen is famous for its quarries) supporting a balcony on which open the rooms arranged for pictures. There are twenty-seven monolithic columns, each of a different shade of color, presented by the local Granite Association. On the ground floor are six side courts for statuary—two Greek, two Italian, one Keltic, and one French and German. A special section is devoted to Lettering, and has examples of inscriptions of different epochs and in many languages.

A California landscape by H. J. Breen of San Francisco, a wooded view near Fruitvale, Cal., has been bought for $2,500 by Adolphus Busch of St. Louis. The charming interior by Tarbell called "A Girl Crocheting," exhibited recently at the Montross Galleries, New York, in the annual show of the Ten American Painters, was sold to a Boston amateur for $2,500, and the same sum was paid for another picture in that exhibition by Thomas W. Dewing, two young women consulting the future by cards. The Tarbell and Dewing pictures were reproduced lately in the Sunday tinted supplement of this journal.

An egg-shaped Chinese antique vase in black enamel with lustre, badly broken about the neck, and some 17 inches high, created a sensation when it came to the hammer the other day at Christie's, London. It has silver pheasants among rocks, with peonies and other flowers. The dealers ran it up to $9,750, when Wertheimer got it. A companion vase of old Sèvres porcelain to one in Buckingham Palace made even greater stir. Bellsmann, Wertheimer, Duveen, and Partridge drove it up to $21,000, when the last named secured it. The body, base, and cover are painted "bleu-de-roi," that blue which was the color of the King's liveries, with framings of white porcelain, enhanced by gold. Four shield-shaped panels have bouquets of flowers and fruit with one exception; this has a delicately wrought pastoral scene. The painter was Dodin, and the date mark is A. D. 1768. The neck is fluted and the lip set with a row of white beads, while the cover has a pine cone for handle. The Buckingham Palace piece is also by Dodin, but the date is 1762.

Mr. Carl E. Tefft of New York has finished his model for the monument to Thomas B. Reed at Portland, Me. He shows the famous Speaker of the House standing erect with the right foot slightly advanced. The left hand clinched rests with the knuckles against the hip; the right rests strongly on a stand by his side. He looks straight before him as if about to address an audience. Mr. Tefft was born in Maine, but has passed his active life as an artist in New York.

A granddaughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is showing landscapes in the younger Salon at Paris, which have had favorable comment. They were taken at Lawton's Valley, near Newport, where Dr. Howe owned a farm many years ago, and where the large family of these two clever people passed their Summers. The grandchildren are now invading this historic place. Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, the successful aspirant to the Salon, has been studying with Thaulow and other masters. Two years ago she was at the Délécluse Academy, and won a prize. A portrait of the young paintress is shown at the Claussen Galleries among the exhibits by Miss Annie Barrows Shepley.

The Rush to Europe: Typical Sailing Day Scenes

UNDER the stern of the great liner the water roils at the first kick of the propellers; a signal boy on the taffrail holds aloft a white flag—"all's clear astern"; the gruff whistle roars out a husky farewell, and the sleek black hull glides silently, swiftly, out into the river.

"She's off!" The passengers that line the decks and their loved ones on the pierhead break into a kaleidoscopic mass of color. Handkerchiefs and flags and scarfs and fluttering hands blend bewilderingly, and the air rocks with cheers and shouting. And some on the dock and on the steamship are laughing and some are weeping, while others utter no sound as they contort themselves in acrobatic gyrations of farewell.

It is all a snappy, sparkling morning picture, distinctive of sailing day.

In the old days when a lonely sidewheel steamship left her pier for Liverpool about once every fortnight the event assumed all the characteristics of a public function. It was a public function. Fourth of July was not more peculiar unto itself than sailing day was.

In this age of progress, bringing as it has the harnessed ocean, the twenty-four knot fliers, and daily newspapers in mid-ocean, the natural tendency of the unknowing no doubt is to consider sailing day as shorn of all significance both as a term and as a function.

That this is an erroneous impression has been implied in the opening paragraph. It is true the piers are no longer blocked by excited thousands when a proud liner plumes herself for flight to Europe, (as was the case years ago when the good old Savannah sailed from this port,) but the fact remains that out of the humdrum routine of our metropolitan existence the sailing of a great greyhound rises day after day as a unique feature, a feature which custom stales not.

In short, sailing day has changed only in so far as it has come to be a personal event rather than one in which the general public is interested. If you have a relative or friend aboard a liner about to cast off for Europe you go down to the pier brim full of all sorts of conflicting emotions, and sailing day for you holds much. If you have no one in whom you are interested on the passenger list the chances are one hundred to one that you do not even know that the vessel is to sail.

And yet, after all, perhaps the best viewpoint is that of the person who, while having no friend or tie of blood aboard a departing liner, is sufficiently alive to go as a disinterested observer.

There is much to see. The annual Spring rush to Europe is on now, there is atmosphere, there is a wealth of impressions, of color, of exhilaration, all new, fresh and striking.

When the sun rises slowly above the sky line and sends long golden rays along West Street, there is little to distinguish that thoroughfare from other, sordid streets of the metropolis. Drays ply slowly along, the tawdry dramshops are collecting their blear-eyed customers, the creak of tackle sounds loud, and the droning cries of roustabouts at work on many cargoes rise in drowsy cadence. In front of the pier, alongside which is lashed the leviathan with blue peter flying aloft, loll some hundred longshoremen, basking sleepily in the sunshine. Their work is done. The last pound of cargo was slung into the capacious holds at sunrise and the hatches were battened. The stokers, too, have been busy since dawn, and steam roars from the escape valves. The liner sails at 10 o'clock.

Presently a group of natty stewards hurry from their quarters and line up in the vicinity of the gangplanks near the husky porters. These stewards are shrewd fellows, and they know a susceptible passenger as far as they can see him. Once they spot him they are at his side in an instant, shouldering the poor porter out of the way with a withering glance, and—

"Mr word, an' ye think as 'ow I would leave a blooming luggage tosser to 'andle Mr. Thompson's baggage, Sir! No, Sir, I says, no, Sir. Seein' as 'ow 'e was so kind to me las' trip. Oh, by no means, Sir!" Of course Mr. Thompson is pleased to the extent of a shilling or more.

Vehicles of all sorts and descriptions are flowing into the big doors as a millrace flows into a sluice. Crystal omnibuses from the big hotels, hansoms, broughams, public and private; coaches, motor cars—all roads apparently have led to the pier. One of the first to arrive is a two-horse cab with trunks piled high on top. At a rattling gait it has shot out of a side street, across the asphalted plaza, finally dashing into the dank gloom of the pier shed. Straight up to the gangway pound the horses, and a gang of porters swarm aloft for the trunks and things, like pirates over a galleon. The door flies open and a glittering little patent-leather boot, with an attitudinous heel, topped by a brilliant flutter of skirt, feels carefully for the step. The next instant she is on the pier, and the next her escort is beside her. Is it her brother? Or is this a honeymoon trip? Surely, he is considerate and as deferential as a young husband should be. The girl is very beautiful. Wonder if it is a honeymoon? Oh, well, she is interesting, anyway. She did well to come first. Otherwise she might have been noted only in an abstract way—as an item of a composite feminine study. And what a study it was when the decks began to fill! What a sartorial symphony was here, with fresh and rosy youth for the diviner harmonies and frumpy and bedizened middle age or worse for the dissonances! And where there are women, what do men count for? Men are always the same.

The promenade deck is agitated with life and color. None of the passengers, apparently, has gone to his or her stateroom. All are gathered on deck. Some stand in groups, talking; others peer anxiously over the rail looking for belated friends, while others still pace up and down as though the liner were already out at sea and they needed exercise to stretch their cramped legs. Over there is a prominent United States Senator, or perhaps an eminent philanthropist, surrounded by a group of inquisitive newspaper men, they all are laughing and having a fine time, if not an extensive or breathless interview. There by the rail is a popular actress with a half dozen devotees seeking especial farewell smiles, and there are society folk, and just plain ordinary persons, who in the attainment of the wherewithal for a European trip have brought themselves into no exalted prominence. Yet they have their friends, too, and the morning air sparkles with laughter and jests.

That is the big impression, and yet in many eyes the close observer notes a vacant look; fond, lingering glances between those who are to sail and those who are to go ashore when the time comes for the vessel to leave. One notes, too, that they all seem to hang upon one another's words as though they realised that this is the last time in some months that Jack's joyous yawp, or Edith's dulcet babble may be heard by those who love them well. And yet there are few outward displays of such emotion. First cabin dwellers come from spheres where they are trained to repression of outward emotion.

If you want that, skip the colorless second cabin crowd and go into the steerage section. Here you have outward emotion pure and unadulterated. The young Western farmer, the German-American, the Irish-American, any kind of an American, in limited circumstances, they are going away from here for some reason or other; some of them may come back, and some of them never intend to come back, and ties are severed and hearts are broken. And you can see it all in the steerage. The aged father weeps on the shoulder of his son, the mother clings to her first born. They fear the sea and its evil possibilities as much as the first saloon passengers do, and they are going to miss one another just as the first saloon people and their loved ones left behind will, only the emigrants are not afraid to show their fear and their grief, or, if they are, the primal emotions overcome all such qualms.

Suddenly the whine of bugles tears along the decks. "Ran-ta-ran-ta-ra," "all ashore who are going ashore," thus rings the warning, and as the consequences of disobeying are altogether too inexorable to warrant any delay whatever the rush for the gangway begins upon the first bugle note.

A few hurried good-bye embraces, a few last messages, and emphasizing of addresses before given, and the passengers are left in undisputed possession of the decks. There is a sort of thrill in this, but it is lost in the general scramble for the pier. Once there they all turn and gaze up at the decks through the pier door openings, and messages of all sorts are shouted back and forth regardless of who may hear. The time for any such solicitude is past. Human nature is softened, and peace and good-will to all mankind reign supreme. For all those on the decks or on the pier are one in an emotion—that emotion embodied in the saddest and sweetest of all words, farewell.

Then comes a touch of real tragedy. Big rough men in overalls rush to the pier side and slam shut the doors, blotting from view the liner, the color, the loved ones. It strikes the disinterested observer that there is something ruthless about this. It seems to emphasize the sadness of parting, and to impress upon all minds that from now on the lives of the passengers will be bounded by the two sides of the narrow vessel; that with childlike dependence they must look to the Captain and the crew for their safety and well being.

So there we stand on the pier gazing dumbly at the blank wooden doors that shut out the steamship from view. A shrill whistle sounds, and with a rattle of tackle and shouts of longshoremen the three gangplanks rattle to the pier floor. A mail wagon with the belated transcontinental mail pounds up the pier. They have been waiting for that. The bags are unloaded by strings of man up forward, who pass them quickly into one of the portholes.

All right, now. With one accord those on the pier turn and run with might and main up to the inclosure and out of the shed to the uncovered pier head. There are say one hundred square feet space; in a twinkling of an eye every inch of it is taxed. The vacant planking, littered with odds and ends of cargo, has been converted into a sea of upturned faces, watching the liner as it comes slowly out into the river, stern first. In another second the hurricane deck section comes into view around the corner of the pier shed, and the air is shattered with a sudden shout, and the air quivers with a sudden eruption of color. The passengers up there respond in kind. Eyes strain to pick out familiar faces until the liner has reached midstream. Then, as those on pier head still stand gazing at her, silently now, the liner slowly turns and heads for sea. Fainter and fainter she grows, until at last one catches a glance of a dark object with a few white handkerchief specks fluttering astern.

CRAFT IN THE KITCHEN.

AS A YOUNG girl, Hannah had been initiated into the mysteries of cookery in the home of her young Miss Mary. After years of service in other places she finally returned to take the place of head cook in the kitchen where she had learned her trade. The elderly woman, who was still her "young Miss Mary" and in whom her confidence reposed as in no other employer, found that the years had not stood still with Hannah, but had brought her her full share of worldly wisdom.

"I te' yoh, Miss Mary," she said, "it don't do fo' to let othah folks know exactly what yoh is doin'. Now de ladies dey uster come eroun' an' say, 'Oh, dat cake was jes' 'licious,' or 'dat salad is jes' perfeck—how do yoh make it, Hannah?' An' I us' ter be all butahed ovah and lak a fool nigger I'd tell 'em jes' how I make dat cake or dat salad. An' law! dey'd go an' make it theirselves, and dey wasn't no mo' comin' eroun' an' bein' sweet ter Hannah.

"Yoh s'pose I do lak dat now, Miss Mary? A passon gotter learn some sense, an' dat's powsome I don't do lak dat no mo'.

"When dem ladies come sof'-soapin' eroun' me an' axin' 'How do yoh make dat lovely puddin', Hannah?' I jes' sorter cairless like, an' easy, 'Oh, I puts in a little er dis an' den maybe I th'ows in some er dat, an' mos' likely I uses a pinch er somefin' else, an' den I mixes 'em all tergedder!'

"I te' yoh, Miss Mary"—with impressive manner Hannah now summed up—"if yoh wants ter keep yoh standin' with folks, w'y, when yoh kin make somefin' bettah than othah folks, yeh jes' gotter keep it a myxtery!"

Undoubtedly too long a habit of painting small easel pictures interferes with a large way of treating a subject such as mural painting demands. It is one of the best points in Mr. Walker's lunette that he has broken with the easel picture and entered fully into the spirit of mural painting. What would we not give to find an Egyptian papyrus with the diary of some traveler from the Nile in Greece, who pictured on paper the mural work by Polygnotos in the building that stood by the entrance to the Acropolis at Athens! We have the written description of Pausanias, but it does not tell us how this great Greek master laid out his figures. We are forced to take refuge in the paintings on vases and imagine that he placed his figures above each other in zones, using such perspective, perhaps, as we get in ancient Indian, Chinese, and Japanese colored reliefs. From the length of his descriptions of paintings we may gather that Pausanias was always more interested in pictures than sculptures. He had a healthy love of color, as the Greeks before him in the great epochs. But we can only guess that Polygnotos used some form of encaustic painting with wax, fixing the colors on the ground by hot plates applied. As to the composition and perspective we are sadly at sea.

Probably we shall always have the small easel painting, the genre picture, the painting on wood and metals. It is interesting to observe individual easel painters gradually adapting themselves to the very different problems of mural work and learning slowly to think in big masses—with a constant reference to the other and more distant parts of the composition.

PAINTER VERSUS ARCHITECT: AT ODDS OVER THE MURAL PAINTING QUESTION

A QUARREL of long standing has existed between the painters and architects of New York, because the latter design interiors which have no wall spaces where paintings in frames can be conveniently hung. Since the majority of painters make easel pictures intended to hang against the wall, this movement on the part of architects has been fiercely resented by the more outspoken among the picture makers, though their contentions have rarely reached the ears of the public. On their part the architects claim that they only do as clients wish. To which the painters respond that the architects suggest and encourage the pictureless house, because it is more profitable to elaborate interiors where framed canvases have no room, they being able to charge more for the decorative finish than for comparatively plain interiors that require such setting off as pictures give.

'Tis a pretty quarrel as it stands, and what one may call an academic one, since it is not to be expected that protests will avail. What is certain is the gradual falling off in sales of genre pictures to persons of moderate means and to the rich as well who are not collectors; also the turn of painters to portraiture and the teaching of art. But another line for their talents has been opening to painters which must be taken into account by architects of great public and private buildings, such as State Houses and City Halls, theatres, and hotels, with the palaces of millionaires as occasional reinforcement—wall painting, to wit, or the art of the mural painter.

Not that in our latitude and particularly in America there is any sign of a return to fresco, that kind of wall painting which Michael Angelo the magnificent said was man's work, while easel painting was only good for weaklings and women. The necessity to wet down the wall, put on the damp plaster and cover in a day just so much smooth and freshly coated surface as the master prepares would bar this classical "fresh" painting, even if our climate permitted the resulting pictures to remain uninjured. Modern murals, as Tintoretto and Tiepolo did, paint on canvas and stretch it on the wall, whence it can be removed easily enough if damaged or some defect be found before such remedies. But canvas-painted mural, adhering to the wall, has gone the temptation to forget the relations between mural work and its environment, the temptation to treat the picture which is to form, to all appearance, an integral part of the wall as if it were a big easel picture. It is so much easier, often, indeed, it is absolutely necessary, to paint in a studio which is entirely different in color and lighting from the hall, room, or corridor in which it is to remain. So that when the canvas is in place a mural painter has at the last minute to make up for such mistakes as are certain to befall him in the studio, and make them up with scant provision as to scaffoldings and freedom from the intrusion of the curious.

New York is the great centre of mural painters, the only city in America and perhaps the only one in the world which has a Society of Mural Painters. But how large a proportion of the great canvases for the decoration of State Houses and other public buildings is seen by the local amateurs it is difficult to say; certain it is that only a small fraction of them is heard of here. They are too big to be shown at the Architectural League exhibition, which comes only for a month in the year, and the cost of hiring a special gallery would be for most artists prohibitive.

Some of the murals for the Capitol of Minnesota at St. Paul by La Farge, Blashfield, Volk, and Cox, some of those for the Court House at Baltimore by Turner and Blashfield have been shown here. Recently the lunette reproduced in this issue of THE TIMES, a composition with three figures by Henry Oliver Walker, called "The Sacred Flame," was on exhibition for a few days in the Vanderbilt Gallery. But for one that can be seen under such special conditions there must be ten which leave the city unheralded by the press. There is no provision for their exhibition, no building appropriate. The Society of Mural Painters cannot afford a gallery and the National Arts Club has not the requisite accommodations, perhaps never will have, because its galleries are constantly set with exhibitions from the beginning of the season to its close. In its new quarters on Gramercy Park, though the galleries will be larger, the pressure of the club's [illegible] again we have an instance of the short-sightedness which delays the erection of an exhibition building large enough to meet the needs of the metropolis.

In Philadelphia a good deal of mural work has been produced of late by women, the most notable being a series of wall paintings by Miss Violet Oakley for a gallery in the new State House at Harrisburg. Just now the John Sartain Public School in Philadelphia has received five large mural paintings by women, a gift from Miss Emily Sartain as a monument to her father, the engraver, after whom the school is named. They represent the beginnings of science. Miss Alice Boner has painted "The Early Age of Teaching" with figures of Plato and his disciples standing or seated beneath the trees in the Academe. In defiance of historical fact there are women as well as men in the groups disposed over a canvas nineteen feet long and nine high. The early age of metallurgy is painted by Miss Alice Mumford, that of diplomacy by Miss Elisabeth L. Button, of music by Miss Nancy M. Ferguson, and of astronomy by the late Miss Kathryn Schmidt. In Buffalo the Woman's Club has large murals by Mrs. John Glenny. Indeed there is hardly a large city where the interest in art has been sufficient to start an art school which does not afford instances of this graduation of painters from the easel painting to the mural.

Cennino Cennini of Padua, a painter of the early fifteenth century, who has left us a useful as well as quaint vade-mecum for the painter-artisan, presents a high ideal to the youthful artist whose steps he tries to guide in Il Libro dell' Arto o Trattato della Pittura. As befits a serious citizen of that ancient university town, he tells the pupil that his manner of living should always be regulated as if he were studying theology, philosophy, or any other science. Two meals a day—light and good food—little wine. Then he must spare and reserve his hand, saving it from fatigue, as in throwing stones or iron bars—perhaps the college games of duck-on-a-rock and quoits are here intended—and remarks further that by frequenting too much the company of ladies "an artist's hand may become so unsteady that it will tremble and flutter more than leaves shaken by the wind." Now, whether this is to be construed as a compliment to the ladies of Padua or just the reverse the context saith not. But more to our point is one dictum of this expert on fresco, tempera, and the painting on wooden panels, as thus: "Remember that he who learns to paint first on walls and then on panels does not become so perfect a master of the art as when he happens to learn to paint on panels first and then on walls."

The question naturally rises whether Cennini would have written thus if painting in oil colors on canvas had become practically universal in his time, displacing tempera, and fresco had disappeared to make room for the decorative oil painting on canvas for the wall. Of course it is natural that the beginner should proceed from the small to the large, from panel in tempera to wall in fresco. Probably his idea was that if the novice should paint large too soon he would never be able to get his hand and eye down to the delicate process of drawing and painting on the prepared board which he so graphically describes in his treatise. Modern teaching in Paris, however, does not take much heed of this early monitor of the arts. There the great game of the beginner is to paint some giant canvas which will crush objections on the part of the jury by its brute size and render the art critics speechless with admiration, if not paralyzed as to their pens. Later on, when he can get a chance to sell to ordinary human beings, he will reduce his measure to suit the walls of a commoner or garden house, and at a pinch, if all else fails him, he will do miniatures. Perhaps Cennini was a wise enough observer of human nature to have perceived that the beginner longs to do things on a colossal scale, and his shrewd pedantry, fostered in a town of pedants and scholars, taught him that the first thing to do was to thwart the overweening instinct of the young.

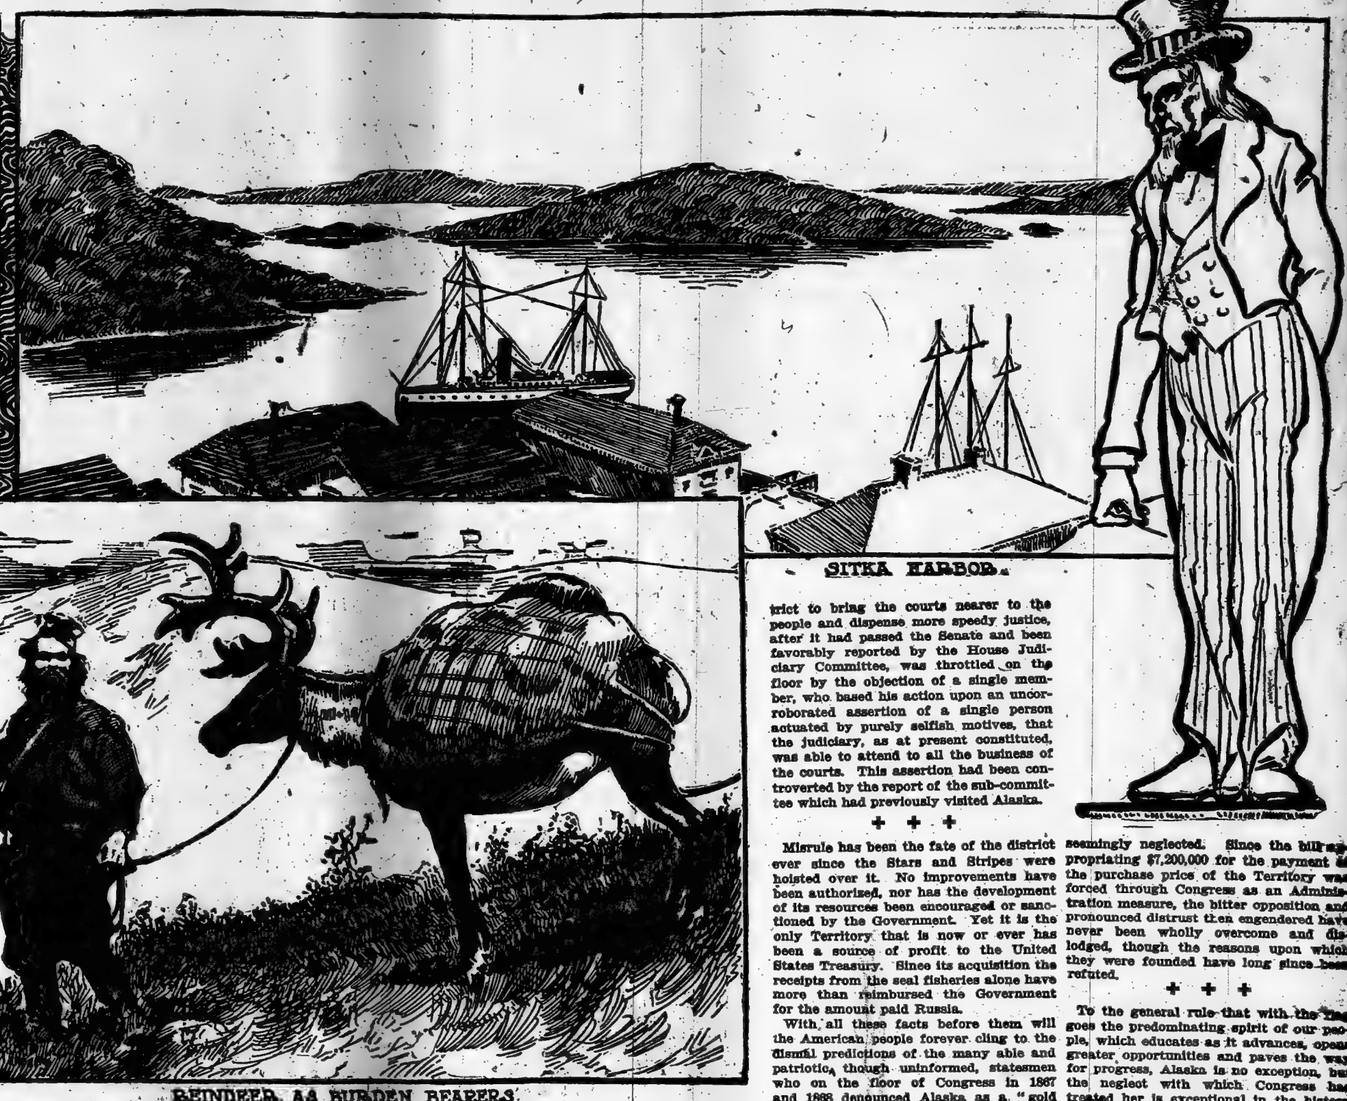
Congress's Neglect of Alaska a National Disgrace

A LAPLANDER, HERDER OF REINDEER.



SITKA HARBOR.

REINDEER AS BURDEN BEARERS.

A Brief Survey of the Conditions Which Have Led Some Alaskans to Prefer Annexation to Canada to Our Continued Indifference to Their Interest.

THE stirring resolutions recently adopted by Alaskans and transmitted to the President, in which they vigorously denounce the inactivity of Congress in failing to accord to them some recognition, and wherein in a moment of disappointment and anger they conclude with a request to be allowed to join with Canada in the hope of bettering their condition, should not call forth the hasty condemnation of the American people. Until their claims have been investigated and the reasonableness of their demands carefully weighed, judgment should be suspended.

Annexation of the Territory, as requested, would only be carrying out the policy of the Congress that appropriated $7,200,000 to carry the treaty of purchase into effect, and the record shows that similar resolutions were offered on the floor of Congress in 1867-8, and were not then considered as treasonable or even preposterous.

No one believes that annexation was seriously contemplated even by these neglected children of the flag, but a review of some of the conditions with which they have patiently contended for so long, and which still confront them, will serve to soften the criticism of the uninformed.

The Territory of Alaska covers an area of 590,804 square miles, 369,529,600 acres, and was acquired from Russia by purchase at a cost of less than 2 cents an acre. Its area is about one-sixth that of the United States, and its coast line is greater. This vast domain has for nearly forty years been the property of the United States, and during all that time this Nation has been content to receive the revenue at hand, derived from the seal fisheries and the customs in an amount sufficient to more than repay the expenditure necessary to acquire the Territory, together with all costs of maintaining it, but has stubbornly resisted all demands to aid in developing the dormant resources of the country, or to even establish a decent system of government for the people or allow them to do so.

A brief comparison and a running survey of conditions existing in the Philippines and in Alaska only present more clearly the injustice done the latter. Alaska was acquired by purchase for an insignificant sum without the loss of a single life. Add to the money paid under the treaty for the islands of the Far East the money expended in maintaining them, and the loss to the country of thousands of her gallant soldiers, and the comparative cost of Alaska shrinks to insignificance. In the acquisition of Alaska we made a good bargain.

The native Filipino, relieved from oppressive Spanish rule, can never complain that he has since been neglected. Not for a day has he been abandoned. Even against his will has assistance been rendered, which he has taken as a matter of course and received, generally, with passive indifference or distrust. The American settler has been encouraged from the first and his efforts have been seconded by the granting of valuable concessions and the extension of recognition. All this has been done in less than a single decade. How has it been with Alaska? For nearly half a century her people have been compelled to shift for themselves, and even their independent action has been interfered with. Yet the third article of the treaty with Russia expressly provided that: "The inhabitants of the ceded territory, according to their choice, reserving to themselves their natural allegiance, may return to Russia within three years; but if they should prefer to remain in the ceded territory they, with the exception of the uncivilized native tribes, shall be admitted to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States, and shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion."

Within a month after the territory was shadowed, but not sheltered, by the flag, a mass meeting was held at Sitka and a temporary local government set up, and immediately steps were taken to establish a school. A building was purchased and a teacher installed at a salary of $75 per month, $50 of which was paid from the military fund, as the school was under the joint control of three trustees elected by the people and a committee appointed from the military officers, the territory being at that time under military rule. Within four years the financial support received from the military fund was withdrawn, and in 1875 the school languished and died. During the next five years several unsuccessful attempts were made to re-establish it. In 1880 the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions took up the work and sent a teacher to Alaska. A school with 103 pupils was organized, the attendance later increasing to 130. Up to this time the Government had never, beyond the payments contributed to the teacher's salary from the military fund, assisted or encouraged this work, though eleven years before a recommendation had been made by the Secretary of the Board of Indian Commissioners, which was transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior, with his indorsement, that $100,000 be appropriated for the education of the Indian tribes, a portion of which, it was expected, would be expended in Alaska. The appropriation, however, when made, was in general terms, and its expenditure was left to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Consequently Alaska was lost sight of and the money devoted to other purposes.

Gen. John Eaton, the Commissioner of Education, whose sympathies had been enlisted, in each of his annual reports from 1871 to 1880 repeatedly called the attention of Congress to the pressing needs of the Territory. Congress did nothing. After eight years appeals were made directly to the people. Meetings were held and addresses made throughout the country, and after three more years of such education by the lecturer and writer, enough public sentiment was aroused to induce President Hayes, in 1880, to recognize the Territory officially in his message to Congress. In 1881 President Arthur wrote in his message:

"I regret to state that the people of Alaska are as yet unprovided with any form of government by which life and property can be protected," and he urged the necessity of some action on the part of Congress to relieve this condition. In his message of 1883 he said:

"I trust that Congress will not fail at the present session to put Alaska under the protection of law. Its people have repeatedly remonstrated against our neglect to afford them the maintenance and protection expressly guaranteed by the terms of the treaty whereby the Territory was ceded to the United States. For sixteen years they have pleaded in vain for that which they should have received without the asking."

Finally, in 1884, the Harrison bill was passed, carrying an appropriation of $25,000 for school purposes, and extending to the Territory the mining laws, but expressly withholding the operation of the general land laws, of the United States. By the terms of this organic act, as it is called, the backs were torn from the Oregon Code, and it was labeled "Laws of Alaska," and the courts of that district were directed to apply them whenever they happened to fit, and from that day to the year 1900 so much of their time has been taken up in sifting out the unsuitable portions that but little was left in which to construe and enforce the rest.

Was this carrying into effect either the spirit or the letter of that clause in the treaty of 1867 which declared that the people "shall be admitted to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages and immunities of citizens of the United States?" Would not the arraignment contained in President Arthur's message in 1883 receive the sanction of the fair-minded, liberty-loving citizen of to-day?

In 1891 some additional legislation was enacted, relative to the sale of lands for townsite purposes, and the regulation of trading and manufacturing associations. In 1900 the Carter code of procedure was adopted for the better regulation of the practice in the District Courts. At the same time the license system was put in operation. Under this law a direct tax was levied on every line of business conducted in the Territory. Originally the Government expended only half the sum thus derived in maintaining schools in Alaska and pocketed the balance, but later a spirit of benevolence loosened the purse strings, and the Government only withheld a fourth of the license fees collected from the incorporated towns and allowed a needy people to keep seventy-five per cent. of this direct tax.

Of the fees collected outside the incorporated towns the Government still retained its equal share. The Nelson law enacted by the Fifty-eighth Congress in 1905 provided for a fund to be called the "Alaska Fund," to be devoted one-fourth to schools, 10 per cent. to the maintenance of the insane and destitute, the residue to roads.

After long years of patient and unremitting endeavor Alaska was able to obtain a misfit system of law and a few schools, and was privileged to tax herself and retain a portion of the revenue to help in relieving, in a small way, the local conditions.

In the selection of her officials she has no voice. Her Governor and Judiciary and Marshals are appointed by the President. Formerly the Commissioners were appointed in the same way, but this power was later transferred to the different Judges, and under this system the authority of the latter has become almost supreme. By controlling the tenure of the subordinate officials their influence is made far-reaching, and the door for fraud and corruption in this important tribunal, the sole guardian of the people's personal and property rights, is opened wide.

The people are dissatisfied. They see their hopes soar only to be dashed to pieces. They received the last blow at the hands of the Fifty-eighth Congress. A sub-committee of the Senate had visited the Territory and reported the result of its investigations to Congress and recommended the passage of some wholesome and much-needed legislation. The people had received encouragement from the official recognition twice contained in President Roosevelt's messages. They were expectant and hopeful of better things. But when they saw their Delegate bill, granting them the privilege of having a mouthpiece in Congress, like other Territories and possessions, and placing them on an equality with the natives of Hawaii and Porto Rico, killed by pessimistic arguments advanced forty years ago, declaring that it would be the height of folly to encourage free-born Americans who had the temerity to develop that vast domain with a hope they might ever become a State, and asserted that if they were now granted representation without a vote they might some day be emboldened to ask for more.

The Division bill, providing for an additional Judge and one more judicial district to bring the courts nearer to the people and dispense more speedy justice, after it had passed the Senate and been favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee, was throttled on the floor by the objection of a single member, who based his action upon an uncorroborated assertion of a single person actuated by purely selfish motives, that the judiciary, as at present constituted, was able to attend to all the business of the courts. This assertion had been controverted by the report of the sub-committee which had previously visited Alaska.

Misrule has been the fate of the district ever since the Stars and Stripes were hoisted over it. No improvements have been authorized, nor has the development of its resources been encouraged or sanctioned by the Government. Yet it is the only Territory that is now or ever has been a source of profit to the United States Treasury. Since its acquisition the receipts from the seal fisheries alone have more than reimbursed the Government for the amount paid Russia.

With all these facts before them will the American people forever cling to the dismal predictions of the many able and patriotic, though uninformed, statesmen who on the floor of Congress in 1867 and 1868 denounced Alaska as a "gold brick," or will they recall the abiding faith of Seward, and, by striking the shackles from the limbs of a giant, develop an empire?

We have manfully shouldered the burden thrust upon us in the acquisition of the Philippines; we have been faithful to our trust in the matters of Cuba and Porto Rico, but our long-standing debt to the Far North, voluntarily incurred, remains not only unpaid, but seemingly neglected. Since the bill appropriating $7,200,000 for the payment of the purchase price of the Territory was forced through Congress as an Administration measure, the bitter opposition and pronounced distrust then engendered have never been wholly overcome and dislodged, though the reasons upon which they were founded have long since been refuted.

To the general rule that with the rest goes the predominating spirit of our people, which educates as it advances, opens greater opportunities and paves the way for progress, Alaska is no exception, but the neglect with which Congress has treated her is exceptional in the history of our Government.

We welcome any discussion of our condition and needs by the press, because the discussion of any meritorious proposition always gives it added strength, and all Alaska needs is consideration. It is indifference and neglect that are holding her back and bringing despair to her people.

To the fair-minded people of this country through the press we look for relief.

ALASKAN.

A Game of "Craps" in the Sunny South

GAMES may come and games may go, but the game of "craps" will ever be with us. Who played the first game of "craps"? Hoyle does not tell us, but it is a safe guess that the father of the game was a Southerner. In the North the hazard of cubes is confined chiefly to newsboys and bootblacks, but below Mason and Dixon's line one may find regular "crap parlors" where special and costly tables are used by the players. Billiard and pool tables also offer excellent surfaces for rolling the cubes, and it is here that the proprietor of the "parlors" stands and "cuts" the game. "Cutting," in the gambling world, means taking a toll from the winnings of the player who rakes in the "pot." When this tolling continues for eight or ten hours without interruption the gentleman in the checked suit and Easter-egg shirt finds his "parlors" quite remunerative, despite the trusts, strikes, and threatened invasion by Castro's army.

But it is among the colored crap-shooters that one sees the game in all its phases from comedy to tragedy. Disputes over the turning of the little bone dice have been responsible for many shooting and cutting affrays in the South. This is probably the principal reason why the police of Southern cities are always so eager to pounce down on a game of "craps" and place the players under arrest. But the men in blue have but two eyes, and even while they are stealthily tiptoeing up to some old shed on the water front where a crap game is in progress another crowd of wharf rats and stevedores may boldly roll the cubes out on a street corner not two blocks away. It is always amusing to watch the players. Their deadly earnestness, recklessness, and unconscious humor is a little melodrama in itself.

"Luk heah, Sam," says a big roustabout, pulling out his month's wages in crumpled notes from a pocket of his greasy overalls, "if ah lose dis heah money ah won't hab a 'pony' ob gin or a plug of tobacco foh thirty mo' days. But ef ah win—well, der'll be birds roostin' on my table ebhy time ah goes home to de ol' woman."

It was not long before the big roustabout had pulled the last crumpled note from his pocket and was offering to sell his brass watch chain for a dime. Not succeeding in finding a purchaser, he walked over to the dock and tossed something in the muddy water. It was a rabbit's foot. "Dat's what ah got foh acceptin' a lucky charm from a strange nigrah," he soliloquized blusty. "Ah might hab known it was hoodooed."

The game continues.

"Come, 'Big Dick,'" breathes a sable player, snapping his fingers with much effort.

"Six am his points," announces some one in the circle.

"Bet yo' two bits he doan make it," cries a coal passer, dipping in his pocket.

Seven appears, and the player loses the dice. The next man throws seven, and rakes in the pot on the first shot. So the game goes on. When a player "goes broke" he offers to put up his shoes and his hat. Next his coat and vest. It is probable he would have to leave the premises in a barrel if one of his more fortunate brothers did not shout:

"Put yo' close on, man; dis ain't no pawn shop."

The game is getting intensely exciting.

"Honey Lu!" says a player.

"Ah, mah baby!" shouts another.

"Get mah gal a pah ob new shoes!"

"Big Joe fum Baltimo'."

"What did de rabbit say?"

"Steamboat pass!"

There are doubtless more quaint and mysterious expressions in "craps" than in all other gambling games combined. Each player has his own choice words for encouraging the dice to turn in his favor. To these he adds a peculiar shake of his fingers.

But sometimes the dignified negro coal passer may pay his color with a selection of expressions and snap his fingers until he twists them out of place, but he cannot win. This is because some "shark" (river gull who makes his living by winning the month's wages of the deckhands, &c., on pay day) is using "loaded" dice. These dice are "doctored" by experts in gambling supply houses and are very expensive, many pair costing from $5 to $10, or even more. When the victim is very green the "shark" often "doctors" his own dice by burning extra points on the sides with a hot wire. It is a dangerous game, though, and if the "shark" is discovered cheating he has a run for his life. Often when he is on the verge of detection he whispers "cops," and the crowd disperses in all directions, the deceiver escaping with the pot.

There is no denial that the game of "craps" has its fascination for those who play it. The millionaire who takes a hand at poker just "to forget business cares" never gets half the real enjoyment out of thousand-dollar jackpots that the colored crap shooter gets out of an humble "pot" of "two bits"—25 cents.

First Shipments of Country Milk

How the Erie Contributed to New York's Food Supply

UNTIL the Erie in 1842 originated the delivery of good country milk in New York, the city's supply had been mainly swill and adulterated milk. The new plan was so widely appreciated at its inception that long rows of men, women and children carrying jars or cans, daily awaited the arrival of the shipment.

THE Erie's milk shipments have increased from 600,000 quarts in 1842 to 112,454,040 quarts in 1904.

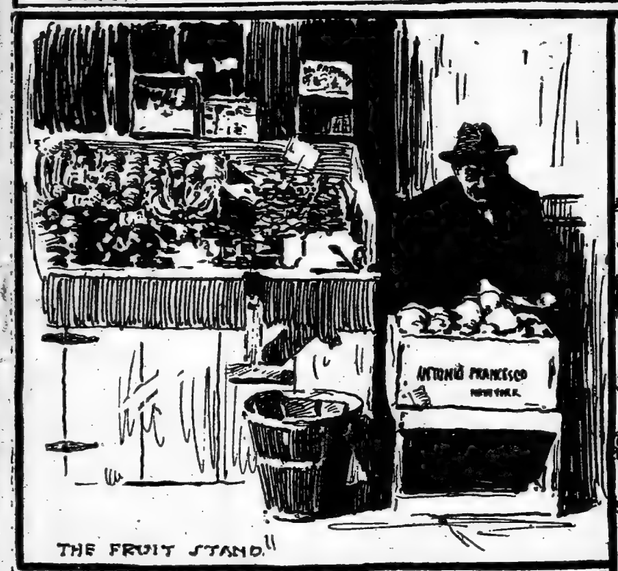
The Man Who Runs the "Johnny Stand"



He Is Italian, This Seller in Ordinary to the People---Provider of Fruits, Coal, and Ice for Modest Purchasers---But His Children Are American.

IT IS not a long time—perhaps half a century will carry us back to the age of smoked or salted meat and fish—since the only reliable fruit was the apple, and that often failed. Only in large communities was fresh meat to be obtained; rural dwellers were confined most of the year to preserved food or fruit.

With the advent of the ice house and the ice plant came the house refrigerator, the refrigerator car, the refrigerator train, the refrigerator steamship, with low freight rates. All the fruit, yes, the meat, and the fish of the world became available for our markets. The one thing lacking was the man to distribute these articles of food to the household cheaply, and in all districts and neighborhoods. Fortunately that individual was forthcoming; at about the time of the development mentioned he developed; and the improvement in the distribution of household necessities of all sorts has followed the arrival in America of the Italian, who seemed most fitted to fill the rôle, which required organization and tireless industry.

He came poor and ignorant of the language, yet within a generation he has been transformed into an intelligent blessing from one end to the other of the land. He has distributed himself to the most distant localities, and the Italian fruit stand is a part of American civilization of to-day which could hardly be parted with. Not only is he doing his best for us, but in return we are Americanizing him to a degree impossible were he to remain in the many so called "Little Italies," where these people herd together in an unfortunate way to their rapid absorption.

The Italian, however, is ambitious, and he very soon accumulates by hard labor and frugality a sum sufficient to embark in some one of the many more profitable occupations. Coming from a land of fruit he understood at once the possibilities of our country for development in that article of food. At the outset his attempts were in a small way, but as time went on he increased his business, and by his success encouraged an ever increasing number of his compatriots to enter the same calling.

As time went on vegetables as well were added to his stock. Accumulating money he soon became a merchant in a larger field either as a wholesale purchaser or with a fruit store of very considerable dimensions, thus making a local market for those articles. There was a time when he could obtain a stand for nothing, or at the cost of keeping the walks clean in Winter and Summer, but now very large sums are often paid for privileges of keeping stands in favorable localities.

So the landlord becomes enriched for a space which otherwise might have remained vacant; at the same time by the extent and beauty of the display of fruit he makes for the increased beauty of the locality, relieving the eye of the passer-by from the ugly uniformity of the constructions.

So he has added largely to aesthetic conditions, which needed his aid. Many of these stands are things of beauty and a joy to all. The great fruit companies and combinations throughout the world know that America is the best fruit market in the world, the quickest, most reliable, and, it naturally follows, the most profitable.

The rapidity of decay of choice fruit has made for rapidity of handling. So the steamship which arrives in the morning has unloaded her fruit in a few hours, and that fruit is in local distribution or on trains speeding away to all parts, where the same rapid system is continued. All this requires considerable capital, which is furnished by men who understand the system of selection and somewhat of silence, hence many have an idea that the capitalist or padrone is a sort of slave owner who controls the services of his creatures.

Now this is something which could not continue in America. These men are very sensitive on the subject, but it may as well be understood that no such thing exists in the fruit business, for there are so many thousands, yes, tens of thousands, who are to be found in distant communities performing their duty of distribution among Americans who would know at once their conditions.

There may be something of the kind in the boot blacking business, which is now wholly in their hands, and it may be that some men are imported for the purpose of filling a demand for shines, which is urgent; but these men rapidly Americanize, and then the padrone is not feared. Nearly all the hotels have Italians placed at the boot black stands, as more reliable than others.

There is another late development by Italians which, although but a few years old, has changed conditions in the tenements more than anything that has taken place in years, and that is the distribution of coal, wood, and ice in small quantities to those who dwell in limited quarters in the tenements.

This is now so extensive that in the tenement districts of the city two or more cellars may be found on every block from which places the poor who have little money, and less room, to spare, are supplied with coal and wood in small quantities, and at low rates. The ice distribution is certainly in the line of health improvement, for with ice the supplies of the table are kept fresh and wholesome, particularly the milk supply. The labor in conducting these coal and wood cellars consists in delivering at any hour of the day, or night, too, as is often the case. In Summer, when ice distribution goes on at night, these articles must be delivered at the rooms. Often many flights of stairs must be climbed with a hundred pounds of coal, a paper bag of charcoal, bundles of wood, and pieces of ice of any size.

The charcoal business is almost a new business under the system, and in Summer when fires are not required for heat the charcoal fire serves best, cheapest, and quickest. The queer simplicity of the signs in vogue in these cellars is mostly in the line of economy, and are generally home made, with the statement that Mike, Tony, or Frank have ice, coal, and wood. And so these simple abbreviations of many high-sounding names serve best. Each man generally has a wife, who remains at the cellar to take orders while the husband delivers them. The inevitable collection of infants serves to show the race is not dying out, and very proud of their American born babies they are. Asked, "Is the bambino Italiano?" came back quick reply, "No! No! Americano!" Although but a few months old; and the parents can speak no English. So here has commenced the Americanisation.

The children of Italians that attend school are remarkable for the purity of American accent; in fact, not a trace of foreign accent can be noticed, and this is something not to be found among other foreign races. To what cause this can be traced I am not aware, but it is a fact which is easy of proof to any one who will take the trouble to hold a conversation with an Italian child of the public school. Another thing noticeable is that no girls are obtainable for servant maids. From the fact that so many men want wives there are not enough young women to go around.

The tact and good nature of the wood and coal sellers has really endeared them, and has done more to popularize the race than anything previous, for it makes them necessary. It is safe to say that in no part of New York's tenement sections can they be parted with. Hard-working, abstemious, economical; in a few years their coal cellar will blossom into a fruit stand or a newsstand—perhaps later into a corner store.

Their children in the meantime have become most thorough Americans, and can sing the "Star-Spangled Banner" as a first accomplishment; and when this race becomes blended, an artistic element will be added which the Anglo-Saxons need.

The number of licenses to sell fruit, newspapers, &c., either by vehicles or on stands in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, number some eleven thousand five hundred, mostly in the hands of Italians. The number engaged in the distribution of coal, wood, and ice is not known, as no record is made of that trade, but there are many thousands.

"In the improvement of health conditions during the past generation, which has been very great, the death rate having declined steadily for thirty years or more, it is probable that the increased consumption of fruit and vegetables has had a considerable share; and in the amelioration of conditions in the tenements perhaps no single change has been more important than this distribution of coal, wood, and ice.

"Anything which goes toward the distribution of the multitude of immigrants is desirable, and it is found that many thousands of Italians are proceeding to every part of the country to engage in the business of economic distribution of their services, particularly in household male service, which presents an opening to them in every section.

When it comes to the improvement and encouragement of the growth of fruit and vegetables in every section of our country, a development which is perhaps only in its infancy, it becomes of the greatest importance to encourage the Italian fruit and vegetable seller; and could he but be prevailed upon to engage more in the growth of these articles for which by education and experience in Italy none is better fitted, the waste farms of New England and New York might be made profitable again.

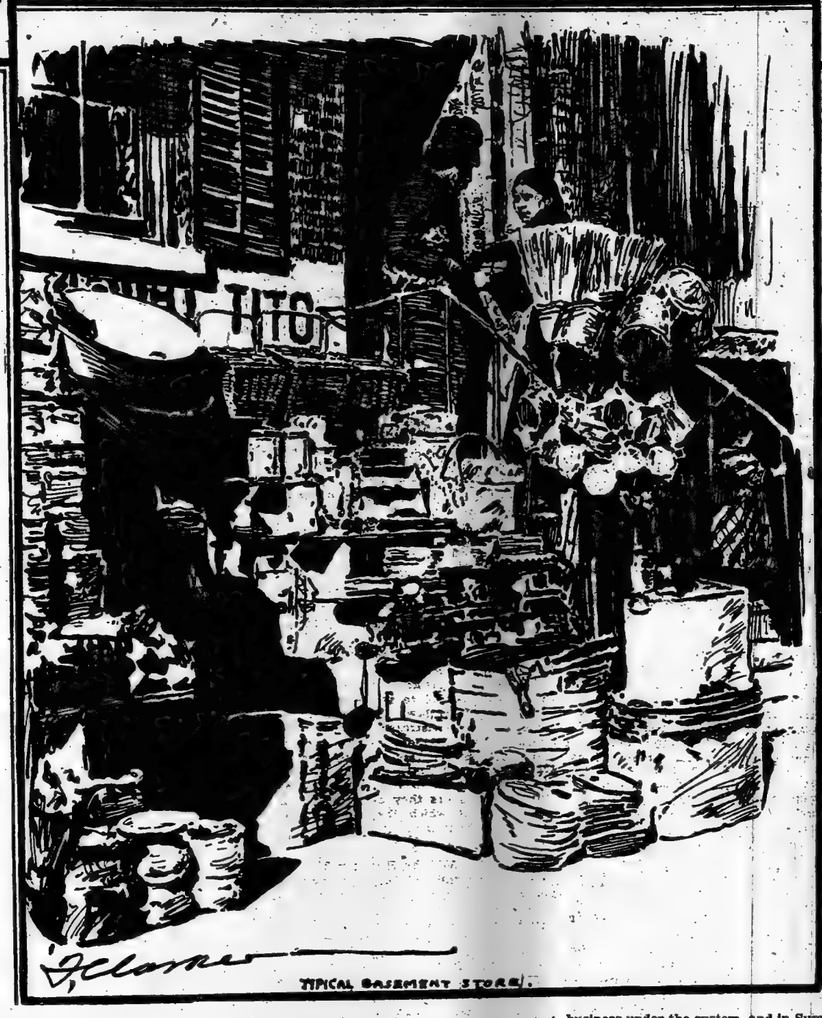
Something is being done in that way. Already many formerly waste farms are being reclaimed by them. The great opportunity, however, may come to them in the development of wine and fruit in the rich volcanic lands of the West, which by irrigation are soon to be made available for cultivation in a way now practiced in Italy, where similar soil and conditions exist.

The question of overripe fruit so often mooted as dangerous to health by actual experiment may be said to resolve itself into this: that no fruit is overripe unless it be foul from decay, and then it outlaws itself; but there is such an evil as underripe fruit, and of that may come illness.

The Board of Health, however, declares strongly in favor of a wholesome fruit and vegetable diet, so that any extension of the use of those articles of food is saving lives by thousands in our great cities, and making life more enjoyable, at the same time developing our fruit and vegetable growth and distribution, cheapening the necessities of life by enlarging them, so that the human family may live without the necessity of meat at all times and by variety of food a still further improvement of health conditions may follow.



New York Racing Returns to Its Original Home

WITH the recent opening of Belmont Park racing as a New York sport returned to its original home. It was just 240 years ago that the first English Governor of the Province of New York, Sir Richard Nicolls, recognizing the natural facilities of the Hempstead Plains for racing, established an annual horse race, the purse being a silver crown or a bushel of wheat. In thus stamping the approval of royalty upon local racing, Daniel Denton, in his rare little book on New York published in 1670, adds that Gov. Nicolls did this, "not so much for the divertissement of youth as for encouraging and bettering the breed of horses, which, through great neglect, has been impaired."

This old royal racecourse was not far from Hempstead, and a few miles west of Belmont Park. A few years later the famous Newmarket course was established on its site by Gov. Francis Lovelace, who succeeded Gov. Nicolls in 1668. He increased both the annual prizes and the number of races, and he was also instrumental in laying out the celebrated Beaver Pond course. This was a circular track, running entirely around a small pond which has since been filled up and every vestige of this ancient turf headquarters that used to attract the wealthy families of the growing settlement on Manhattan Island has entirely disappeared.

It is not surprising that the Hempstead Plains assumed an early importance for tests of speed. To refer once more to Daniel Denton's quaint but very truthful record, he says:

"Toward the middle of Long Island lyeth a plain sixteen miles long and four broad where you shall find neither stick nor stone to hinder the horses' heels or endanger them in their races, and once a year the best horses in the island are brought hither to try their swiftness, and the swiftest being rewarded with a silver cup, two being annually procured for that purpose."

In a book on American customs published in London about 1776, the popularity of the Hempstead Plains is seen from this interesting reference:

"These plains were celebrated for their races throughout all the Colonies, and even in England. They were held twice a year for a silver cup, to which the gentry of New England and New York resorted."

The New York Weekly Post Boy of June 4, 1750, gives us a pleasing picture of this old-time racing spirit. In one of its scarce news items it says: "Last Friday a great horse race was run on Hempstead Plains for a considerable wager, which engaged the attention of so many of this city that upward of seventy chairs and chaises were carried over the ferry from hence the day before, besides a far greater number of horses, and it was thought that the number of horses on the Plains at the race far exceeded a thousand."

Evidently this must have been a record-breaking crowd, and the fact that most of the followers of the turf had to leave the comforts of their homes the day before is sufficient proof of the fact that the citizens of New York have ever regarded horse racing as one of their most cherished enjoyments.

In 1737 Hugh Gaine, one of the city's early printers, tells us in his interesting newspaper that Lewis Morris, Jr., won the New York Subscription Plate with his five-year-old horse American Childers. The race was twice around the Beaver Pond track, and took place early in June of that year. It is of peculiar interest to know that Lewis Morris was an owner and racer of fast horses, because, nineteen years later, he signed the Declaration of Independence, making his name immortal by that act, in addition to the other deeds of usefulness that he performed for the Colony and the country.

In 1773 James De Lancey's bay horse Bashaw was beaten in a close race for £50 on the Newmarket course by the bay mare Nettle, owned by Israel Waters. The years immediately preceding the Revolution witnessed many lively races on the Hempstead Plains. For four or five years up to 1770 there had been very little sport, owing to a number of accidents that had occurred in 1765 and 1766.

Within modern years the great race courses between Jamaica and Hempstead were the Fashion course and the Union course. Running and trotting races were held on both [illegible] horses that are [illegible] records achieved their greatest successes on these tracks.

The Union course was built in 1821. The New York Legislature, early in that year, passed an act allowing trials of speed in Queens County during May and October. The track was built in the western part of the town of Jamaica, and for about fifty years was practically the racing centre for the territory around New York. Over thirty years ago the track was abandoned and the land sold and cut up into building lots, but the streets are reminiscent of the old-time sporting days, as they bear the names of famous horsemen and trainers.

One of the most historic races in America was run at Union Course in 1823. A match for $20,000 a side was arranged between the famous Northern horse Eclipse, owned by Samuel Purdy, father of the late John F. Purdy, and William R. Johnston's Sir Henry of Petersburg, Va.

The great test took place on May 27, 1823. The conditions were the best two out of three four-mile heats. Over 60,000 persons, it is said, went down to see the race and over $200,000, an extraordinary sum then, was reported to have changed hands. Eclipse was nine years old and Sir Henry a four-year-old.

The Southern horse got the first heat by a scant margin. Samuel Purdy was wroth at the result, charging the jockey who rode his horse with bad management and he decided to take the saddle himself for the next heat. The greatest excitement prevailed. Sir Henry became a strong favorite, for he only needed to win one more heat to carry off the honors and rich prize. The veteran horseman, Samuel Purdy, never showed his ability more conclusively than on that day. To the surprise of the crowd he rode Eclipse with such perfection that he distanced Sir Henry by two lengths. Then came the third and deciding heat. The excitement, at fever heat before, was something almost unprecedented as the turf representatives of the North and South came out for the final test. Eclipse took the lead and succeeded in holding it by the narrowest margin for one, two, and three miles. Up to the last half mile [illegible] ably set the pace. Then Sir Henry, [illegible] for a mighty effort, shot by like a flash and the Southern sympathizers burst into a roar of applause. Eclipse responded and the horses ran neck and neck to within 200 yards of the finish. Sir Henry could not stand the driving pace any longer and slipped back, but only by inches. It was enough, however, for Eclipse to win and retain the championship honors for the North. The time of the heats was 7:37, 7:49, and 8:24, respectively.

Toward the closing years of the Union Course, Hiram W. Woodruff contributed materially to its fame. He is still fondly remembered by old-time horse lovers as one of the best trainers, riders, and drivers that America ever produced. For years he kept one of the most popular road houses on the island. It was almost opposite the entrance to the race course, and was a favorite stopping place of Commodore Vanderbilt, Robert Bonner, William Noble, and other worthies who attended all the big races.

Hiram Woodruff reduced the time of a mile trot from 2:40 to 2:17¼, and predicted before his death, which occurred in 1867, that 2:10 would be done at no distant date. His friends laughed at what seemed a wild prophesy. Among some of the celebrated horses that Woodruff trained and drove on Union Course were Flora Temple, Kemble Jackson, Tacony, the great Dexter, George M. Patchen, Stonewall Jackson, Ripton, Cassius M. Clay, and George Wilkes. In 1858 Hiram Woodruff drove Kemble Jackson in a great trotting race against the fleetest horses in the country, and won three straight mile heats, his fastest time being 2:30¼.

The old Union Course was a perfect ellipse on an absolutely level surface. The track was one mile in circuit, and was so well laid out that it was used as the model for many of the big running and trotting tracks in other parts of the country. After 1851 the course was used almost exclusively for trotting, and was owned by William Shaw, John L. Snedeker and Ezra White. For about twenty years it divided honors with the famous Fashion Course between Newtown and Flushing as the [illegible] vicinity of [illegible] was sold, and [illegible] historic [illegible]

High Living in Manhattan and Who Enjoy It

Group of financiers at lunch in aerial dining room.

An apartment 250 feet above Wall Street.

A corner of the loftiest bedroom.

A Banker's Bedroom 300 Feet Above Wall Street--Dining Places and Other Dizzy Domestic Quarters in the Heart of the Financial District and What One May See from the Windows.

THE loftiest bedroom in the world—that is the unique possession of Col. Robert M. Thompson, President of the New York Metal Exchange, Director in half a dozen mining and banking corporations, and a very wealthy man. On the twenty-fifth floor of the enormous Wall Street Exchange Building, some 300 feet above the heart of the financial district, is this aerial sleeping room. When the Colonel looks from its window at the little cross on the steeple of Trinity Church his gaze has to take a downward angle. There is nothing in New York except the far-off tower of the Times Building and the double towers of the Park Row Building at which he can take a level look.

And the bedroom, with the ever-adjoining bath and shining porcelain tub, is not all. There's an elegant, spacious dining room, large enough to hold fifteen diners, a spick-and-span kitchen with electric stoves, and a snug, comfortable sitting room—in short, "all the comforts of home," so often advertised and so seldom seen. Col. Thompson has the entire floor as well for business as for domestic purposes. Indeed, to the owner the domestic features are merely incidental, but to the unprepared visitor they are all-engrossing.

In these days sky-kissing business quarters are not strange enough to make any but rural eyes bulge, but when it comes to sleeping on Wall Street—or twenty-five floors above it—well, even the most sophisticated and blasé metropolite must confess it's something out of the ordinary. Many of us have been on The World dome, or The Times tower, or some other equally lofty eminence to get a bird's-eye view of land and water. But when we look out of a dining room or bedroom window and see the human ants far below they take on a different aspect.

When you consider the view from Col. Thompson's downtown up-in-the-air living quarters, it's impossible to restrain your enthusiasm. There's absolutely no end to it—you can see everything. There's nothing in the way on any side. Even the mammoth Broad Exchange Building, the biggest office building in the world, shows its sanded roof to rooms two or three floors underneath Col. Thompson's. The Atlantic Building, Lord's Court, and the others, high as they are, interfere not at all with the line of vision.

When Col. Thompson has lunched and strolls to a south window he sees New York Harbor and the Bay spread like a map at his feet. He can nearly make out the army officers' wives taking the sun on their piazzas on Governors Island. The Statue of Liberty is a pretty dot on the map. Staten Island, the lower Jersey shore, the Brooklyn south shore, myriads of boats big and little—all of them are there, ornaments to Col. Thompson's sitting room window. It all looks so close at hand that you feel a desire to stretch out your arm and try to pick up Ellis Island or one of the ocean steamers and pull it through the window.

To the north from the dining room you see the whole city. The Park Row towers are on a dead level with your eyes; the Times Building rises gracefully in the far distance; Trinity Church, off to the left, hemmed in between the Empire and the Trinity Buildings, seems to be sighing for more fresh air; the Hanover Bank, the German-American Bank, a dozen or two more skyscrapers, stretch their heads toward the heavens, vainly endeavoring to take a look at the china on the Colonel's table. Through it all run the cañonlike streets, and, no matter how insignificant or unimportant you may be, you can look from your—rather the Colonel's—dizzy height upon the never-resting crowds and enjoy an exalted feeling of superiority over them all—millionaires, clerks, fruit vendors, messengers—all mere ants.

There are days at a time when the press of business keeps Col. Thompson in his office late at night, long after Wall Street and Broad Street and Exchange Place have become silent and empty. Why, he asked himself, should he go far uptown at 10 or 11 o'clock only to go to bed, sleep, and come back as soon as he got up in the morning. Why not sleep here?

Presto! It was done. It was not many hours, perhaps twenty-four or forty-eight, before the transformation was under way. Bedroom, bathroom, dining room, kitchen—all were conceived and fitted up together. No pains or money was spared to make everything just as it ought to be. There is no luxury obtainable in his fashionable hotel quarters that Col. Thompson cannot have for the asking on the twenty-fifth floor of 43 Exchange Place. All the servants he may choose to employ are ready to do his slightest bidding.

Of course the sleeping quarters are not in continual use. For weeks the owner may not touch his bed once—again he may lie in it six nights in succession. The point is, it's always there.

For quiet there's no place in New York or outside to equal it. The silence of the financial centre in the dead of night is not only impressive, it is stupendous. The lone pedestrian along Wall or Broad Street, when he hears the hollow echo of his footfalls, could imagine he was in some deserted city of the dead. The buildings, their tops against the stars, are huge, cold, silent ghosts, whose thousands of glass eyes, monotonously black, are sunk back into their stone bodies. The contrast between midday and midnight in front of the New York Stock Exchange is the most wonderful in this city of contrasts.

And this dead silence is, apparently, intensified in the top of 43 Exchange Place. The solitary occupant of the bedroom can see, 'way off to the north, the filmy haze of light that hovers over the brilliantly lighted Tenderloin, but never a sound of its revelry comes to him. The sombre stroke of Trinity's clock serves to make the following stillness more pronounced. The distant whirr of the trolley cars on Broadway is barely audible; and they run but infrequently in the middle of the night. Even when the world begins to stir in the morning the fierce medley of sounds is so far below Col. Thompson that his slumbers are no whit disturbed.

If the aerial bedroom is used only occasionally, the same is by no means true of the dining room and kitchen at the other end of the hall. The electric stoves, to which the current is supplied from the building's power plant, do not get rusty from want of practice. Every day luncheon is served in the dining room—and therein lies a little tale.

A group of financiers—some of them bank Presidents, others more humble—eat here as regularly as the sun rises, except, of course, on Sundays. The regular hour is 1 o'clock, and it is seldom that any one of the dozen is not on time. They call themselves the Wall Street Exchange Club. It's not a formal organization, with constitution and by-laws and House Committee and other such incumbrances; it's merely a gathering of congenial business men, who prefer this manner of lunching to going to a restaurant. Of course Col. Thompson is the Pooh Bah of the crowd; it was his idea, and he is a sort of combination godfather and guardian angel of the club.

There are three tables in the dining room, each one big enough for four persons. Two of these tables are right against the north windows. And if ever a better outlook is served with a luncheon it is the kaleidoscopic scenery that flits past the windows of a dining car at the rate of forty miles an hour. It's a jolly party that gets together in this room at 1 o'clock; the members forget all business worries for the time being.

The combination of business and domestic quarters makes this floor of Col. Thompson's a curious household. Across the hall from the electric stoves is the big, green-carpeted room where every movement of the fluctuating stocks is shown on a huge blackboard. Between the dining room and the sleeping room are the banking quarters, where a million dollars' worth of business is transacted every day. Sandwiched in on each side of the long, marble-lined hall are the private offices of Col. Thompson and his partners.

Only two floors below Daniel J. Sully carried on his spectacular operations in cotton a little over a year ago. It is a lesson in the ups and downs of high finance to see Sully's one office now and compare it with the elaborate suite he had before the collapse of his bull movement.

At the hottest period of his feverish efforts in the cotton market Sully would not let his clerks go home at night, but furnished beds for them in rooms next to the offices where they worked. But those days are over for Sully—for the present, at any rate. The twenty-third floor was leased by another financier. Because he loves his old quarters the cotton operator has managed to secure by a sub-lease the same room he before used as his office. It is in here that he is now busy regaining his lost fortunes.

One of the members of Col. Thompson's Wall Street Exchange Club is the President of the National Bank of North America, Alfred H. Curtis. Until recently he was cashier of the bank, and he impresses one as being extraordinarily young for a bank President. Next to Col. Thompson himself he is the most important member of the club, and in the founder's absence he sits in the seat of honor and is the Pooh Bah.

When banking men come to New York from Chicago and other cities to do business with the firm of S. H. P. Pell & Co., the banking firm of which Col. Thompson is a member, or with the National Bank of North America, they are introduced to the luncheon club and invited to eat with it. On the day the accompanying photographs were taken there were three or four out-of-towners gathered around the board with President Curtis, Col. Thompson happening to be out of town.

But to return to skyline dwellers—millionaires are not the only folk who have that privilege. Though Col. Thompson has the distinction of being highest up, there are others. In fact, there is a big colony of building Superintendents, engineers, and janitors who have their permanent homes in the tops of skyscrapers. In nearly every instance the apartment is much more comfortable and commodious than the occupant could afford if he had to live uptown.

Even in the busiest part of the day the Superintendent's home is a model of reposefulness. Take, for instance, the cozy apartment in the top of the big Atlantic Building, at Wall and William Streets. There resides Mr. De Taube, an expert engineer, the superintendent of the building.

View northward from Col. Thompson's dining room.

Engineer's apartment in the top of Atlantic Building.

He lives here with his mother. The apartment is right up under the roof—you have to walk up one flight after the elevator stops. When you step inside the door you'd think you were in quietest Harlem—except that there's more light here. The sitting room is there, and the dining room, with a hall cutting the whole thing in two. The mother of the engineer keeps the place as clean as a new pin.

And his flat is like others you'll find at the top of any one of dozens of skyscrapers downtown, though its fittings are doubtless more tasteful than most. On the Blair Building, at Broad Street and Exchange Place, is a regular little house. Instead of being under the roof it is really on top of it. From Col. Thompson's bedroom the windows, with their little flower pots in line, are plainly visible. The Superintendent and his family live in the roof house.

Which reminds one of a curious thing that has happened to George Washington's leg. That is, the leg of the bronze statue of the Father of His Country standing in front of the Treasury Building. Many a passerby has wondered what has made one of Washington's legs so smooth and shiny while the rest of his body is the dull gray-green it ought to be.

Investigation showed that the janitors' and Superintendents' children were accustomed on Sundays, when the financial district is nearly deserted, to straddle the leg and slide down it to the foot. The statue is not hard to get at—it's only a question of walking up the Treasury steps and clambering on the pedestal. The youngsters of Wall, William, and Broad Streets and Exchange Place thought it was great fun to polish up the leg by this toboggan game. So the Father of His Country amuses the children of his country in quite a fatherly manner and his leg shines like silver.

It is on a Sunday that these skyscraper families are in their fullest glory. The bankers, the messenger boys, the clerks, are all far away, and the streets, crowded in the week, are open for the parades and the games of the sky dwellers. Policemen, stern and unrelenting on Monday or Tuesday, shut their eyes now and let the youngsters play baseball, or "tip-the-cat," or anything else they want, in front of the New York Stock Exchange.

And the roof parties that the older folk have are something gorgeous. The top of a big office building offers facilities that no residence of moderate size could afford. Friends from Harlem, Brooklyn, and other far places gather together on special occasions in the warm weather for the delights of a night up under the stars. All the time the man in the street would never know a living soul was about the big building, for the sounds of revelry melt away before they reach the pavement.

THE MAN IN THE STREET

THE shortest speech Mr. Roosevelt ever made, according to an uptown crockery manufacturer, was when he was Governor of this State. He was reviewing the sound-money parade on a day wet and chilly. A delegation of crockery men swung by, and a badge of the division and a small gold cup were presented to the Governor. Mr. Roosevelt accepted the cup with a low bow, and asked:

"Has anybody a flask?"

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE says that during a severe drought that once afflicted the State of Kansas a visitor from the East was one day driving across country in the direction of Topeka when he met a farmer hauling a wagon load of water. A desultory conversation ensued between the two.

"Where do you get your water?" asked the man from the East.

"'Bout seven miles up the road from here," was the reply.

"What!" exclaimed the stranger, "do you mean to say that you haul water seven miles for your family and stock."

"I shore do," answered the Kansan.

"But, man," expostulated the Easterner, "why in the name of common sense don't you dig a well?"

"Stranger," replied the farmer, with a grin, "out this direction it's jest as far one way as the other."

RICHARD BARRY, the adventurous young California correspondent with the Japanese forces, tells some amusing stories of the trials and tribulations of his colleagues at the seat of war.

It appears that, shortly after the beginning of hostilities, there were a number of American correspondents in a portion of Northern Manchuria still held by the Russians who were very anxious to secure from the St. Petersburg Government permission to accompany the troops southward. This permission was denied, and notification given the correspondents in a body.

"We think you are making a great mistake," said one of the correspondents to the officer who had read his Government's telegram.

"Possibly," returned the polite Russian, with a smile; "but I don't see how it can be helped."

At this juncture a brash young man from Chicago interjected with:

"It seems to me that your Government is taking a big chance with us. Suppose we should collectively and individually advise our publications to refrain from advertising your old war?"

SENATOR DEPEW had to deny himself the pleasure of being present at a recent dinner where he was an invited guest, and so he missed a joke at his expense, which he enjoyed as much as any one, however, when it was told to him several days later. Bishop Potter was the perpetrator. Senator Depew's regrets had just been read.

"I need not tell you," said the Bishop, "how we will miss the Senator, he who has for so many years charmed us with the humor of his eloquence and the logic of his anecdotes."

SIR HENRY IRVING has in his possession a photograph taken many years ago, in which he is the centre of a small group of people, which he says nothing would make him part with. The occasion on which the photograph was taken was the landing of Sir Henry Irving and some of the members of his company from an Atlantic liner, and a snap-shot artist who was there took a picture of the group just before they left the vessel.

The weather was cold and raw, and just as the camera was about to snap Sir Henry started to sneeze. The photograph represented him, well in the foreground of the group, with his face drawn and contorted, in the very act of sneezing.

In showing the photograph to some friends one day Sir Henry remarked:

"I prize that photograph more than any I ever had in which I appear, because it represents me in an entirely unconventional light."

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM, although an Englishman, tells this story at the expense of one of his countrymen in London. The latter, a young society man, was attending a West End social function which was proving extremely boresome to him. Disconsolately wandering into the conservatory, he had met a gentleman who, although a stranger, impressed him as being a fellow-sufferer.

"Dispensing with an introduction," said the actor-raconteur, "he frankly delivered his opinion of the evening, and hopefully suggested that they adjourn to the club."

"Well—ah—I would, you know," rejoined the other, "but—ah—I'm the host here, don't you know."

GEN. FRANK GREENE'S little niece tells this school story:

At a certain school, in the "jography" class, the teacher had been at great pains to define and impress upon the children the meaning of the "equator," defined as "an imaginary line which surrounds the world." When by repetition they were thought to have it letter perfect, she complimented them and told them to repeat it at home, and surprise their parents with the extent of their knowledge.

"Uncle, have you ever seen a quator?" said one little tot.

"No, my dear, I don't even know what it is."

"Why, it's a menagerie lion that runs round the world."

SENATOR PETTUS, the veteran statesman from Alabama, is an inimitable teller of darky stories, and among his collection perhaps the following is of the best:

"One day a farmer in my State while in his barn observed his dog rush out and begin to bark furiously at a darky from a neighboring farm. The colored man at once took to his heels, although he had come to the barn on a matter of more or less importance. Some time later he returned, and, making sure that no dog was about, entered the barn.

"'Why were you so frightened, Sam?' asked the farmer. 'Dan wouldn't have harmed you. Remember, the old saying, "Barking dogs never bite."'

"'Dat's all right, Sah,' responded the darky with much gravity, 'you know dat an' I know dat; but when do either of us know when dat confounded dog is agoin' to stop barkin'?'"

THERE is a Representative in Congress from the West whose special pride it is to recount the quaint observations of his nine-year-old daughter.

Not long ago, according to the proud father, little Ethel came to him one afternoon and informed him that she had just seen the President's wife walking with a little girl.

"And, papa," said Ethel, "she isn't anything like as old as grandma!"

"Why, my dear!" exclaimed the Congressman, "of course she isn't! Mrs. Roosevelt is a young woman! How in the world did you get any other idea?"

"Well, papa," replied the youngster, "you yourself once told me that she was the first lady in the land!"

A WELL-KNOWN physician of Brooklyn tells an amusing incident that happened at his Summer home in New Hampshire when his daughter, who is now a leading society belle, was a very small girl. Her grandmother asked her to bring an egg from the hennery. After several minutes the little girl returned with her apron full of eggs. While yet a distance away the grandmother asked, "Well, did you break any eggs on the way?"

"No, grandma," was the prompt reply; "but the shells came off a few."

A YOUNG actor who recently appeared with some success in his own dramatization of the Book of David was chatting with some friends about his future plans.

"Why," he said with a swelling of the chest, "these people around here don't know what I can do. I've got other things in the Bible that I am going to dramatize by and by, and then they'll see."

NOT long before the President's Western trip, and during the visit he paid Philadelphia to speak at that of honor at a very elaborate luncheon served by the First City Troop, the "crack" organization of the Quaker town. While the feast was in progress Winston, the Troop's black doorman, went down to the cloak room, and said to the colored youth temporarily in charge of hats and umbrellas.

"Say, kid, jes' take a peep in de pockets of Mistar President's coat. See ef he ain't got a flask handy."

"Kid" turned a shade less dark, but curiosity had him in its grip, and he looked into the Rooseveltian pockets.

"Gosh," he whispered in stagy tones, "der ain't no flask hyar—but der's a gun."

LEE FAIRCHILD tells of a bit of unconscious humor displayed by a Chairman of a political rally in the recent campaign. Fairchild was to be the last speaker. The hour was late, Congressman Dalzell and Senator Kean having spoken. Consequently, as the Chairman rose, he said:

"It is time you were all on the way home—so I will introduce Mr. Fairchild."

BLISS CARMAN tells this story as a reminiscence of his experience as a Chicago editor some years ago. He had received and printed some verses from a certain poetess of passion, beginning thus:

The joy in me rises, rises,
And will not be suppressed,
The joy in me rises, rises,
Into my throat and breast.

Relating the incident recently to some friends in his studio the poet-editor delivered the following letter as being the sequel to the publication of the verses:

"Dear Sir: I have just read the Spring song which appears in your May number. I do not wish to be inquisitive, but, being a young housekeeper and interested in baking powder brand the author uses, as it must possess remarkable rising qualities. An answer would much oblige a seeker after the best in all forms."

SIMEON FORD says that he once had in his employ as hotel clerk a young man from Boston whose extreme fondness for precision of speech led to his discharge. He was too exact for the average patron; in fact, he speedily became so unpopular that his dismissal was imperative.

One evening, says Mr. Ford, a weary and travel-stained man ambled up to the desk where the Hubbite was presiding and said:

"Give me a room and a bath."

"Sorry, Sir," responded the Bostonian, "but I can't give you both; you'll have to bathe yourself."

ON a recent visit to Alexandria, Va., the late Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was approached by an old darky who respectfully introduced himself as a Confederate veteran. To test the accuracy of the old fellow's statement Gen. Lee put to him several searching questions, all of which the negro answered promptly and truthfully. Then the General asked his new friend where he had seen the best time in the old days.

"At Chickamauga, Sah," glibly replied the darky, "'cause I run jest as soon as de firin' begin."

"But in such a hot battle as Chickamauga," asked the General, "how did you know which way to run?"

"Oh, Gin'ral," answered the old man, "dat's easy to tell. I runs to de [illegible]

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Large Increase in Loans Causes Shrinkage of Over $2,000,000 in Surplus Reserve.

The bank statement yesterday showed a large increase in loans along with a small decrease in cash, the two together resulting in a falling off of $2,016,850 in the surplus reserve. The increased activity in the stock market toward the end of the week may account in part for the addition to the loan account, but it is more likely that syndicate operations were the main factor in determining this item of the statement. The deposits increased to a less extent than the loans, being $6,321,800 greater than the previous week, while the loans were augmented by $7,595,000. The decrease in cash had been expected in view of the return during the past week of a portion of the Government deposits held by the National banks. The surplus reserve now amounts to $16,712,575 as compared with $12,827,250 at the corresponding date in 1904.

The items of last week's bank statement, the changes from the preceding week, and the statement of May 14, 1904, follow:

EMPEROR WILLIAM CABLES GREETINGS

Sends Message to Yacht Owners Wishing Them Speedy Passage.

FINAL DETAILS SETTLED

Every One Ready and Anxious for the Start To-morrow—Hildegarde Is Cruising Outside.

Emperor William has cabled his felicitations to the yachtsmen contesting for the Kaiser's Cup in the international transatlantic race, which starts to-morrow. Learning that they would convene for final settlement of all questions pertaining to the event after the dinner tendered by Allison V. Armour to yacht owners and committee on Saturday night, he sent the following message to the host:

Allison V. Armour, Delmonico's, New York: Best greetings to yacht owners and starting committee, hoping race will be a success, and wishing good and speedy cruises.
WILHELM I. R.

The cablegram was received while the guests were at dinner, before they had begun the discussion of arrangements. It was read and received with general satisfaction, and put every one in the best mood to enter the contest in the wholesome spirit in which it was conceived.

Few changes were found necessary in the rules for its conduct. It was decided to start the race at the appointed hour, 2:30 P. M., to-morrow, unless weather conditions make it positively dangerous for eleven yachts to manoeuvre about the lightship. Only the densest fog can prevent the boats getting away on schedule. Should a postponement be necessary, instructions will be issued to the yachts at the starting line.

Word was received from the other side that the German cruiser Phell would be anchored off the Lizard Light, a mile away on the line. She will take her station there on May 26 and remain until the first four boats have finished. Her purpose is to afford a guide to the boats to find the Light in foggy weather to facilitate the establishment of communication with it in order to signal their arrival.

This completes each detail and covers every foreseen contingency. All that now remains is for the starting gun to sound and wind and wave to decide the issue.

The inclement conditions yesterday interfered with the plans of most of the entries to have a trial spin to tune and stretch sails. All lay at anchor in the positions taken Saturday night, restive and uncomfortable in their idleness. It is safe to say that early this morning most of them will be under sail, though they can get little real work in because of delays incidental to the final shipping of fresh supplies. To-night all of the contestants, with two exceptions, will be at the line, anchored beside the Atlantic at Sandy Hook, awaiting tow to take them out for the gun.

The only absentee is the Hildegarde. The mystery which has surrounded her movements for the last week continues to enshroud her. Mr. Armour heard from Edward R. Coleman, her owner, yesterday. In his letter, dated from New London, he said he was leaving there Saturday morning to go out to sea. He anticipated cruising about outside all day Saturday and Sunday and would not return until to-night, when he would seek an anchorage at the Hook. If he was looking for a further try out yesterday, he probably found conditions decidedly unsatisfactory.

The Atlantic was alone at the Hook. Her owner and his guests were not aboard her. Capt. Barr walked the deck in no amiable mood, apparently. He has been spoiling for a chance to take the boat out under full sail for ten days past, and doubtless was none too well pleased that the weather had deprived him of the chance. He is in the peculiar position of starting in an international race without an opportunity to familiarize himself with his ship, and will be handicapped by the fact decidedly. She has been grooming consistently ever since he has had her, and, in one sense, therefore, is probably in better shape than any of her competitors. Capt. Barr said yesterday that he expected to go out early this morning.

At Tompkinsville, the Thistle, the Hamburg, and the Fleur de Lys lay. Mrs. Tod was aboard the former with the Commodore, spending a last quiet Sunday. Everything was shipshape aboard her, and nothing seemed to have been overlooked. It is really remarkable how completely equipped the schooner is. It is certain that no chance has been allowed to slip by in fitting her, and she will carry every inch of canvas that can be crowded on her. A novelty in her rig is a double raffee on her foremast. The Commodore had it set yesterday stretching. It made much the appearance of a huge kite. The few visitors who came to wish him godspeed he welcomed with his accustomed cordiality, showing them about ship with no little pride.

On the Hamburg, to the starboard of the Thistle, were her managing owner, Herr Tietjins and his son, a Lieutenant in the German Navy. Capt. Peters was on deck, but most of her crew of thirty men were on shore leave. The Captain said he had not planned to go out and was not disappointed by the fog. He thought he might take a spin in her this morning. She will go to Sandy Hook to-night. Some interest was manifested in her shortened rig. At least four feet has been taken off her bowsprit and nearly as much off her main boom. This reduces her sail area materially from what it was in her races on the other side. Still every one apears to regard her as most dangerous.

On the Fleur de Lys there was no activity. Beside the Hamburg she appears even more diminutive than she is in fact. She's a seaworthy bit of a craft, nevertheless, and, with a driver like Capt. Bohlin aboard, will make a good record for herself in light weather. The Captain was ashore all day. So was Dr. Stimson. Only six of her ten-man crew were aboard. It is expected that she will go down the bay this morning, and after a short spin will anchor at the Hook.

The Endymion lay off Bay Ridge, hav-

OKLAHOMA TAKES TO CAVES.

Ordinances Call for 5,000 Tornado Cellars—Four More Victims.

LAWTON, Oklahoma, May 14.—As a result of the tornado at Snyder, inhabitants of the "new country" in Oklahoma are digging 5,000 tornado cellars. City officers and town boards are urging the construction of such caves, and some towns have passed ordinances to require the digging of caves. At Hinton, Oklahoma, the following official public notice has been published:

"On nights when clouds look at all dangerous, sentry will be stationed in the bell tower, provided with a repeating shotgun. If there is apparent danger, he will ring the bell and fire a number of shots in quick succession. Also any person who sees a storm coming when the sentry is not stationed, will be expected to fire a gun."

ARDMORE, Indian Territory, May 14.—In a storm which swept over Sulphur, Ada, and other points in the Chickasaw Nation to-day a number of houses were destroyed. The body of John Layton was recovered from the ruins of the Harper Hotel at Sulphur. Near Ada, George Bolen was killed.

SNYDER, Oklahoma, May 14.—Four more persons injured in Wednesday night's tornado died to-day. This brings the total number of known dead to 117. A number of persons are missing and several of the injured are in a critical condition.

Relief is coming from many quarters. There was no rain to-day, and conditions are more cheerful.

A pocketbook containing $32 was picked up to-day nineteen miles from Snyder. It belonged to Mrs. James, who was killed, and it had been carried twenty-three miles in the storm.

A heavy wind and rainstorm visited Olustee, Oklahoma, yesterday. An elevator was blown across the railroad track and a few small buildings were damaged, but nobody was injured.

POSED AS EMPRESS CARLOTTA

Woman Got $40,000 from Credulous Italians in Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., May 14.—A woman who posed as Carlotta, widow of Maximilian, once Emperor of Mexico and brother of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, has left this city after securing about $40,000 from members of the Italian colony on the pretense that she was a rightful claimant to the Austrian throne.

She is being sought by over 100 residents of the North End district, who for almost eight years have been paying money to enable her, as they supposed, to gain possession of the Austrian throne. She promised that those who helped her would be made Ministers and nobles and receive vast estates. One woman, the wife of a prominent Italian, gave her $3,000 on the strength of the promise that she should be made a Duchess. An organ grinder contributed a few hundred dollars, all his savings, on the understanding that he should be made Court Musician.

Many Italian residents secretly visited her at her headquarters, a handsomely furnished room in a dwelling house on the corner of two South End streets, where the pseudo-queen sat on an imposing throne, resplendent in red cloth and tinsel, and graciously allowed them to kiss her hand on the occasions on which they brought her tributes of money. At each side of the throne stood fake courtiers and a bodyguard who clanked stage arms.

Her aids in this enterprise, it is said, were a number of young men of various nationalities, among whom one represented himself to be the Crown Prince Rudolph, eldest son of Emperor Francis Joseph, who in January, 1889, shot himself."

Carlotta is the name generally applied to Marie Charlotte Amelie, daughter of Leopold I., King of Belgium. She married Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico and brother of Francis Joseph of Austria. In 1864 Maximilian sent her to France to seek aid from Napoleon III., but her errand had no results. After the execution of Maximilian she lost her reason and has been hopelessly insane ever since. She is guarded in the Château de Bouchoute, near Brussels.

TRAPPED ELEVATED ROWDIES.

Sixteen Boys Arrested on a Third Avenue Train.

Sixteen boys were arrested last evening on a south-bound Third Avenue elevated train, charged with disorderly conduct. At the Bronx Park Station, the northern terminal of the road, a score of them boarded the train and began to throw baseball gloves about the cars, and to make remarks to women and girls. Three Interborough detectives rounded up some of them as the train approached the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street Station, and forced them into the rear car of the train after the other passengers had been asked to go into the forward cars.

At that station many more boys boarded the train, who had been playing ball in Crotona Park. They also began to make things lively, and some of them were forced into the rear car. At One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Street, when the train was running at high speed, one of the offenders pulled the emergency brake cord. The train came to a stop with a jolt that threw many of the passengers out of their seats, and almost hurled the motorman through the front window of his inclosure.

After an investigation the train proceeded, but at One Hundred and Thirty-third Street ten men from the Alexander Avenue Station, sent there by Capt. Ward for just such an emergency, took charge of the boys and took them to the police station.

WOMEN HAD RIDE FREE.

Refused to Pay Cabman $5—Civil Case, Said Sergeant.

A woman attired in a Nile green dress, who said she was Mrs. Wallace of 577 West Seventy-seventh Street, was driven to the West Forty-seventh Street Station last night in a cab, in charge of William McKnight, of 544 Third Avenue. The cabman explained that he had driven the woman from the Fifth Avenue Hotel through Central Park and to Forty-seventh Street and Broadway, where a stop was made, and where the driver said the woman agreed to pay him $3.50 and give him 50 cents for himself. The cabman said he was entitled to $5 for the use of his cab and horse for nearly two hours. The woman refused to pay this. Then she asked to be driven to the station house.

Sergt. McCann said it was a civil matter and suggested that the two exchange names and addresses and settle the matter amicably. The woman said:

"I've been skinned every time I have had a cab for the past month, and I'm tired of it."

Then she left the police station without paying anything. She said she was going home. There is no number on the house in West Seventy-seventh Street.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES UP HIS CLASS UNTIL FALL

Under Physician's Care, He Tells Sunday School.

MANY GREET HIM AT CHURCH

Says He Broke Promise to Doctor in Coming—Gen. Howard Discovers One of His Veterans in Class.

Though John D. Rockefeller, Jr., appeared at the meeting of his Bible class yesterday morning for the first time since his departure for Europe five months ago, he will not be with it again until next Fall.

"I returned to the United States," he told the class, "only under the most explicit promise that I would not attend to any duties, whether agreeable or disagreeable. I regret to say that my return means only a continuation of the treatment which I underwent while abroad. But I broke my promise to come here this morning—I had to meet the class.

"This is the happiest Sabbath I have had in five months. I have missed you all very much. It is much easier for you to get along without me than for me to get along without you. You are many men missing only one, but I am one missing many.

"I could not help coming here this morning, for I had to see you, but I will not be able to be with you any more until next Fall. Then, if we are spared and God is willing, we will take up our work together again. I have kept up with what you have been doing, and you have gotten on very well without your leader. The relationship with the members of this class is very valuable to me, and whatever that relationship is I want to keep it up."

When the members of the class began to arrive about 9:45 o'clock, Mr. Rockefeller was standing at the door waiting to shake each one of them by the hand. He apparently was very much delighted to see familiar faces and to the new members he gave most hearty welcome. If possible, the young men were more pleased than he. It was just after the class convened that Mr. Rockefeller spoke, and after he finished he stepped off the platform and sat down near the end of the room. A few minutes later, while the services were still in progress, he withdrew through the rear door and was not seen again. The increase in attendance, due to the expectation of seeing Mr. Rockefeller, was very noticeable. Though it was a dismal morning, with the rain falling steadily, nearly every seat was filled.

The speaker of the day was Gen. O. O. Howard. He talked about half an hour, and when he stopped a curious incident occurred. A gray-haired man rose from his seat before the collection baskets started around and announced that he wanted to say something.

"The General doesn't know me," he said, "but I know him, and I want to tell something that happened over forty years ago. It was just after the battle of Fredericksburg. I was in Gen. Howard's division, and one Sunday it was announced that he was coming to preach to our Pennsylvania regiment. Well, you can imagine that not many of the boys turned out—it was a rainy day just like this.

"But one other soldier and myself went. Gen. Howard came up on his horse, halted in a little gulch, and there he talked to us two men. I was not a Christian then, but that event had a great influence upon me—an influence that has lasted ever since. I will never forget that picture, the General on his horse talking to us two men. I have often wished I had had a kodak then." Then the veteran added laughingly: "I guess I could get a good bit of money from the General for the photograph if I had it."

Gen. Howard was visibly pleased at the reminiscence, and he walked back and shook hands with the veteran. The old soldier is R. R. Johnson, and it is said that he frequently goes to the Rockefeller class meetings.

The young men present were very much amused by an anecdote Gen. Howard told of the conversion of his younger brother.

"My brother," said the one-armed officer, "was inclined to be an unbeliever—to take nourishment from the straw of unbelief. I call it a straw, because I think there's so little to it. He didn't believe in anything much. That was when he was a young fellow, and he happened to meet a girl. One day this girl decided that she wanted to be a Christian; she went to a minister and asked how she should go about it. He told her.

"A day or two after this she wrote a letter to my brother. About four days later he wrote me a letter in which he urged me most vehemently to become converted. He said he had found the Lord. He wrote to me again and again on the same subject and he's never been an unbeliever since."

GREAT FORT AT CAPE HENRY.

An Additional Safeguard for Washington Decided Upon.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., May 14.—The army engineer's office is advised that the War Department will take immediate steps looking to the acquisition by purchase or condemnation of land at Cape Henry, where will be erected one of the most formidable forts on the Atlantic Coast. It will guard the Virginia capes, the National Capital, Baltimore, the Norfolk Navy Yard, Richmond, and the great ship yards at Newport News.

It is learned that a board has been appointed, with Secretary of War Taft as Chairman, to secure the site.

The channel at the Virginia Capes runs but four miles from the Cape Henry shore, and it is the belief of army officers that with modern guns mounted behind solid concrete at Cape Henry and with the channel mined no hostile fleet could force the entrance to the Virginia Capes, which would be necessary in order to reach Washington.

Although Fort Monroe is supposed to be impregnable, it is pointed out that a hostile fleet, once inside the Virginia Capes, could keep far off enough to get up the bay to Washington.

During the coming exercises between the army and navy Fort Monroe will attempt to keep out of the bay a supposed hostile fleet.

WRECKERS DITCH A TRAIN.

Rails Loosened on the Santa Fe—Six Passengers Hurt—Two May Die.

EMPORIA, Kan., May 14.—A passenger train on the Santa Fé Railroad was ditched by train wreckers a mile east of Emporia this morning and six passengers were injured. Two of these probably will die.

The train is known as No. 17, and was in charge of Conductor E. A. Taylor. The scene of the wreck is the identical spot where three other attempts to wreck Santa Fé trains have been made within the last four months. A brick schoolhouse stands close by the spot where the spikes and fishplates of two rails on the inside of a curve had been removed. Officials of the railroad believe that some persons with a fancied grudge against the road are attempting to get revenge in this fashion.

When the engine struck the loose rails it glided over them safely, but the mail coach, just behind the coal tender, left the track and was dragged a hundred yards along the embankment before the train was stopped. The next five cars, two express and baggage cars, a smoker, and two day coaches, headed into the ditch, broke loose from the mail car, ploughed through the ground across the right of way fence, and piled up in a zigzag line. The last two cars in the train were Pullmans. The rear one remained entirely on the track and the forward one had only one truck off.

All the passengers were asleep when the wreck occurred. The night was pitch dark, and the passengers in the overturned coaches were panic-stricken for a time, but all were got out.

DROWNED WITH RESCUE NEAR.

Longshoreman's Brave Attempt to Save Man Who Fell Off Pier.

In sight of hundreds of persons on the recreation pier at the foot of North Second Street, Williamsburg, and in view of the passengers on the ferryboat Ohio of the Twenty-third Street line, an unknown man was drowned in the East River yesterday afternoon, with rescue only a few feet away.

The man, who was about twenty-one years old and wore a bicycle cap, appeared at the recreation pier at 1 o'clock, and, taking a seat on the stringpiece at the end of the dock, began to fish. Suddenly he lost his balance and fell into the water. The tide at the time was running swiftly up the river, and he was carried rapidly away from the pier. Spectators on the pier and the ferryboat raised the alarm.

Michael O'Rourke, a longshoreman who lives at 205 North Fourth Street, was in Kent Avenue, near the pier, at the time, and, hearing the cry, he ran to the end of the dock and jumped into the water. Cheered on by the people on the pier and boat, he went after the struggling man with long, powerful strokes, but when his rescuer was only a few feet away the man went down for the last time. O'Rourke dived twice beneath the surface, but finally was compelled to give up.

The tide was against O'Rourke, and he had a long struggle in getting back to safety, when he was again heartily cheered. The police of the Bedford Avenue Station were notified of the drowning, and patrolman went out in boats. They did not find the body.

BROTHERS OVERCOME BY GAS.

Accident in Hardenbrook Home at Jamaica Nearly Fatal.

Dr. Isaac Hardenbrook and his brother, Philip Hardenbrook, members of a prominent family in Jamaica, were overcome by gas in their home at 300 Fulton Street, Jamaica, yesterday morning and very narrowly missed dying. It was an accident, Dr. Hardenbrook says, and he doesn't know how it happened.

A third brother, David, who lives in Hardenbrook Avenue, was on his way to church at about 10 o'clock when he saw a crowd running in the direction of his brothers' home. Not knowing what the trouble was, he followed. He found the two men unconscious in their bedrooms and immediately sent for an ambulance. Dr. Rorke arrived from St. Mary's Hospital.

This is Dr. Hardenbrook's account of what happened, as far as he knows it:

"I woke up about 10 o'clock with a smell of gas in my nostrils. It had already overcome me so that I was not capable of getting up and turning the flow of gas off, though my faculties were alert enough to tell me I was in danger. I got out of bed and started toward the open window. As I was found on the floor, I know I was completely overcome before I could get to the window, and fell.

"That's all I know of what happened. My brother and myself went to bed about midnight, and I suppose we must have turned on the gas accidentally after turning it off."

Patrick Shaughnessy, who works in the Hardenbrook home, smelled the gas, else the two victims would certainly have perished. He gave the alarm, which brought the police and the crowd. Dr. Hardenbrook is out of danger. His brother's condition was still serious last night.

YACHT CAPSIZES, TWO LOST.

Girl Swept from Upturned Craft in Lake Michigan.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Matilda Buettgen, twenty-one years old, and Charles Henderson, seventeen years old, were drowned in Lake Michigan to-day off Lincoln Park by the capsizing of a yacht in which they were sailing. Edward Bodmer and Daniel Moheiser, who were also in the yacht, were rescued by a life saving crew.

The capsizing of the yacht was caused by the main sheets becoming entangled with the tiller. The boat became unmanageable, and all four occupants were thrown into the water. Bodmer, who is a good swimmer, got Miss Buettgen back to the yacht, which was lying upside down, and placed her on the upturned boat. He then brought Mohiser safely to the yacht, but in the meantime a wave had washed Miss Buettgen away, and she was drowned. Henderson, who was unable to swim, sank immediately after the boat capsized.

Continental Limited's Escape.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., May 14.—The Continental Limited, east bound, on the New York Central, struck a mass of telephone cable which had fallen on the track from a freight train to-day. The locomotive was thrown from the track, but most of the cars remained on the rails.

WOOD SLAYS 300 MOROS; 7 AMERICANS KILLED

Our Forces Lose 16 Wounded in Fight with Pala.

OUTLAW'S MEN SURROUNDED

Hemmed, with Their Leader, in a Swamp—Fighting Has Lasted for a Fortnight.

MANILA, May 15.—Fierce fighting the last two weeks on the Island of Jolo between troops under the personal command of Gen. Leonard Wood and an outlaw Moro chief, Pala, with 600 followers, has resulted in the killing of 300 Moros and the loss of seven killed and sixteen wounded by Gen. Wood's force.

Pala and his remaining followers are surrounded in a swamp.

Pala and his remaining followers, in accordance with More tradition, prefer death to capture. Gen. Wood's operations were conducted with the Fourteenth Cavalry, the Seventeenth, Twenty-second, and Twenty-third Infantry and constabulary scouts.

Pala was a noted slave trader and warrior when the Americans occupied the islands. Later he escaped with his followers to the Island of Pulasokar, near Borneo. One of Pala's leaders deserted and took refuge in the British settlement at La Had. Pala, discovering his whereabouts, landed with a following and demanded of the British magistrate that he turn the deserter over to him. The demand was not complied with, and Pala ordered a massacre.

Twenty-five persons, including several Britons, were killed. Pala escaped to the Island of Jolo, and organized the present uprising.

It is reported that the Borneo authorities requested Gen. Wood to apprehend Pala, dead or alive, and turn him over to them.

CORONER'S SON IN BELLEVUE.

Edward Jackson, Musician, Placed in Psychopathic Ward.

Edward Jackson, a son of Coroner Moses T. Jackson, was removed from his home at 125 East Eighty-fourth Street yesterday to Bellevue Hospital and placed in the psychopathic ward for examination as to his sanity.

His father said at his home last night that the patient had been acting queerly for the past three weeks, and on account of other illness in the family he concluded it would be better for him to be confined until he could be sent to a sanitarium.

He said that his son had been educated for a musical career both in this country and abroad, and had been doing much composing for the last year. He said he believed this had had an injurious effect upon his son's mind.

Asked whether his own troubles had anything to do with his son's condition, the Coroner said:

"How can I tell? I have had trouble enough."

GIRL STUDENT MISSING.

Boston University Has Searched for Miss Transcott Since Jan. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—Although Miss Frances I. Transcott of Shelburne Falls, a member of the sophomore class of Boston University, has been missing since New Year's Day, the authorities of the institution and her friends have only now made the fact public.

All these months they have been conducting a thorough search, extending even to Cuba, where Miss Transcott, it was thought, might have gone as a teacher.

On the day of her disappearance she drew her money from the bank and packed all her belongings in a suit case, which she took with her. The belief of her friends is that she resolved to earn her own support and is now teaching somewhere.

OUTLAW ESCAPES MELINITE.

But French Crowd Catches Him, and Handles Him Severely.

PARIS, May 14.—The siege of the house in the village of Usseau which an outlaw, heavily armed, held in defiance of the authorities, was brought to a conclusion this morning when a Lieutenant of Engineers placed a charge of melinite against the wall. The soldiers, forming a cordon, withdrew to a safe distance, the bugles were sounded, and the melinite was exploded, destroying half the building. Then the gendarmes rushed in, only to find that the outlaw had escaped.

In the meantime a commotion among the enormous crowd assembled about the house had been occasioned by the outlaw's appearance among them. The people seized and tried to lynch him, but the gendarmes with difficulty rescued him and conveyed him to a hospital. He is in a serious condition.

The prisoner was formerly a gamekeeper, and is charged with shooting and wounding his late employer. During the siege he wounded four gendarmes.

HARVARD STOPS NOTES.

Printed Aids to Idlers in College No Longer Will Be Allowed.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—Harvard's Faculty, anxious to stiffen the college course and make it impossible for students to loaf through years of college and then get a degree, has informed a printed-notes dealer that he must give up his business after he has fulfilled existing contracts. These notes have furnished in condensed form the subject matter treated in lectures and outside reading.

Fully one-tenth of all students in Harvard and 50 per cent. of freshmen are at present on probation.

BARON ROSEN IS FOR PEACE.

Thought That He Will Assist President Roosevelt to End the War.

LONDON, Monday, May 15.—The Daily Telegraph's Tokio correspondent says:

"Baron Rosen, formerly Russian Minister to Japan, who has been appointed to succeed Count Cassini as Ambassador to the United States, openly belongs to the Peace Party, and will assist President Roosevelt in his efforts for peace.

"The Emperor, who is personally favorable to peace, has consulted Baron Rosen's views."

Camden-Atlantic City Train Makes a Record.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 14.—A special train on the Reading Railroad with the officials of European roads who are attending the International Railroad Conference, made the run from Camden to Atlantic City to-day, a distance of fifty-four miles, in forty-three minutes, breaking the record.

Theodore Laurne of the Chemin de Fer d'Orleans, France; A. C. Ellis of the Metropolitan of London, McDougall Drummond of the London and Southwestern, and A. C. Orworth of the London Board of Trade were in the party with the Reading officials.

LAWSON READY TO BID.

Will Offer Millions for Philadelphia Gas Works, It Is Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—It was stated to-night that Thomas W. Lawson would be one of the bidders who will appear before the Finance Committee to-morrow with a proposition for the gas works. It was declared that Lawson not only had his certified check ready, but was willing to back up his offer with the deposit of $10,000,000 in Philadelphia banks.

Lawson's representatives have gone over the entire situation and they have, it is said, had the legal assistance of Col. Silas W. Petitt of the law firm of Read & Petitt. Col. Petitt was one of the prominent figures before the Council when the original gas lease was made in 1897. A local financier who had been sounded on the matter said that a week ago Lawson had offered to join a local syndicate.

CROCKER PAYS $3,000 DUTY.

Customs Assessment on His "Little Piece of Tapestry."

When George Crocker of San Francisco landed from the White Star liner Cedric, in yesterday morning from Liverpool, the customs officer who took his declaration asked him if he had anything dutiable.

"Yes, I have a little piece of tapestry," answered Mr. Crocker.

The tapestry proved to be a Louis XIV. of exquisite design, twelve by twenty-eight feet. Mr. Crocker said it cost him $8,000. The duty paid was about $3,000.

CHEVALIER DE KNYFF HURT.

His Auto and Another Crash in Race at Claremont-Ferrand.

PARIS, May 14.—Chevalier de Knyff, during a trial over the International Automobile Cup course at Claremont-Ferrand, while his machine was traveling seventy-five miles an hour, collided with another vehicle and the automobile was overturned.

Chevalier de Knyff had several ribs broken and was injured about the head. His companion also was injured.

BOWEN IN WASHINGTON.

President To-day May Ask for His Statement on Loomis Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Herbert W. Bowen, recently American Minister to Venezuela, accompanied by Mrs. Bowen, reached Washington to-day from New York and left his card at the White House. It is expected that the President will send for Mr. Bowen to-morrow and receive from him a statement in connection with the charges brought against Mr. Loomis, the Acting Secretary of State.

Mr. Bowen refuses to discuss the matter in any way beyond saying that his mission to Washington is in obedience to instructions received some time ago, and that he awaits the pleasure of the President for a hearing.

KILLS GIRL, RIVAL, AND SELF.

Night Watchman, Jealous of Chorus Girl, Shoots in Street.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, May 14.—Because he was jealous of the attentions of Hall Williamson to Eva Ferguson, a chorus girl, Tom McCall, a night watchman, killed both this afternoon and killed himself a few hours later while on the way to the police station to surrender. Both Williamson and McCall were members of families at one time prominent in this section.

Miss Ferguson and Williamson were standing in Calhoun Street when McCall appeared and started shooting. His first two shots hit the woman. He shot Williamson several times, and the victim died in a hospital.

McCall disappeared and the police were unable to find him. At 8:45 o'clock tonight he met his brother, embraced the boy, and, pulling his revolver, shot himself.

DASHED OVER ICE FLOES.

Capt. Polte and Party Reached Egg Island and Were Rescued.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, May 14.—While Capt. Otto Polte and his party with two native mail carriers were on their way from Unaliket on Bering Sea to St. Michael last month they were caught on a moving floe in Bering Sea and spent twelve days there and on Egg Island, which they reached after a daring dash over grinding blocks of floating ice.

The treacherous ice field broke loose suddenly and began moving northward, making it impossible for the party to reach the mainland. Doyle, another mail carrier, had reached the mainland, and, observing their predicament, hurried to St. Michael and organized a relief party, which made three successive attempts to reach Egg Island, which Boyle felt certain Polte and party would head for.

The weather made it impossible to reach Egg Island until nine days after the alarm had been given. Meanwhile the castaways after many thrilling experiences had reached Egg Island across moving ice blocks, and were subsisting on dried seal and tom cod which they caught.

CHILDREN'S BONFIRE FATAL.

Mildred Hoyt Dies from Burns in Stamford Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 14.—Mildred E. Hoyt, six years old, daughter of W. W. Hoyt of 58 West Washington Avenue, died from burns at the Stamford Hospital to-night.

The little girl and other children procured matches and built a bonfire yesterday. The bonfire was put out, but Mildred sat on the ground, on which was a live ember. In a few seconds her clothes was on fire.

AUTOBOATS SWAMPED; DUC DECAZES MISSING

Disaster Overtakes the Racers from Algiers to Toulon.

SIX OF SEVEN CREWS SAFE

Duke's Boat and Her Escort, a Destroyer, May Be Lost—Mme. du Gast Rescued.

TOULON, May 14.—The race of autoboats from Algiers to this port has ended in disaster.

Six of the seven boats which took part in the second stage of the run, from Port Mahon, Minorca, to Toulon, were either sunk or disabled, though the crews of all of them escaped.

The fate of the seventh boat, the Quand-Même, on which was the Duc Decazes, is unknown, but it is feared that she has been lost. She was convoyed by the torpedo-boat destroyer Arbalète, and this pedo boat destroyer Arbalète, with a crew of eleven men, and this vessel is also missing.

The cruisers Desaix and Kléber, after a vain search for the Quand-Même and the Arbalète, reached here this evening, being obliged to seek shelter from a terrific hurricane, accompanied by torrential rain.

The crew of the Quand-Même, including the Duc Decazes, consisted of seven men.

The disaster to the autoboats was the result of a storm of frightful intensity. The seven racers left Port Mahon for Toulon at 4 A. M. yesterday. A torpedo boat destroyer accompanied each autoboat, while cruisers followed. The sea was somewhat rough at the start, and soon became worse. The competing boats were unable to withstand the violence of the storm, and requested the warships to tow them.

Shortly afterward the Mercedes G. P. sank, men from the destroyer Hallebarde rescuing her crew.

The cruiser La Hire hoisted the F. I. A. T. and her crew aboard.

The Camille was abandoned, the destroyer Dard saving her crew.

The Heracles II. is adrift, but her crew were taken on board the destroyer Bombacane.

The Malgré-Tout sank and her crew were taken on board the destroyer Carabine.

The Mercedes-Mercedes had to be abandoned, the destroyer Pertuisane saving the crew.

Accounts furnished by officers of destroyers which have arrived here with the crews of the wrecked autoboats show that the storm which overtook the frail craft was of a terrible character, the waves attaining a height of twenty-five feet. It was impossible to keep the flotilla in tow, steel hawsers breaking repeatedly, owing to the sea's fury, and the destroyers themselves being in imminent danger. In several instances they were compelled to cast off tow lines in order to avoid sinking themselves.

Some of the competitors, however, persisted in racing until they were swamped. Sometimes, owing to the mountainous waves, they were lost from their consort's view.

The Desaix and Kléber, though much buffeted by the tempest, kept up constant wireless communication with the convoying destroyers, standing by in order to render assistance.

The condition of the racers' crews bears out the statements regarding their awful experiences. All were thoroughly exhausted and scarcely able to reply to inquiries. They consider themselves fortunate to have escaped with their lives. Many of them had their clothes torn to ribbons, and some are bruised, while a member of the Malgré-Tout's crew had a leg broken.

They relate stories of daring rescues by the warships. When Mme. du Gast's Camille broke down the destroyer Dard, having several times unsuccessfully attempted to approach her, the cruiser Kléber lowered a whaleboat, but, owing to the darkness of the night and the heavy seas, the effort to reach the auto boat failed. The Kléber then approached and threw grapplers, finally succeeding in saving all on board, though Mme. du Gast first fell into the sea.

The rescue of the crew of the Heracles was also an exciting affair. After three men had been taken off she went adrift with the remaining two men. Ten attempts were made to secure them, and, finally, under powerful searchlights, the castaways were taken from the boat just as she disappeared beneath the waves.

When the crews were landed at the Toulon quay by the destroyers a great gathering of sympathisers awaited them, the event having attracted sportsmen of many nations to the finishing point, owing to the international character of the original entries, which included French, German, Italian, British, and American boats. The two last named, however, did not take part in the race, owing to their late arrival.

PARIS, May 14.—A relative of the Duc Decazes is reported to have received late to-night a telephonic message from Toulon stating that the auto boat Quand Meme has been sighted in tow of the destroyer Arbalete. This report, however, has not been confirmed.

The race of autoboats from Algiers for Toulon started on Sunday, May 7, at 6 A. M. The F. I. A. T. was the first to arrive at Port Mahon, reaching that port in fifteen hours.

In the first stage of the race the Quand-Même had as an additional convoy, besides the destroyer Arbalete, the steamship Elleda, and the Duc Decazes was on the steamer.

Soon after the race began, however, all the steamers that had tried to follow it gave up the attempt and returned to Algiers. It appears that the Duke was transferred from the Elleda to the Quand-Même.

A carrier pigeon service was organized on board the Kléber, and thereby Algiers was kept informed regarding the progress of the race.

DUKE MARRIED MISS SINGER.

She Had to Pay for Furniture, Horses, and the Wedding Trip.

Jean Elie Octave Louis Savoie, Duke of [illegible], married Miss Edith Singer, daughter of [illegible], in the Church of [illegible] in Paris this morning.

MAY 15 1905

Isabelle Blanche Singer, daughter of the late Isaac Merritt Singer, the sewing machine manufacturer. In the newspapers at the time of the marriage, April, 1888, were published legal communications as to the amount of money Miss Singer was required to furnish. No attempt was made to conceal the fact that the French nobleman wanted to get a good deal of money with his bride.

The Duc Decazes was born in Paris in 1864. His father was the second Duke of the line. Three children were born to him after his marriage to Miss Singer. The Duchesse died in 1896.

Miss Singer was one of the six children of Isaac Merritt Singer. He died at Torquay, Devonshire, in 1875, and left a fortune of $13,000,000. Three women claimed to be his wives, and there was a lively contest over the estate. The case was thrashed out in the Surrogate's Court of Westchester County, and it ended in a decision that Isabelle Singer's mother was the rightful wife. It was proved that Mr. Singer married her in England in 1864 and lived with her until he died. After his death she married the Duc de Camposelice, and Miss Singer lived with her mother in Paris.

The first authoritative announcement of the Decazes-Singer engagement was in a letter that Miss Singer wrote to a New York lawyer, David Hawley, as follows:

"In view of my contemplated marriage with the Duke Decazes, it will be necessary to obtain some money to pay for my trousseau, jewelry, the purchase of furniture, horses and carriages, expenses of the wedding trip, and incidental expenses connected with the wedding. The cost of the marriage contract alone, with the Government tax, will be $6,000. I therefore wish to ask you to make application to the proper court to be allowed to pay me the sum of $60,000 to meet the above expenses."

Mr. Hawley at that time was the only surviving executor of Isaac Merritt Singer. He secured an order from the Supreme Court to take $60,000 from the funds under his control and send to Miss Singer, by cable if necessary. Apropos of this THE NEW YORK TIMES of March 29, 1888, said:

"To send the money by cable may be imperative, for Miss Singer is to be married on April 28, and, as she has got to furnish a house for the Duke and buy him horses and carriages before the ceremony takes place, she has not much time to spare, not to mention the purchase of her wedding trousseau, which cannot be accomplished in a minute."

At the time of the marriage Miss Singer's personal fortune was estimated by Mr. Hawley at $1,335,675.

DOZEN YOUNG THIEVES BUSY.

Got Some Plunder from Under the Astor House—One Prisoner.

A dozen youthful thieves who were caught in the act of trying to rob a store under the Astor House gave seven policemen of the Church Street Station a lively chase yesterday afternoon. John Barbireri, eleven years old, of 17 Baxter Street, was arrested.

Detective Cohen, who was strolling on Broadway, looked around the corner of Vesey Street and saw some boys poking their hands through openings in the wooden shutters on the doors of T. V. Kraft & Co.'s stationery store under the hotel. They were drawing out postal cards, clips, and rulers, when they spied Cohen and ran.

Down Vesey Street to West they led the chase, and then south on West to Dey. By this time seven bluecoats were in hot pursuit, and the boys separated and ran in all directions. Hundreds trailed along in the wake of the policemen, but none offered to seize a boy.

Cohen caught Barbireri at Dey and Greenwich Streets. Postal cards, clips, a ruler, and an order book were found on him. He was sent to the Children's Society, charged with burglary.

WRECK OF THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Bridal Pair Advertised for Farm Work and Got It—Both Fled.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., May 14.—Pierson Green, a tall, dark young man, with his bride of seventeen, arrived here last week and inserted advertisements in all the local papers saying that they were from New York City and desired opportunity for work on one of the farms in this vicinity, with the view of living "The Simple Life." Capt. William Galbraith, United States Army, retired, who owns an estate at Mooredale, hired the pair.

Green was sent into the field, and the bride's task was to milk twenty cows. At the end of the first day faith in Pastor Wagner was shaken, on the second pride had departed, and on the third they fled. Green's wife formerly lived in Chester, Penn., They were married in Harrisburg a week ago.

BURGLAR KILLS POLICEMAN.

Dying Sergeant Tears Coat from Assailant Trying to Hold Him.

ERIE, Penn., May 14.—Police Sergeant James Higgins was murdered about 2 o'clock this morning while arresting a burglar at the Central School building. He had been sent alone to investigate a report that a suspicious man had been prowling around there.

He told the stranger that he would not hurt him, but the burglar drew a revolver and fired three times, every shot taking effect. Higgins died in an hour. He had torn the overcoat from the man trying to hold him after he had been shot.

CHINESE BOYCOTT US.

Shanghai Merchants Adopt Plan to Fight Exclusion.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Details of a commercial boycott which the Chinese have established reached San Francisco yesterday. A declaration made by the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce will lead to a fight against American manufactures and importations to be maintained until the United States concedes some relief in matters of exclusion.

Absolute freedom of entering and leaving the country is not demanded. Exclusion of coolies is regarded favorably. Thousands of documents have been distributed over the empire and signed on every hand, agreeing not to buy American goods. Not content with its work at home, the Shanghai Chamber wrote merchants of Chinatown here asking their support.

Arrested for Plaguing Bears.

Apparently just to see how ugly they could make the big grizzlies in the bear den in Bronx Park yesterday, Harris Nochowitz, thirty years old, and Samuel Podowisky, twenty years old, amused themselves yesterday afternoon by throwing lighted cigarettes and matches at the animals. They had a lot of fun at the expense of the bears until Fred Schlosser, a keeper, interrupted them and handed them over to Policeman McCarthy. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

French Honor for James Stillman.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The French Government has charged Ambassador Jusserand with the duty of informing James Stillman, President of the National City Bank of New York City, that the Superior Council of Instruction of France has voted unanimously to engrave Mr. Stillman's name on the walls of the Ecole des Beaux Arts at Paris in recognition of

COSSACKS WHIP WOMEN, BUT NO BLOOD IS SHED

Russian Socialists' Plans for May Day Result in Fiasco.

COUNTRY GENERALLY QUIET

Minor Disorders in One or Two Towns —St. Petersburg Authorities' Elaborate Precautions.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 14.—The widely heralded May Day demonstrations in St. Petersburg were a complete fiasco, and reports from Moscow and the provinces indicate that order reigned to-day generally throughout Russia.

Minor disorders are reported from Reval, Kishineff, and one or two other places, but up to midnight no report of serious tumult or loss of life has been received, and the attempts of the Social Democrats and Social Revolutionists to signalize May Day by great anti-Government demonstrations appear to have been a thorough failure.

Dispatches from Kazan, Tiflis, Saratoff, Kronstadt, Rostoff-on-Don, Kieff, Tomsk, and other cities say the workmen observed the day as a holiday; that the shops were closed, and that quiet was not disturbed.

In St. Petersburg the day passed in almost perfect quiet, and happily without a drop of blood being shed. The Revolutionaries found it impossible to execute the programme of demonstrations and bomb-throwing which they had so widely advertised, the workingmen declining to sacrifice themselves to advance the propaganda of their self-constituted leaders, and the advertised meetings were attended chiefly by spectators.

Governor General Trepoff handled the situation firmly, but with a view to avoiding collisions. Squads of Cossacks patrolled the streets, reserves being held out of sight in courtyards, and the Guard Regiments were retained under arms in their barracks.

The Associated Press correspondent, who rode through all sections of the city and suburbs, found the streets perhaps less thronged than usual. More or less tension and agitation were apparent in the industrial quarters among workmen promenading under the eyes of Cossacks with whips in their hands, but otherwise the city wore almost a normal appearance. The weather, which was cold and raw, perhaps acted as a deterrent to would-be demonstrators, as Russians dislike physical discomfort.

At the Preobrajensky Cemetery, where the principal meeting of honor of the "January martyrs," as the victims of the "Red Sunday" are popularly called, had been advertised, there was a scanty crowd, composed largely of the curious. Cossacks dispersed the crowd, the more aggressive members of which sang the "Marseillaise" as they were crossing the fields. This defiance was met by a charge of Cossacks, who used their whips freely, inflicting many nasty injuries.

There was a similar incident on Vassili Island, where a dozen students, mainly girls, sang the "Marseillaise" and gathered a crowd. Cossacks cantered up and dispersed the crowd with whips, seeming to take special pleasure in slashing the girl students with their whips, but the girls were apparently anxious to pose as martyrs, and deliberately provoked attack by singing revolutionary songs.

The affair gave rise to rumors that a number of persons had been killed, but in the incident, which happened under the eyes of The Associated Press correspondent, sabres were not even drawn, and nobody was seriously hurt.

The day wound up with a tumult in one of the people's parks, where, while merry-makers were dancing Russian national dances, agitators scattered proclamations among the crowd and drove a scanty guard of police into a shallow artificial lake. Cossacks came up at a gallop wielding their whips, rescued the police, and made numerous arrests. It was noticeable that the Cossacks rode widely apart, evidently to minimize the effect of bombs should they be thrown.

The Governor General attributes the lack of trouble largely to wholesale arrests of incendiary leaders yesterday.

The prestige of the Social Democrats and Revolutionists has suffered greatly by to-day's failure, though they were trying to-night to retrieve it by issuing a manifesto attributing their inability to carry out the programme to the overwhelming force of military and proclaiming a general strike to-day. The leaders were so confident of success in advance of the event that they prepared a number of informal hospitals or bandaging stations in the neighborhood of the various advertised meeting places in order to render first aid to the victims of the expected rioting. Part of the onus of their failure rests upon Father Gapon, who sent a message from abroad to the leaders of his old organization saying, "Do nothing until I return."

The police prevented a meeting yesterday of resident clergy who desired to pass resolutions of sympathy with the Metropolitan Antonius, who has been transferred to the Caucasus on account of his agitation in favor of a revival of the Patriarchate. When representatives of the clergy asked an officer if they might hold a meeting in a church he replied in the negative, saying that his orders were not to permit a meeting anywhere.

COAL PRODUCTION IN 1904.

351,196,953 Short Tons Valued at $445,643,528 at the Mines.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Practically complete returns to the United States Geological Survey for 1904 show that the production of coal last year amounted to 351,196,953 short tons, having a total value at the mines of $445,643,528.

Compared with 1903 this shows a falling off of 6,159,463 short tons in quantity and of $58,080,853 in value. This decrease, however, was simply a natural reaction from the abnormal activity which had been maintained throughout the coal mining regions in 1903 due to the exhaustion of the coal stocks on hand by the memorable strike of 1902.

Strike in Porto Rico Ended.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The strike of the 14,000 agricultural laborers in Porto Rico has ended, according to a cablegram received to-day by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, from Santiago Iglesias, the organizer of the Federation. A recent mail report received by Mr. Gompers announced that at that time 8,000 of the 14,000 who went on strike four weeks before had secured 30 per cent. increase in wages and a nine-hour day.

President Walks to Church.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt attended the morning service at Grace Reformed Church today, walking each way between the White House and the church. The Rev. Dr. Schick, the pastor, greeted the President and Mrs. Roosevelt after the services while the congregation remained seated. During the afternoon the President went out for a short walk, and to-night he had a talk with Attorney Gen-

FATALLY HURT IN RIOT.

Italian Barber Cut in Faction Fight—Reserves Out.

After a riot involving thirty Italians and thirteen policemen Joseph Detori, a barber of 668 Eleventh Avenue, was taken to Roosevelt Hospital with a compound fracture of the skull and several ugly cuts. He probably will die. Frank Abel, janitor and agent of 662 Eleventh Avenue, who is said to have started the quarrel and to have struck Detori with a three-foot section of two-inch gas pipe, was arrested on a charge of felonious assault.

Detori left Abel's house six months ago, moving his barber's shop without giving notice to Abel. They met last night and came to blows. Their quarrel had divided their countrymen in the block into almost equal factions, and they swarmed out to take part. They broke into Detori's shop, and, arming themselves with all the razors in sight, they went at it.

Blood flowed as they gashed each other, and those who did not have razors or stilettos used paving stones and clubs with effect. The list of casualties was mounting high when Policeman McCullen got into the mêlée. He lay about him with his night stick, and then they attacked him. A call brought the reserves of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, nine patrolmen and three bicycle policemen. Their arrival ended the riot, and the adherents of the men, many of them suffering with severe cuts, took flight.

FIGHT ON CONEY'S BOWERY.

Cigar Cutter, Wielded Like Tomahawk, Splits Man's Head.

A small riot started on Coney Island's Bowery at Henderson's Walk last night. After it was over William Smith was taken to the Coney Island Hospital with a cloven skull and "Texas" Harry George, a Coney Island character, was taken to the Coney Island Police Station. Smith is not expected to live.

Smith was standing on the corner when "Texas" happened along. They got into a dispute. George ran into a music hall and got a big cigar cutter, an ugly looking weapon. "Texas," the policemen say, raised it aloft and brought it down, tomahawk fashion, on Smith's head. Smith fell to the ground.

The crowd, which was already thick enough to obstruct traffic, grew bigger quickly. Roundsman Konig and Patrolman O'Dea, when they ran up, had to fight hard to get to the centre of action. While they were doing this several smaller fights were started on the side. At last "Texas" was captured and carried off and Smith was taken to the hospital.

ANY MONEY WELCOME.

Gen. Howard Invites All Kinds for American Tract Society.

At the Broadway Tabernacle last evening the eightieth anniversay of the American Tract Society was observed. There were present at the evening service many men and women who are prominent in the society. Addresses were delivered by Gen. O. O. Howard, President of the American Tract Society; the Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, and the Rev. Dr. George L. Shearer, officers of the society.

Dr. Barton, in his address, referred to the need of having the society known by another name.

"I wish to suggest," concluded Dr. Barton, "that a new name be selected for our society. While the name of the American Tract Society was a proper one for our organization when it was founded in the year 1825, many changes have taken place since that time.

"Our work has developed constantly, and we are not now confined to the publication of small religious tracts. The name of our society, in view of the advances we have made, does not carry with it sufficient weight and dignity, and it does not give a true conception of our work. I would suggest that the name of the society be changed so as to be known as the American Christian Literary Society. Such a name would express its true character and would, indeed, prove to be a valuable asset. Such a name would be most inspiring."

The Rev. Dr. Shearer said that the work of the society was greatly hampered by the lack of funds.

Gen. Howard spoke of the great service which the society was performing in the Christian mission field. He concluded by saying:

"We are now here to-night to secure a special collection for the society, but if you have any neighbors who are millionaires I wish you would tell them that we are much in need of financial assistance and we would not refuse any kind of contribution."

ROUGH TIMES AT PANAMA.

McKeesport Boy's Version of How Canal Workmen Are Treated.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 4.—"Tell the boys to stay at home if they get only a dollar a day," is the advice of a McKeesport boy now working with the construction gang on the Panama Canal.

Charles L. Carroll, son of Mrs. Sadie Carroll of 604 Ridge Avenue, McKeesport, was one of the first to go to the Isthmus to work. In a letter to his mother, received yesterday, he says he is thoroughly sick of the country, and everything connected with the canal, and will be home in a month.

"Every person is afflicted with running sores all over the body," the letter goes on. "We are compelled to sleep in an old shed, six in a room on cots. Rainwater is drunk more than the river water, because it is the better. The meals provided would sicken a dog."

ST. LOUIS'S NEW ARCHBISHOP.

The Pallium Formally Bestowed on John Joseph Glennon.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—In the presence of a notable gathering of Catholic Church dignitaries the pallium, the official insignia of an Archbishop, was bestowed today on John Joseph Glennon, Archbishop of the Archdiocese of St. Louis.

The ceremony took place in the old cathedral. Preceded by six quaintly attired pages, the ecclesiastical procession entered the cathedral by the main door and passed down the centre aisle to the sanctuary, to the right of which was the red throne for Cardinal Gibbons, and directly opposite the purple, white, and gold throne occupied by Archbishop Glennon.

Mass was celebrated by Archbishop Glennon, and immediately after the communion the pallium was bestowed by Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Glennon repeating the oath of office in Latin. The sermon was preached by Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul

Farewell Banquet to Ambassador Reid

At the farewell dinner to be given Whitelaw Reid at the Republican Club on Tuesday evening, May 23, the following gentlemen will respond to the toasts which will be proposed by Louis Stern, President of the club: Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Charles Emory Smith, Sir Percy Sanderson, British Consul General in New York; Edward Lauterbach, and several others. Among the prominent guests will be Gen Fred D. Grant, Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan, Gov. Higgins, Lieut. Gov. Bruce, Cornelius N. Bliss, and D. O. Mills. Before the dinner there will be a reception to Ambassador Reid in the parlors of the club.

ROJESTVENSKY STILL IN FRENCH WATERS?

Japan Gets Information That He Was at Hon-Kohe Friday.

SAIGON A BASE FOR SUPPLY

Vessels for the Use of the Russians Which Were Recently There Could Be Counted by Tens.

TOKIO, May 14.—Detailed confirmatory information concerning Admiral Rojestvensky's use of Indo-Chinese waters has reached the Japanese Government from a variety of sources, both official and private.

A high Japanese officer to-day described the important acts of the Russian fleet since France first moved to preserve neutrality. He said:

"The Governor General of Indo-China officially reported that the Russian fleet had entirely departed from Kamranh Bay on April 22, but on April 23 there still remained in the bay one Russian cruiser, one torpedo boat destroyer, and fifteen transports.

"On April 24 the entire Russian fleet re-entered Kamranh Bay and rode at anchor until April 26, when a majority of the warships sailed, leaving behind four converted cruisers and one torpedo boat destroyer. These latter vessels took supplies of coal and provisions.

"On April 26, toward evening, these vessels stopped and examined the German steamer Loosok and the Norwegian steamer Providence, which passed outside the bay.

"On April 27 more than thirty Russian vessels were anchored at Hon-Kohe, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon they stopped and examined the British steamer Stettin, which was passing.

"According to the French official report, Admiral Rojestvensky promised Admiral de Jonquières that he would leave Hon-Kohe on May 3. It is evident, however, that the Russians were anchored at Hon-Kohe on May 8.

"The latest telegrams from Indo-China indicate the presence at Hon-Kohe on May 12 of seven Russian battleships, seven cruisers, two torpedo-boat destroyers, and four converted cruisers.

"Since the appearance of the Russian fleet in the Far East, Saigon has become a base for the transportation of military supplies for Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet. The number of vessels furnishing supplies to the Russians is so great that those which were anchored at Saigon on May 5 were countable by tens."

CLADO FEARS TOGO WILL WIN.

Russian Expert Says He Was Wise to Stay Near Japan.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 14.—In the absence of precise news regarding Admiral Rojestvensky naval critics are driven to speculation.

Capt. Clado considers that a junction with Admiral Nebogatoff has already been accomplished and foresees a prompt movement northward, but this view is controverted by those who say that Nebogatoff's ships need repairs.

Capt. Clado is not sanguine regarding the result of the coming fight. He says the combined squadrons will be subjected to repeated torpedo attacks till they reach the coasts of Japan, where they will be engaged by Admiral Togo, whose inferiority in battleships is more than counterbalanced by his modern armored cruisers.

Even if Rojestvensky is victorious, Clado says, he will still have to run the gauntlet of mines and torpedo boats, so that he can scarcely hope to reach Vladivostok except with greatly diminished forces, and these all needing repairs, which will be difficult to execute, whereas Togo will be able to effect repairs at numerous dockyards and arsenals, from which he wisely refused to stray in spite of the temptation to engage Rojestvensky before Nebogatoff's arrival.

FRENCH DETAIN ONE STEAMER.

Hold the Carlisle on Suspicion That She Carries Contraband.

SAIGON, May 14.—The British steamer Carlisle has been detained here on suspicion of carrying contraband of war.

The Carlisle, under charter to the Russian Government to carry supplies from Vladivostok to Port Arthur before the capture of the latter place by the Japanese, lost her propeller and drifted to San Miguel Bay, Luzon, where she was towed to Manila.

Early in March it was reported that Japanese in fishing sampans made four attempts to sink the Carlisle, but were repulsed by the customs guard on board the vessel, who fired upon the sampans.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 14.—A terrible duststorm raging in Manchuria probably explains the further lull in operations.

Over 500 wounded are arriving in Moscow daily.

A letter from one of the corps commanders at the battle of Mukden says hundreds of Russians were killed by Russian six-inch shells fired from Russian guns abandoned by Gen. Stoessel at Port Arthur.

POLES CAN NOW BUY LAND.

Czar Sanctions a Law Removing One of Their Grievances.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 14.—Following the policy of trying to improve the condition of the Poles, Emperor Nicholas has sanctioned an important law permitting them to purchase land in Poland.

They were deprived of this right after the insurrection of 1863, the land tenure of Poles being limited to that acquired by direct inheritance.

The inability to buy land has ever since been one of the chief grievances of the Poles.

Disturbances in Kishineff Last Several Hours—Police Powerless.

KISHINEFF, May 14.—Some soldiers belonging to the Fifty-third Battalion of the infantry reserve last night pillaged several Jewish houses in Nicholas Street.

ing returned from the Horseshoe late Saturday evening. Cap. Loesch had intended to go out, but decided to have an early run this morning instead. She will return in the afternoon for some fresh stores and leave finally for the Horseshoe, in tow, late in the day. She looked trim and alert as she lay at rest, and appeared eager to be off. Over half her crew of twenty-five men were ashore. The rest lounged on the deck gossiping of her chances.

Three of the boats are at the New York Yacht Club anchorage in the East River. On the Sunbeam, Lord Brassey received several visitors during the day. There is not the same tenseness aboard her that marks the others. It is more a pleasure cruise for the distinguished Englishman. He has no thought he can win. Beside her was the Utowana and the Ailsa. The latter had left Hoboken late the previous night and was waiting to take on stores before being towed down the bay to-night. She will go down with the Utowana. The Sunbeam will remain where she lies until to-morrow morning, having ordered tow to the start at 7 o'clock.

In the North River were the Apache and the Valhalla. Both are expected to go down the bay, early to-day and to try out outside for a good spell. They, too, will join the fleet in the Horseshoe.

Announcement was made yesterday afternoon of the guests to be carried by the yachts in the fleet during the race. The Atlantic and Apache has the greater number—seven each—while the others carry various numbers down to one on the Hamburg.

The list as far as completed is:

ATLANTIC—Wilson Marshall, owner; F. M. Hoyt, C. B. Seeley, H. A. Bergmann, Merton W. Smith, Dr. F. B. Downs, L. B. Ostrander, and William Gardner, designer. Captains, Barr and Pagel.

APACHE—Edmund Randolph, owner; Royal Phelps Carroll, R. Burnside Potter, W. Gordon Fellows, Joseph Harriman, Ralph N. Ellis, Stuyvesant Leroy, and Watson B. Morris. Captain, J. H. McDonald.

AILSA—Grenville Kane, managing owner; Paul Stevenson and Henry Reutendahl. Captain, Lem Miller.

ENDYMION—Commodore George Lauder, owner; Richard Sheldon, H. C. Rowland, T. F. Buchan, and Jasper Rowland. Captain, Jim Loesch.

HAMBURG—Adolph Tietjin, managing owner; Lieut. Adolph Tietjin, Jr., and Herr Picconelli. Captain, Peters.

HILDEGARDE—Edward R. Coleman, owner; Frank Platt and one other. Captain, S. M. Marsters.

SUNBEAM—Lord Brassey, owner; Lady Brassey, Capt. Pakenham of the Grenadier Guards, and Col. Harboard, brother of Lord Suffolk. Owner commanding.

THISTLE—Commodore Robert E. Tod, owner; Dr. P. Outerbridge, Dr. James Ayer, and Poultney Bigelow. Owner commanding.

VALHALLA—Earl of Crawford, owner; Messrs. North, Brougham, Cornfield, and Welrahan. Captain, Cauwes.

UTOWANA—Allison V. Armour, owner; William Williams and Jordan L. Mott, Jr. Captain, J. H. Crawford.

LEUR DE LYS—Dr. Lewis A. Stimson, owner; Miss Stimson and Mr. Connelly. Captain, Tom Bohlin.

Baron von Sternburg Cannot Be Here.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Important engagements will prevent Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassador, from going to New York to witness the start of the transatlantic yacht race for the Emperor's Cup on Tuesday. He will be represented by his counselor and First Secretary, von Dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, who left Washington to-night, accompanied by Second Secretary Hobert R. Scheller-Steinwartz and Major Otto von Etzel, the Military Attaché. Commander Hans Georg Hebbinghaus, the Naval Attaché, who is a member of the Committee on Arrangements, is now in New York. Mr. Scheller sails Tuesday for a leave of two months, which he will spend in England, Switzerland, and Germany.

TAKES MURRAY HILL HOTEL.

Manager Bates of the Everett House Also to Have the New Belmont.

Benjamin B. L. Bates, proprietor of the Everett House, Seventeenth Street and Union Square, took charge of the Murray Hill Hotel, at Park Avenue and Forty-first Street, yesterday morning at 6 o'clock. He supplants Washington L. Jaques, who was the manager for the Murray Hill Hotel Company. It has been reported that the Murray Hill Hotel was to be run in conjunction with the new Belmont Hotel, the skyscraper at Forty-second Street and Park Avenue.

"Ever since the Belmont Hotel was started it has been understood that I was to have the management," said Mr. Bates last night. "The hotel is about 75 per cent. completed. There have been so many delays in the past three years through labor troubles that we do not know when it will be ready for occupancy.

"The talk about the two hotels being connected by an arcade under Forty-first Street is idle. I have never heard the subject broached. There was no significance in taking over the management of the Murray Hill at 6 o'clock in the morning other than the fact that it is the beginning of the hotel day. I was an employe at the Murray Hill eleven years ago, and it seems like coming home to be back here."

Mr. Bates said that his association with the Subway Realty Company, which owns the Belmont, was simply that of a tenant.

FIVE UNION MEN HELD FOR A STRIKE KILLING

Hired ex-Convict as Slugger at $15 a Head, One Confesses.

SAYS BOARD NAMED VICTIMS

First Man on List, First Attacked, Died of Injuries—Demonstration at Unionist Funeral.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The arrest late last night of Charles Casey, Secretary; George Miller, business agent, and Henry Newman, President, of Carriage Makers' Union No. 4, for complicity in the murder of Charles Carlston on April 13, was followed to-day by the arrest of Frank Novak and John Helden, connected with the same union, as accessories before the fact. Three others, two ex-officers of the union, have left the city.

The five arrests followed the confession of Casey that he and his fellow-unionists hired sluggers to beat non-unionists for $15 each. Casey's confession, which is one of the most startling documents of the kind ever made, gives details of the Executive Committee meeting which voted $50 for "educational" purposes.

He tells how Charles Gilhooley, an ex-convict, approached him with the proposition to slug whomever Casey would name, for a consideration. Carlston had offended the union by refusing to join it and by continuing to work.

Casey says he laid Gilhooley's proposition before the committee and paid him $15 after he had beaten Carlston. Gilhooley reported what he had done and took orders to assault others. In the meantime Carlston died of injuries.

The next victim was C. J. Meyers, also a non-unionist, who was assaulted near his house and beaten over the head with a club. He died in a few hours. As Gilhooley's assistants the confession names Edward Feeley and Martin Looney, both known to the police. Some one heard Gilhooley boast in a saloon of receiving money for slugging, and his arrest followed.

The fact that both victims were carriage makers connected the crimes with the Executive Committee of that union, and soon after his arrest Casey broke down and made a confession. The affair will have a serious effect on the strike.

Between the assaults on Carlston and Meyers, a man named Anderson was beaten, but he did not die. For each of these affairs, the confession says, the union paid $15. Gilhooley got $2 for carfare.

Casey says he laid a plain proposition for slugging before the committee, and that every man knew just what the money was appropriated for. While Gilhooley waited outside the door, he says, the committee made out a list of the men to be beaten. Carlston's name led. When attacked he put up such a fight that Gilhooley and his comrades determined to kill him.

Gilhooley at first denied his guilt, but was overwhelmed by Casey's confession. Novak was a temporary member of the Executive Committee.

The teamsters' strike has received accessions by the action of the teamsters' joint counsel, representing 30,000 union drivers, to-day in voting to refuse to deliver goods to boycotted houses. The men directly affected by this action are as follows: Chicago Team Owners' Association, 6,000; Commission Team Owners' Association, 600; Lumbermen's Association, 1,200; Furniture Movers and Expressmen's Association, 400; total, 8,200.

Several of the big team owners said to-night that they had made arrangements to make deliveries to-morrow whether customers were boycotted or not.

About 800 strike breakers have arrived since yesterday.

The extension of the teamsters' strike to include 2,000 cab drivers is hanging in the balance. The action depends upon the teamsters' joint council.

At present the non-union cabmen will not take a fare to any of the boycotted stores. The wife of a member of one firm was taken by a non-union cabman to within a block of her husband's store. The man dared not approach nearer.

To-night influences are at work to end the strike. It is said that an element of the joint council is making an effort to that end, and its is rumored that the Executive Board of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters will meet here on Tuesday to prevent a spread of the strike.

Another death to-day was added to the list of strike victims, making a total of nine. John Cahill shot James Jennings, a negro, in the head, in self-defense he says, while arguing over the strike.

P. Lagrogoris, owner of a lunch wagon, in front of which the shooting took place, was attacked by friends of Jennings later and beaten unconscious. Lagrogoris may die.

Marching with draped banners and muffled drums, more than 2,000 union men to-day followed the body of George S. Pierce, a striking teamster, the only unionist killed in the strike, who was shot by a Deputy Sheriff, from his home to the Union Station, where the body was taken over the Pennsylvania Railroad to Louisville, Ky., for burial. The men, marching four abreast, wore on their coat lapels white buttons with this inscription in black:

"We mourn the loss of a murdered brother."

Immediately following a carriage bearing the aged mother, sister, and two brothers of the deceased, came thirty carriages occupied by union labor officers. At intervals along the line were the banners of the different locals and four American flags, each draped in black. Eight hundred marchers fell in behind the carriages at the start. All along the way other detachments joined their ranks, until when the station was reached the column extended ten blocks.

At the Cook County Democracy Headquarters the funeral procession halted and President Shea of the Teamsters' Union addressed the mourners from the second floor balcony.

"The members of the teamsters' unions do not compose the disorderly element," he said. "The teamsters are not seeking to do violence in order to secure victory for themselves, and they regret deeply that violence has been done, occasioning such events as the death of our mourned brother.

"It is your duty as members of the Teamsters' Brotherhood and as law abiding citizens to refrain from all acts of violence and to discourage such acts, both on the part of the union men and their sympathizers, wherever occasion arises.

"We will win the present strike, not through violence or force, but because we are law-abiding citizens of the United States and of this city, seeking to obtain what is rightly ours by peaceful methods."

Deep silence prevailed during the address of Shea, but at its conclusion he was wildly cheered.

BOSTON, May 14.—Every teamsters' union which met in the city to-day indorsed the Chicago strike, voted immediate funds from the treasury to assist in the fight, and levied assessments on members to add to this fund.

MORE EXCAVATORS TO STRIKE.

If All Are Called Out Building Work Will Be Seriously Hampered.

Vincenzo Vecchio, the walking delegate of the Rockmen and Excavators' Union, which started its strike last week for recognition of the union, said yesterday that more strikes will be ordered this week against members of the Contractors' Protective Association.

Vecchio has challenged the Contractors' Protective Association to prove that the men are getting more wages now than they demand under the new agreement which they want the employers to sign. He said:

"If the employers can prove this we will call our strikes off at once. If they cannot prove it, then strikes will be ordered right and left, day by day, until the union is recognized. We want $1.00 for eight hours for the excavators, or $2.10 for ten hours, and we want $2.80 a day for ten hours for the rockmen, and the same proportion for eight hours, and must have recognition of the union."

An effort will be made this week to bring the team drivers out in sympathy with the rockmen and excavators. The fight will be centred on the Jerome Park Reservoir, where the pickets are getting the new men to join the strikers as fast as they are put to work.

It is admitted that the strike of the rockmen and excavators was not calculated on by the general contractors at the beginning of the building season. Building proper does not start until after the excavators and rockmen are through, and a general strike of their unions would for a time lay off not only the skilled mechanics employed by members of the Building Trades Employers' Association, but also the men employed by the independent contractors.

UNIONS TO TALK CREMATION.

Cigarmakers Already Converts—Agitation to be Started.

A resolution recommending that all members living in localities where there are crematoriums be cremated after death, and that an agitation be started among the unions in favor of cremation, will be considered at the annual convention of the National Workingman's Sick and Death Benefit Association, which begins its annual convention in this city to-day.

One of the unions which favors the idea is Cigarmakers' Union 144. When it had its office in East Eighth Street there were several dozen sealed jars containing the ashes of dead members on a shelf behind the Secretary's desk, labeled with the names of the members, their ages, and the dates when they joined the union. Their bodies had been cremated by the union, which created a fund for the purpose. Cigarmakers' Union No. 90, which is composed of Socialists, also has decided opinions on the subject of cremation, and several hundred of its members have been cremated, their ashes being preserved in the homes of their relatives.

Now, don't mistake our meaning—they're not $45.00 costumes in name only, but bona fide values, which a careful inspection or comparison will instantly verify.

Here's the story of their acquirement:—New York's recognized premier maker of high grade, high cost, fashionable costumes desired to use up his odd ends—one or two dress lengths of imported fabrics at a decided reduction from the regular price if we'd take the entire products—told him we would if he'd duplicate one of our new and most fashionable short sleeve models—they are here for you to-day—you'll go in ecstasies over each creation. See illustration for style. Third Floor.

$25 for $45 new model made special for this sale—strictly fine tailored costumes, with short demi-fitted jacket a little above waist line and very full plaited skirt. This very attractive garment comes in a variety of materials—one or two of a kind—mixed suitings, plain and fancy brilliantines—also soft outing materials—new short full sleeves with fine lace edging—coat daintily trimmed with Persian trimming of corresponding colors—narrow silk braid, fancy buttons and fashioned with silk ornaments—fully shown by the illustration.

$27.50 for $45 suits—a large assortment—in voiles and drap d'etés—several smart models and in all the pretty light and darker shades—Alice blue, reseda, green, champagne and biscuit color—also navy, marine and black—jacket silk lined and full round skirt over silk drop.

$22.50 FOR $35 SUITS—a collection that has been culled from the regular stock, where we are short of sizes and have a few models that have been nearly twice the price—scarcely two in the same model or material—but a collection large enough to give a variety of materials and models to suit the purchaser—in light weight broadcloth, fancy high colored Panamas, serges and mixtures—also a few voiles and silks—all the different models shown this season.

$14.75 for up to $29.75 suits—comprising a special lot in a big range of materials—Panama cloth, serges, plain and herringbone effects—also pin checks and hairline stripes, invisible plates and fancy mixtures—in the smart Eton jacket, the surplice blouse style, the short, jaunty, tight fitting coats and various other models.

ALL BUT CRIMMINS FAITHFUL, PLATT SAYS

Declares He Went Over to Hyde Just After Seeing Harriman.

CALLS IT SHREWD HYDE MOVE

Expenses of Policy Holders' Committee Small, He Asserts — Believes Result Is Inevitable.

Frank H. Platt, counsel for the Equitable policy holders' committee known as the Crimmins Committee, gave out this statement yesterday concerning Mr. Crimmins's attitude and the Equitable controversy in general:

"Last February Mr. Alexander attacked Mr. Hyde's control of the Equitable Society as subversive of the interests of the policy holders, stating that Mr. Hyde was unfit to control the funds of the society. As a remedy he proposed that the policy holders have the right to vote for the Directors, and the Directors thereupon passed a resolution that that should be done at the earliest possible time. But it immediately became evident that Mr. Hyde was scheming to thwart the purpose of that resolution.

"Thereupon the policy holders' committee was formed to support Mr. Alexander and his proposition. On March 2 the policy holders' committee published its first notice, stating that its object was to obtain for the policy holders the right to vote for Directors. The members of the committee have all been faithful to that purpose except Mr. Crimmins.

"At first no one was more earnest for it than he. When the deceptive four-year plan was announced Mr. Crimmins spoke against that plan and voted in the committee against it, on the ground that it would continue Mr. Hyde's stock control. Soon after that Mr. Crimmins had several private conferences with Mr. Harriman, and then he came out suddenly as a supporter of Mr. Hyde. He defended Mr. Hyde in interviews, and could see nothing but advantage to the policy holders in the stock control. What argument brought about this change of mind has not been disclosed.

"Mr. Crimmins's position as Chairman of the committee gave his action some importance, and it cannot be denied that Mr. Hyde made a shrewd move in capturing Mr. Crimmins as an ally. The work and influence of the committee was temporarily checked by the action of its Chairman. But neither Mr. Hyde, nor Mr. Harriman, nor Mr. Crimmins, has been able to induce any other member of the committee to change his position or principle.

"The committee, with this single exception, stands just where it stood at the beginning, for the policy holders and against the misuse of their property.

"As to the expenses of the committee they have been very small. It has not been difficult or expensive to organize the policy holders, for they are all of one mind and have been quite ready to unite to protect themselves. Some members of the committee have contributed liberally to the expenses. The statement that policy holders have been paid to support Mr. Alexander is too obviously false for serious notice. I have openly supported Mr. Alexander and his purposes, and shall continue to do so without apology. He is for the right, and I have no doubt of the final outcome. Mr. Hyde may for a time be able to divert the attention of some people from himself and his doings by impugning the motives of others, but the people in interest, the policy holders, will not be easily distracted by such obvious tactics, and, as one of Mr. Hyde's counsel told him long ago, the result is inevitable."

FREE COAL AFTER WRECK.

Italians in Brooklyn Profit by Smash-up at Bath Junction.

Fifteen cars of a thirty-five-car train of coal on the Bay Ridge Division of the Long Island Railroad parted and came together with a crash at Bath Junction, Brooklyn, yesterday noon, scattering forty tons of coal over the surrounding neighborhood and making kindling wood of two of the cars. The locomotive and twenty cars of the train passed over the crossing just in front of a train of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's Sea Beach line. At the point where the collision happened the Sea Beach and Ulmer Park lines diverge, and the wreck caused by the collision remained on both tracks for some time, blocking traffic.

The passenger traffic toward Coney Island is heavy on Sundays at this point, and there are a number of coal trains operated by the Long Island Railroad on this division. There is a slight down grade toward the east at the junction, and when the train parted, on account of a defective coupling, the second section moved at a rapid speed. The engineer, finding that something was wrong, put on the brakes, but was fully 500 feet beyond the crossing before he could come to a stop. The second section ran into the first with a smash that demolished two cars and threw them from the track.

There is a large Italian settlement there, and as soon as the accident happened the residents set to work to take advantage of it. Everything that would hold coal was suddenly brought into requisition, and bare-legged children were seen struggling with wheelbarrows filled with coal. It is estimated that the loss to the railroad company will amount to $2,500.

DISMAL, DAMP HOLIDAY.

Rain and Mist Mar Spring Sunday—Parks Deserted.

New Yorkers who had been looking forward to a pleasant Sabbath and holiday were greatly disappointed when they woke up yesterday morning, for the sky was dark and the air damp. Shortly after 8 o'clock rain began to fall, continuing until almost 10 o'clock, when it was supplanted by a heavy mist.

At noon the sun made an effort to break through the clouds, but met with scant success. By 4 o'clock it was sprinkling, and light showers fell for more than an hour. Between the showers a heavy fog hung over the city.

At the time when Central Park on a fine day would have been crowded there was hardly a handful of people within its borders yesterday afternoon. The Park police had little or nothing to do. There were no arrests and no accidents. A horse ran away when his rider dismounted, but a policeman caught him and nobody was hurt.

NEW PEACE ASSOCIATION.

Prominent Men in Anglo-Franco-American Movement.

PARIS, May 14.—A powerful body comprising leading public men of Europe and America have founded the National Interests and International Conciliation Association, under the Presidency of Senator Berthelo.

Ex-Premier Leon Bourgeois and Senator d'Estournelles de Constant represented France, Andrew Carnegie the United States, and the Duke of Marlborough Great Britain.

The purpose of the association is the development of the domestic interests of the respective countries by means of good international relations. Prominent savants, authors, artists, politicians, and lawyers have promised their support to carry out the programme of the association.

IN MEMORY OF DR. SHIPMAN.

Service at Christ Church in Honor of Its Late Rector.

A memorial service was held last evening in Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Broadway and Seventy-first Street, in honor of the Rev. Dr. Jacob Shaw Shipman, who was rector of the church from 1877 to 1901, and who died at Whitesboro, N. Y., on Feb. 23 last.

Those who took part in the services were the Rev. Dr. John P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's Church, who preached the memorial sermon; Bishop Coadjutor Greer, who paid a brief tribute to Dr. Shipman; the Rev. Herbert Shipman, son of the late Dr. Shipman and Chaplain of the United States Military Academy at West Point, and the Rev. Dr. George Alexander Strong, present rector of Christ Church, and his assistant, the Rev. Everett M. Waterhouse. Bishop Potter sent the following letter, which was read by Dr. Strong:

"It is a matter of great disappointment to me that an engagement to administer the right of confirmation at the Chapel of the Church of the Incarnation on Sunday evening, May 14, will make it impossible for me to accept your kind invitation to be present at the service in memory of Dr. Shipman.

"I regret this the more because I should have been glad not only to hear what I know would be an adequate memorial of Dr. Shipman from the Rev. Dr. Peters, but also I should have been glad to add a word to it, in expression of my personal recognition of the altogether unusual and distinguished gifts, the engaging personal character, and the laborious and consistent ministry, by all of which the Rev. Dr. Shipman endeared himself to his brethren and the Church in this diocese. His departure has deprived us of one of our most gifted minds and widely educated scholars as well as one of the most devoted priests and pastors whom I have had the privilege of knowing. Christ Church and the flock that once was his do well to honor his memory."

Dr. Peters, in his memorial sermon, after tracing the life of Dr. Shipman from his birth, at Niagara, N. Y., on Nov. 30, 1852, through his course at Yale and the Divinity School and his pastorates at Whitesboro, N. Y.; Mobile, Ala.; Lexington, Ky., and in this city, and his election to the Bishopric of Fond Du Lac, Wis., an honor which he declined, gave a succinct analysis of his qualities as a man and as a clergyman. He said in part:

"Philosophic in the bent of his mind, Dr. Shipman invariably discussed the great problems of man's thinking, the nature of God, the essence of humanity, the relation of man to God, the meaning and manner of the Incarnation, and he discussed them fearlessly. Profound in his faith, he interpreted old truths in the language and thought of a new age. The truth was what he sought, and so profound was his faith in God that it never for one instant occurred to him that the search for truth could do anything but reveal God to him, and so there is a freedom and a fearlessness in his handling of these great questions which assured his hearers always that he was not a lawyer holding a brief for a case, bound to prove it in some way or other, but a wise and fearless leader in the quest of truth.

"The lovely humor, one of the first characteristics, I think, which impressed one who met him, the twinkle of the eye, the quaint, droll, and yet withal profoundly serious, way in which he regarded men and the world about him; his kindly tolerance of the opinions and the ways of others, while still holding fast to his own methods and his own convictions, the somewhat of impracticableness which made you feel that he was almost a child in life, mingling with that wisdom which made him so rare a counselor that this great diocese sought his services for its Standing Committee and the Committee on Canons, a beautiful mixture of the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove—these were the things which impressed themselves upon me the first time I met him."

Dr. Peters cited, as a notable instance of Dr. Shipman's qualities, his management of the parish of Christ Church at Lexington, Ky., to which he was called in 1861, at the beginning of the civil war. Kentucky was a border State and feeling ran high, dividing not alone organizations but even families, yet Dr. Shipman held his congregation together so well that Bishop Smith said of him: "I believe he is the only man in America who, when every Protestant church in Lexington has divided during this war, could have held this church together." It was the more remarkable, Dr. Peters pointed out, that he should have thus succeeded while fearlessly attacking two accepted institutions of Kentucky—horse racing and lotteries. On this point Dr. Peters said:

"The evil of race course gambling was one which, in his judgment, seriously affected the life of the community. Some of the most prominent members of his church were interested in horse racing and the concomitant gambling. Lexington, Ky., where he was stationed then, was the centre of a horse-breeding community, and with this horse-breeding was connected horse racing and with it gambling. Any pronounced utterance on the evils of the turf was sure to run counter to the practice and belief of prominent members of the community and of his church.

"Betting, as part of gambling, Dr. Shipman defined as, in principle, stealing. To get another's money without paying an equivalent, to injure your neighbor by obtaining from him, by any means, something for nothing, is, in principle, in the sight of God stealing, he said. Having expounded this principle, he proceeded to apply it with uncompromising honesty to the great Kentucky institutions, lotteries and horse racing.

"It was this man who spoke these words," Dr. Peters went on, "who contrived to hold the discordant elements of Christ Church, Lexington, together, during the war. No compromiser this, maintaining his place by lack of plain speaking, preaching against adultery to the thief, and against theft to the adulterer. Dr. Shipman denounced evil to its face."

OLD M. E. CHURCH SOLD.

Lost Grip in Willet Street District—To be Jewish Synagogue.

From a section of the city which many years ago was a Methodist stronghold one of the last churches of that denomination now in existence there will disappear before many days. The old Willet Street Methodist Episcopal Church, which was built seventy-nine years ago, has been sold and will soon pass into the hands of the Jewish Congregation Anshe Cheset Byolosticker.

The character of the neighborhood has changed entirely, and for many years the population in that section of the city has been almost exclusively Jewish. Several of the Methodist churches with which the neighborhood only a few years ago was dotted, have been sold in recent years because their members have moved to other parts of the city and left their old places of worship deserted.

Invariably Jewish congregations have stepped in and converted the churches into synagogues. The Methodists for some time have been considering plans to establish a neighborhood house on the east side as the best means of doing their share to the uplifting of the part of the city where they once had a good hold.

George W. Slocum, sexton of the Willet Street Church, said yesterday that the church for years had been a favorite spot for sightseers. In the days of the civil war many of the soldiers who fought on the Union side were married in the church. One of the members to-day is A. H. Brummell, the candy manufacturer. In the spacious yard behind the church is an old-fashioned house which for many years has been the residence of John Stiebling, Chief Deputy United States Marshal in this city.

HACKENSCHMIDT VERY ILL.

World's Champion Wrestler Threatened with Typhoid Fever.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—George Hackenschmidt, world's champion wrestler, who had been confined to his room at a hotel for the last two days, departed to-night for New York.

Hackenschmidt has been suffering from a high fever, and Dr. Lyons, who has been attending him, to-night said that the wrestler is threatened with typhoid fever, and regarded his condition as serious.

The Wanamaker Store — Store Closes at 5:30 o'Clock — The Wanamaker Store

The Store with a Hundred Entrances
Doorways All the Way From the Bronx to Brooklyn Bridge

The shopper from Poughkeepsie, Bridgeport, or any other point on the New York Central or New Haven Railroads, need not get from under cover, into rain or heat or city traffic, from the home station until the city trip is over, and the home station is reached again. The train brings them to the Grand Central, which is connected directly with the Subway, and the Subway runs right into WANAMAKER'S, at the Astor Place Station.

This means a wonderful improvement in the comfort and safety of the public. Once the rainy day locked careful people up at home—a tiresome, tedious imprisonment. Now WANAMAKER'S can be reached from almost everywhere, without going out doors—and the question "What Shall We Do with Our Rainy Days?" is solved. The answer is, "Go to WANAMAKER'S, and Enjoy Yourself—and You'll Never Know It's Raining."

And never was this old store better filled to delight the visitor, and repay the careful shopper. The merchandise of the new season is shown in lavish completeness.

Everything to make the person comfortable, and well-dressed.
Everything to beautify and make pleasant the home.
This is the convenience, and this the service of WANAMAKER'S.

Today We Cut Prices in Half On Beautiful TRIMMED HATS

This is a most extraordinary occasion. We have always cut prices on, and sold out promptly, any hats that showed signs of damage from handling; and this has kept our stocks constantly fresh and new. Today's action includes our entire stock of Spring Hats, received up to the middle of last month, made of newest and finest materials, and including many beautiful imported model hats—no two exactly alike, hence great variety to select from. And

Every Price Cut Exactly in Half

About three hundred and fifty hats in the collection, marked formerly at $10 to $50, now $5 to $25 each.

A rare and interesting opportunity for women to secure a beautiful Wanamaker Hat at just half its real value.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Sale of SHIRT-WAIST SILKS
Popular Sorts at Decisive Savings

Over five thousand yards of bright, attractive Silks make up this handsome offering today, including twenty-two different designs—some taken from our regular stocks, others secured from the manufacturers at liberal concessions.

They are exactly the silks wanted for the making of shirt-waist suits, separate waists, and Summer dresses. Divided into two groups, as follows:

At 65c a Yard, formerly $1

21-inch White Ground Silk Waistings, in Twills and Chiffon Taffetas, in fifteen different styles of colored stripes, including black, pink, light blue and cardinal—all warranted fast colors; also fine Checked Taffetas with large satin-barred effect, in tan, blue-and-green and navy blue, cerise and navy blue-and-brown—suitable for waists and children's dresses. Also Ombre-checked Taffetas and Warp-printed Taffetas. 19 and 20 inches wide. Formerly $1, now 65c a yard.

At 75c a Yard, formerly $1 and $1.25

Navy blue-and-green and brown-and-green Checked and Barred Louisines, plain, or with Jacquard spots, in this season's best styles, for entire shirt-waist suits; shown in twelve distinct designs. Broche and Warp-printed Taffetas in changeable effects, in navy blue-and-black, brown-and-black, myrtle-and-black and Gobelin blue-and-black. Self-colored Brocaded Chiffon Taffetas in small floral patterns, including browns, navy blues, greens, and changeable combinations—desirable for entire dresses. Ombre-striped Taffetas in light and medium colors; suitable for either entire dresses or separate waists. 10 and 20 inches. $1 and $1.25 qualities, at 75c a yard.

Rotunda.

Beautiful Silk Coats At $18

Only those who understand trade conditions at this time can realize that such beautiful coats as these can be sold at this price.

One of the best manufacturing tailors in New York found himself without orders, and, on a visit to us, agreed to copy our model and make these coats for us to sell at this price. It was only because he had succeeded in buying a lot of fine black taffeta silk very much underprice that he could undertake the production.

The picture shows the character of the coat—full length, semi-fitting style, belted at the waist, made with smart new sleeves; handsomely finished with double box-plait in the back. The whole being topped off by a beautiful collar of wide silk applique. They are garments that under ordinary conditions would be counted excellent value at $30—now $18.

The Walls of Your Home

If the trees come close about your Summer home, or a vista of long, verdant slopes is seen through the windows, it is better to give the eye a change—better not to use green wall paper. If it's a little room, cool blues will make it look larger. If it's a seashore place, where no days are warm and many are pretty cool, bright red or rich brown is good, especially in the firelight.

All good grades of Wall Paper, for Summer homes, in endless variety, at low prices. 10c to 50c a Roll. All tasteful.

Self-toned Damasks, Moires with panel borders, Tapestries, Burlap and fabric effects, self-toned papers, Colonial stripes, modern art and floral papers. We decorate, paint and tint. Estimates given on hard-wood floors.

Our advice is at your disposal.

Paris and Paris-American WAISTS

Handsome, hand-embroidered Waists from exclusive Paris houses—already your mind's eye is seeing their beauty.

The waists are made of fine, sheer materials—richly, exquisitely embroidered and trimmed with German Valenciennes laces, in new, dainty ways, $12 to $42.

And these beautiful Paris-American Lingerie Blouses—the materials were embroidered in Paris and made up here, according to latest Parisian models—are scarcely less attractive:

At $5.50—Waists, of mercerized batiste; button in front; embroidered yoke effect of fine plaits; full sleeves with deep embroidered cuffs.

At $8.50—Waists, of mercerized batiste, with short sleeves, embroidered front, and trimmed with Valenciennes lace insertions, forming a square yoke; buttoned in back.

LA FOLLETTE MAY NOT ACCEPT SENATORSHIP

Depends on Enactment of Legislation Desired by Wisconsin.

PROBLEM FOR THE SENATE

Doubt as to His Right to Make Appointment to Vacancy Should He Remain Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The prospect that in a few days the Wisconsin Legislature will adjourn without the legislation that has been urged so vigorously by Gov. La Follette and his supporters has suggested that the Senate when it meets next October is not unlikely to have a new and peculiar problem to solve.

Since March 4 Wisconsin has had only one Senator. The Legislature in January elected Gov. La Follette to succeed Senator Quarles, but Gov. La Follette has not accepted the office or qualified as Senator. He remains Governor of Wisconsin, and has stated publicly that his acceptance of the seat in the Senate must depend on the accomplishment of the legislation demanded by the people of the State whom he represents.

He has said that if the railroad party in the Legislature should try to compromise by agreeing on a bill for a State Railroad Commission to be elected instead of appointed by the Governor he would decline the Senatorship and run as a candidate for a place on the commission.

Should the Legislature act as desired the Governor would after the adjournment tender to himself as Governor his resignation of that office to take effect on a certain day. Should the Legislature disappoint him he would wish to surrender the Senatorship and remain Governor.

His course would be all plain enough so far as resigning is concerned, but there would be doubt as to his right to appoint a Senator to fill the vacancy caused by resigning an office he never entered on. He would be at liberty to appoint his successor, but the Senate would take up the matter as a new problem, and it is not easy to say how it would decide in such a case.

NAVY YARD GAINS IN RACE.

The Connecticut Almost on Even Terms with Louisiana Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The last report of the Chief of the Bureau of Construction of the Navy shows that progress on the battleship Connecticut at the New York Navy Yard has reached within a small fraction of that of the battleship Louisiana, under construction by the Newport News Company. These vessels are sister ships, being built in competition.

The Louisiana was begun two months before work was commenced on the Connecticut, and in that period the Louisiana advanced 12 per cent toward completion. The last report shows that work on the Louisiana had advanced to 74.83 per cent., and on the Connecticut to 73.56 per cent.

The progress with the Connecticut justifies the hope of officers at the New York Yard that they will lead the Newport News Company. The merits of the respective ships must be determined by tests under service conditions. A speed of 18 knots is required from each.

Bride of Few Weeks a Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, May 14.—Following a quarrel with her husband, to whom she had been married only a few weeks, Mrs. Minnie Gairin, nineteen years old, of 433 Springfield Avenue, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid to-day. Only a few minutes before taking the poison Mrs. Guirin played several selections on the piano.

MARRIAGE LAW OF MOSES.

Whiskers as a Rabbi's Badge—Some Questions for Magistrate.

Ida Rosensweig went before Magistrate Barlow in the Essex Market Court yesterday to prosecute David Rosensweig, whom she alleges to be her husband, for abandonment. She says he was married to her in Austria. David's lawyer is Hyman Rosenschein. He put the woman through a searching cross-examination. The defendant declares that his name is not Rosensweig, but Morris Michaelson, and that he is not a butcher, as the woman says, but a carpenter.

"Who married you to this man in Austria?" asked the lawyer of the woman.

"A rabbi," she replied.

"How do you know he was a rabbi?"

"Because he had great long whiskers."

"Gracious!" said Rosenschein. "Does that prove he is a rabbi? If every man on the east side who wears long whiskers was a rabbi there wouldn't be many sinners."

The woman did not dispute this assertion, and the lawyer kept on with his questions.

"This man who you say is your husband—and what was he?"

"A butcher."

"Well, he is a carpenter in this country. Does a man change from a butcher to a carpenter? No man who is a butcher can be a carpenter at the same time, and my client is a carpenter."

"Your Honor," said the lawyer in summing up to Magistrate Barlow, "if this marriage was performed in Austria it can be proved. If the woman was married there she must prove it. Whiskers are not proof. How does she know that the man who performed the ceremony had authority to do so?"

"I'll take the woman's word for the marriage," said Magistrate Barlow.

"But, your Honor, the law of Moses is now some 5,667 years old. Is that law good to-day? Can any reliance be placed in it? This marriage, if it had occurred, would be what is now called a common-law marriage."

"Moses was a wise man," observed the Magistrate. "I know nothing about the law you refer to. I will place the defendant under bond to pay complainant $5 a week in default of which he will go to Blackwell's Island for six months."

The lawyer thereupon served the court with a notice of appeal.

DEWEY RETURNS HOME.

Admiral Has Severe Cold, It Is Announced at Washington.

Admiral Dewey, whose absence occasioned much regret at the annual dinner of the New York Society of the Founders and Patriots of America, held Saturday night at the Hotel Astor, returned to Washington yesterday morning on an early train. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dewey.

When Theodore Fitch, Governor of the New York Society, learned that the Admiral had recovered sufficiently from the indisposition which prevented his attending the dinner to permit travel, he expressed gratification that the attack was no more severe.

"We were very sorry not to have Admiral Dewey, our Governor General, with us," said Mr. Fitch, "and I know that he had set his mind on being present. I am very glad to know that he was well enough yesterday to travel."

A dispatch from Washington last night said that at Admiral Dewey's home callers were told that he had retired to his room as soon as he reached the house and could not be seen, as he had a severe cold.

AUTO RUNS DOWN BOY.

A. A. Guiges's Machine Knocked Little Fellow Unconscious.

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Albert A. Guiges, leather manufacturer, will have to appear before Judge Kuhn in the Second Criminal Court to-day to answer to a charge of having run down ten-year-old Louis Rosenbaum at 90 Ferry Street, with an automobile. The boy is at present in St. James's Hospital, suffering from a fractured rib and many bruises.

Guiges was driving his machine near his factory at the corner of Ferry and Madison Streets, when he struck the boy. The little fellow was picked up unconscious and taken to the hospital, where it was found that he injuries, although painful, probably would not be fatal.

EVA BOOTH FAINTS IN HALL.

Salvation Army Commander Overcome by Toothache.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Commander Eva Booth of the Salvation Army collapsed to-night while she was preparing to address an audience in Orchestra Hall. Her trouble was due to an ulcerated tooth, which has caused her intense pain for several days.

Miss Booth was taken to her hotel, where her physician said that she was in no danger and that she would be able to continue her journey to Kansas City to-morrow.

Train Service to the Catskills.

The West Shore Railroad will start its New York and Catskill Mountain service to-day. The New York and Lake Mohonk service will be inaugurated on Saturday, May 27, and the regular Summer Catskill Mountain service will go into effect on Sunday, June 18. Several new Catskill trains will be put on. The limited trains will run through from New York to the heart of the Catskill Mountains without making any stops, thereby reducing the time considerably. Trains will leave New York at 9:40 and 11:20 A. M. and 12:45 and 3:25 P. M. The Sunday night special trains from Catskill Mountain points will be a feature of this year's train service.

Elliot Danforth Going Abroad.

Ex-State Treasurer Elliot Danforth and Mrs. Danforth will sail for Europe to-morrow. The Chenango leader is convalescent after the most serious illness of his life. He was taken violently ill while examining historical records in the office of the Secretary of State of South Carolina, falling into the arms of the official. He was taken to Washington, where for weeks he was near death. Recently he went to Atlantic City, where he was when the transatlantic voyage was decided upon.

Lawyer Killed by a Cab.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Julius Rosenthal, a retired lawyer, died early to-day at the Union League Club of injuries from being run over by a cab shortly after midnight. Mr. Rosenthal was returning to the club when he was struck and knocked down by the cab. He was for many years [illegible] Bar Association.

ANNUAL SPRING SALE of PIANOS AND PIANOLAS

WEEK BEGINNING MONDAY MAY 15 1905

at AEOLIAN HALL

New York's New Musical Center

MAY 1905

An Offering of Slightly Used Instruments that, in their Uniformly High Grade and the extent and comprehensiveness of the collection, surpasses any sale that New York has hitherto known.

All To Be Sold at Remarkably Low Prices and on moderate monthly payments, if desired

This offering is an impressive illustration of the valuable pianos which are daily being exchanged for the Pianola Piano and which would not come into the market except for the introduction of this new and revolutionary type of musical instrument.

IF the list of pianos which is printed herewith is carefully analyzed in connection with the high-grade of the instruments themselves, and the low prices at which they are offered, it will be apparent that this Special Sale exceeds in importance any similar sale that has ever taken place anywhere in the city.

No person with whom economy is in the least an object—who is now contemplating the purchase of a piano or is likely to need a new instrument within several months—can afford to lightly pass over the details of this announcement.

The pianos placed on sale here are unprecedented in the fine condition in which they have been received, and also in the reputation of the manufacturers represented. It will be observed that the list is not padded with squares or pianos which for any reason have become out of date or unworthy in any respect.

These instruments are of two classes, those which have been taken in part payment for the Pianola Piano and those which have been returned from rental. The rule with the Aeolian Company is to rent new pianos, and therefore, although a piano may have been out on rental only a short time, it is classified as a "slightly used piano" and sold at a proportionately reduced price.

The exceptionally high character of the pianos which are taken in exchange for the Pianola Piano has become well known to the New York public. To secure this new type of piano, people are parting with pianos which were entirely satisfactory so far as tone, action, etc., were concerned,—their only fault being that they lacked a Pianola inside the case. As the prices of the Pianola Piano are from $500 to $1,000 it will readily be appreciated that these exchanged pianos have come from some of the best houses in New York, and are therefore of a character to appeal to people who would not ordinarily be interested in any other than an absolutely new piano.

Exchanged Pianolas and Miscellaneous Piano-Players

THIS is a collection of instruments taken in exchange for the complete Metrostyle Pianola and Pianola Piano. As the value of the Metrostyle has become more widely known, an increasing number of Pianola owners have exchanged their instruments for the latest model.

It should be borne in mind that every Pianola in this sale may be bought subject to the condition that its full purchase price will be allowed in an exchange for the Metrostyle Pianola or the Pianola Piano, at any time within three months, should the buyer prefer to own the very latest model. Every Pianola will be sold subject to the same guarantee that the Aeolian Company gives with absolutely new instruments.

GROUP I.—$150. $15 down and $7 a month

The Pianolas in this lot are what are known as "rebuilt instruments." That is, they have all been returned to the factory and every part that showed the slightest evidence of use has been replaced: new actions, new pedals, new fingers, whatever was necessary to bring them up to the Aeolian Company's standard.

GROUP II.—$175 $20 down and $8 a month

The bulk of the Pianolas included in the sale will be found in this classification. They consist of instruments that have seen only moderate use, and were in very good condition when received by us. Some have been on rental for short periods while others were exchanged for Metrostyle Pianolas under our three months' limit offer. All have had a thorough factory test; actions regulated and put in the very best of condition.

GROUP III.—$200 $20 down and $10 a month

Only fifteen Pianolas constitute this lot. They are the picked instruments of the sale and include some which have never left our warerooms, being used only for demonstration purposes. For persons who are willing to forego the advantages of the Metrostyle, they represent an exceptional opportunity. Our own salesmen could not distinguish them from absolutely new Pianolas. Yet the same down payment as in Group II. will give immediate possession.

Keyless Automatic Pianos, $175

Purchasable on Easy Monthly Payments

THESE are instruments in the form of upright pianos, made to be played exclusively by means of the automatic action which is built into the case. They do not have any key-board and consequently cannot be played by hand. But in homes where there is no piano and no person who can play by hand, they will furnish an inexhaustible supply of music.

These "keyless pianos" are equipped with full expression devices. It is difficult to explain this instrument clearly in a short advertisement but it should be seen by persons with but a limited amount to spend for a piano, and who wish at the same time to have at their command the inexhaustible resources of a piano-player.

Suitable for summer homes, dens, and yachts.

MISCELLANEOUS PIANO PLAYERS—$75 TO $125

Monthly payments to suit purchaser

For the first time in its business experience the Aeolian Company offers a miscellaneous collection of piano-players including practically all makes. Naturally, no guarantee can be given with these instruments beyond that they are in perfect playing order when sold. Yet we agree to take them back at their full purchase price in exchange for Metrostyle Pianolas at any time within three months.

The importance which the Aeolian Company attaches to this sale is indicated by the fact that the semi-weekly recitals have been discontinued and the main Recital Hall will be given over to the display of the instruments listed above.

Special Sale of Slightly Used Aeolians and Orchestrelles Next Week

Next week, beginning Monday, May 22, the special feature at Aeolian Hall will be a sale of used Aeolians and Orchestrelles. The Orchestrelle, an instrument by means of which anyone may reproduce at home the most difficult orchestral compositions with full orchestral effects, is made in six styles, ranging in price from $600 to $2,500. ¶ A number of these instruments, exchanged by their owners for larger models, have been received and put in perfect playing condition, and will be sold at prices varying from $350 to $1,500. Aeolians from $100 to $300. ¶ Send for a catalog giving a complete description of the Orchestrelle with annotations of 100 orchestral compositions frequently heard in public recitals.

POOLROOM FORTRESS'S ELECTRICAL MARVELS

Conning Tower, Too, for Twentieth Century Place.

SLIDING PANELS IN WALLS

Paintings Become Blackboards by Touch of a Button—Even Signs in Cigar Store Utilized.

After a second inspection of the armor-clad poolroom in West Third Street which he invaded on Saturday afternoon with sledgehammer tactics, Acting Captain Bourke of the Mercer Street Police Station came away yesterday with the conviction that the New York poolroom has entered upon a new era in which the art of fortification is combined with stage craft and elaborate electrical and mechancial devices to baffle detection and intrusion by the police. It developed yesterday that the reputed proprietor is a close relative of a prominent Tammany politician.

"Necessity is the mother of invention," said the Captain. "In this the men behind the poolroom interests in this city are only falling into line with other classes of lawbreakers, who are discarding the old tricks with which the police are familiar and adopting new and more elaborate methods.

"In a recent wire-tapping scheme where a prominent merchant was robbed of $100,000, the victim was taken to a make-believe Western Union branch office which had been fitted up expressly for the occasion, and while this was going on twenty actors and supers, all in on the game, each enacted a part assigned to him.

"The poolroom we raided yesterday was fitted up with such elaborate detail that it is difficult to believe that it marks merely a crude beginning of the new type of poolroom. By happy chance I discovered the one vulnerable point in the breastworks and managed to get in. With all my men I might have hammered away at those doors for three hours without making an impression on them. If the poolroom develops much further along the lines indicated in the Third Street place, the police will have to use dynamite to break in in the future."

The raided poolroom is situated on the south side of West Third Street, between Wooster and Greene Streets. The building which shelters it is a five-story brick structure, in no way differing from many other business buildings in the district. From the outside it looks unobtrusive enough. A handsomely fitted up and apparently well-stocked cigar store with big plate glass windows occupies the ground floor on the Third Street side of the building, extending along the entire front, with just space enough left for a door leading to a narrow hall, through which access is gained to the upper floors of the building. These, as far as the police have been able to learn, are not occupied at all.

The poolroom occupied the entire ground floor of the spacious building behind the cigar store, through which customers were admitted to the establishment. There is nothing to distinguish this cigar store from any other store of its kind to the casual observer, and it was not until Acting Captain Bourke and his men had made a second inspection that they discovered a feature which rendered it a most valuable adjunct to the poolroom.

OUTER PASSAGE ARRANGEMENTS.

While the close inspection Capt. Rourke and his men made yesterday was in progress they discovered that in the part of the hallway which runs parallel with the cigar store, just behind the first of two heavily barricaded doors which bar unwelcome visitors from access to the poolroom, the ceiling was several feet lower than in the portion of the hall beyond the barricades.

Upon further examination it was found that this space was occupied by a false compartment about eight feet long, four feet wide, and six feet high, which took in part of the second floor as well, and was constructed of heavy iron plates. Access to this compartment was gained through an iron trap door in the flooring. The trap door was reached by an iron ladder which was constructed so as to closely resemble the variety of grilled ironwork gates in the front of a prison cell or the cashier's department in a large counting house.

Capt. Bourke climbed the ladder and found that the false compartment was furnished with a chair and a small table on which were several electric buttons. There were also found two switchboards by which the opening and closing devices of the steel doors in the hall through which patrons are admitted to the poolroom were controlled. There was no window in the compartment, and for some time Capt. Bourke was at a loss to understand just for what purpose it had been built in such a peculiar location.

After he had scrutinized the wall which separated the false compartment from the cigar store its purpose became clear to him at once. In this wall there were several small slits with window glass which provided a view of every part of the cigar store as well as the street in front of the store. These slits the Captain upon further examination found to correspond as to location with hanging gilded cigar signs in the store, there being one narrow slit at the lower edge of each sign.

The false compartment was to the poolroom what the conning tower is to the warship. In the old school poolroom the lookout was generally placed in the street, where he looked over applicants for admission and determined whether or not they should be admitted. In that position he was exposed to arrest at the hands of any raiding party.

Here in his steel-lined box he could scrutinize patrons entering through the cigar store at his own leisure and without being seen himself. At the end of his finger tips he had all the machinery for sounding the signal of danger and double lock every door leading to his fortress.

Capt. Bourke said that not a single detail that would add to their strength had been overlooked in the triple line of defences against police intrusion. Defences on the same elaborate scale had been applied also in the planning of two crooked passages leading through the cellar, and intended to be used as avenues of escape in the case of a surprise party arranged by the police. There is one such passage leading from the poolroom proper, and another leading from the compartment, guarded by separate defences, in which the executive staff of the poolroom worked without necessity of exposing themselves to the scrutiny of the patrons.

STEEL-CLAD SEVEN-INCH DOOR.

After a would-be customer had entered the cigar store and been locked over by the man in the conning tower and found to be a bona-fide member of the "Verdi Club," the charter name of the place, he was ushered into the hallway through a frail and narrow door which connects it with the store. The hallway is about three feet wide and ten feet long. Five feet toward the rear of the building is the first barricaded door. This, Capt. Bourke said, is about seven inches thick, with heavy steel plates, both on the inside and the outside, and massive oak between. The steel plates are covered with a number of framed etchings, among them some Gibsons. There is not a single window in the room. Light is obtained from a dozen beautiful electroliers, each containing a cluster of some thirty lamps, and from rows of electric lamps fringing the ceiling. A dozen electric fans are set in small niches in the walls for ventilation.

The southern wall, while there is nothing at first glance to distinguish it from the others, Capt. Bourke discovered upon minute examination to furnish more evidence of the elaborate precautions taken in the fitting up of the raided poolroom. Under the burlap on the south wall the police found a solid steel curtain with heavy oak timbers behind it, and another steel curtain on the inside. Behind this wall is a room 30 feet by 8 feet, in which the cashier and sheet writers work.

On this wall about twelve feet above the floor were pictures which stood for utility rather than art. The elaborate frames of these pictures are fitted into the partition. By a clever electrical device the pictures can be made to drop back into a niche in the wall and give place to the blackboards on which the entries for the various races are chalked up. These are lowered into position in the frames through a slit at the top, also by an electric device worked from behind the partition.

The partition dividing the patrons' room from that in which the clerks and cashiers work is a latter-day development in the fitting up of poolrooms. In this case what struck Capt. Bourke as rather peculiar was the absence of the slits through which the money and the slips with bets on are passed in. On moving away one of five small brass tablets that hung on this wall and on which were engraved little bon mots such as "Real pain for our sham friends and champagne for our real friends," Capt. Bourke found that each of these screened one such slit.

ENTERED EXIT PASSAGES.

Capt. Bourke gained access to the poolroom by smashing an area on the sidewalk in front of the house which consists of glass and iron work, and dropping through the aperture to the cellar. On making his way to the establishment via the cellar, he had an opportunity to inspect the devious passages there. Capt. Bourke, contrary to expectation, had comparatively plain sailing, for these passages being designed for escape, the heavy iron doors he encountered were placed there for cutting off pursuit. All the bolts were on the outside, and the Captain had only to draw them in order to have the doors swing open before him.

He struck the passage leading into the customers' room. There was only one heavy door in this passage. But his detectives, who had made their way into the cashier's compartment through the rear, found a trapdoor leading from that room into the cellar, where they found the other passageway. At the bottom of the stairway connecting the trapdoor with the cellar they found a room, in which there was a stove with a red-hot fire, where two of the men who afterward were arrested were busy burning papers. On a wall of this room they found a switchboard, where by manipulating one single switch all doors could be barred and the entire establishment plunged in darkness.

Between this room and the front of the cellar, where an iron door and a stairway led to the street, there were three seven-inch steel-lined doors. Between the first and the second of these doors Capt. Bourke came upon a steel lined recess, in which the walls were covered with electrical switches and buttons.

Another precautionary device which also is a decided novelty was discovered by Detective Upton of the Mercer Street Station when under instructions from the Captain he proceeded to smash the intersecting wall between the cigar store and the poolroom. In the masonry work of this wall were imbedded rows of bottles containing a fluid which exhaled a noxious odor, and which Capt. Bourke said he believed to be sulphuric acid.

The five prisoners taken in the raid were arraigned before Magistrate Cornell in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday and held for examination to-day.

FIGHT AT BELMONT PARK.

Two Wounded in Stable After Dispute Over Horses.

Monroe Sawyer of New York Avenue and Locust Street, Jamaica, got into a dispute about the relative merits of race horses with a negro in the loft of a stable at Belmont Park yesterday afternoon. There was some lively slashing, and both of the participants went to the hospital. The negro was arrested on a charge of assault.

Some one found Sawyer unconscious in the loft, alone. Dr. Rorke came in an ambulance and carried him off to St. Mary's Hospital.

When he recovered consciousness he said Robert Jones, a negro, had stabbed him, and the police reserves of the Jamaica Avenue Station were turned out to hunt for Jones. They went to the loft, but got no trace there. Then they tracked the negro to the Jamaica Hospital.

He had gone there with a lacerated hand, which was his souvenir of the fight. The wound had been dressed when the police arrived, and they took him off to the station house. He was locked up there on Sawyer's charge. It is not known how the dispute started.

PRIVATE DALZELL'S PROTEST.

He Objects to Political Orators Monopolizing Memorial Day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—"Private" Dalzell, well known among Grand Army men, has addressed a letter to his comrades of Ohio, in which he admonishes them and members of the order generally against the "political wind-bags" who have lately manifested a disposition to monopolize the ceremonies over the graves of soldiers on Memorial Day. "Private" Dalzell concludes his letter as follows:

"For many years the rule for the Grand Army of the Republic was to conduct all their services without let or hindrance from noisy and blatant politicians and office-seekers. Later the latter almost came to usurp the day, and often desecrated it with their not-too-well concealed schemes and intrigues to howl themselves hoarse on that day to catch the soldier vote.

"It is the soldiers' own day to lead and plan and to speak, and any deviation from this rule of decency and propriety brings the day into disrepute."

OFFER $1,200,000 FOR BAIL.

John S. Phipps's Chauffeur Held for Trial in Special Sessions.

John S. Phipps of 6 East Eighty-seventh Street offered real estate worth over $1,000,000 in the West Side Court yesterday when his chauffeur, Henry Ellendorf, of Westbury, L. I., was arraigned for exceeding the speed limit. The chauffeur pleaded not guilty, and was held in $200 bail for trial in the Court of Special Sessions.

Bicycle Policeman Fitzgerald arrested the chauffeur in West Seventy-second Street Saturday night. He said that the machine was going at the rate of eighteen miles an hour.

After Ellendorf had been held, Mr. Phipps offered the houses at Eighty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue and at 6 East Eighty-seventh Street as surety for the chauffeur's appearance in Special Sessions. He estimated the value of the property at $1,200,000. He was told, however, that one parcel of real estate would be enough, and the house in Eighty-seventh Street was accepted.

TWO WOMEN, THREE MEN INJURED IN RUNAWAYS

Mrs. Scheffler, Speedway Driver, Hurled from Spider Phaeton.

SQUADRON A RIDER THROWN

Thomas T. Wooster's Horse Became Unmanageable—Road House Party in Collision.

Two women were seriously and three men painfully injured in three runaway accidents that occurred in Harlem between 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and 11 o'clock last night. One of the women was Mrs. Mercy Scheffler, wife of Peter H. Scheffler of 201 West One Hundred and Eleventh Street and a well-known Speedway horsewoman. While driving with her little daughter Gladys, she was thrown from her spider-phaeton as a result of the animal's fright at two automobiles that passed her at a high rate of speed. The other woman, Annett Nahrenhutz of 53 East One Hundred and Third Street, suffered a concussion of the brain as the result of being thrown from her carriage.

The men injured were Thomas T. Wooster of Squadron A, D. J. Fearson Burke, a contractor, of 150 East Fifty-third Street, and Daniel Coleman of 16 East Fifty-sixth Street, the last named having been in the party that was in the vehicle with Miss Nahrenhutz.

It was about 10 o'clock when a phaeton, in which were Messrs. Burke and Coleman and Miss Nahrenhutz and Miss F. Cottrell of 216 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, drove into the yard of Beers's roadhouse, at Seventh Avenue and One Hundred and Tenth Street. When the party left the roadhouse, Mr. Coleman driving, the horse was urged to such speed that Bicycle Policeman Ennis shouted a command to halt, but Coleman paid no heed and continued up the avenue.

At One Hundred and Fourteenth Street Coleman turned his horse and passed the astonished policeman, who, still shouting commands to stop, followed them as fast as he could. At One Hundred and Tenth Street Coleman, who was making for the Park entrance there, and who kept his head turned so as to keep Ennis in view, did not see a cab that turned into the avenue at that point. A second later cab and phaeton crashed into each other, the phaeton being wrecked, and Burke, Coleman, and Miss Nahrenhutz being thrown to the ground, as well as the driver of the cab. The cabman, being unhurt, quickly remounted his box and drove away.

Coleman did not let go the reins and was vainly attempting to quiet his horse. Finally some bystanders went to the rescue. They were not quick enough, however, and the animal managed to drag what remained of the vehicle over Miss Nahrenhutz's body. Ennis had sent in an ambulance call by this time and which was answered by two ambulances and also a patrol wagon.

The ambulance surgeon saw at a glance that Miss Nahrenhutz was badly hurt, and, after giving her what temporary relief he could, put her in the ambulance and sent her to the hospital. An examination of Mr. Burke also showed that he was quite painfully hurt. He had several bad gashes in his head, and he, too, was sent to the hospital. Coleman was not very badly hurt. He was sent to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station and held for reckless driving. The other woman who was in the phaeton was not hurt.

Mrs. Scheffler was hurt soon after she left Central Park. She drove out of the entrance at Seventh Avenue and One Hundred and Tenth Street and started up the avenue, intending to turn west into One Hundred and Eleventh Street, when an automobile dashed past, the chauffeur driving the machine at a terrific rate directly underneath the horse's nose. The animal, frightened, turned west into One Hundred and Tenth Street, Mrs. Scheffler tugging at the reins.

She appeared to be getting the animal under control when, just as she was in the middle of the block between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, another automobile suddenly turned into the street from Eighth Avenue and whizzed past. This time the horse rushed upon the sidewalk, where several women and children were watching Mrs. Scheffler's attempt to stop him.

Little Gladys jumped out of the phaeton just before the frightened horse made the leap for the sidewalk. Mrs. Scheffler was still doing her best to check the animal, but the jump to the sidewalk was so sudden that she was thrown heavily to the sidewalk. At this moment Bicycle Policemen Ennis and Haggerty appeared, and while Ennis held the horse Haggerty called an ambulance from the J. Hood Wright Memorial Hospital. When the ambulance arrived Mrs. Scheffler, though suffering great pain, refused to go to the hospital, and was sent home. It was said last night that she was in a serious condition owing to internal injuries and a possible concussion of the brain. The little girl escaped without a scratch.

Exactly what frightened Mr. Wooster's horse is not known. With R. D. Mills, also a member of Squadron A, Mr. Wooster left the armory of the squadron at Ninety-sixth Street and Madison Avenue early in the afternoon for Van Cortlandt Park. They took the Broadway route home, and were nearing One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street when Mr. Wooster's horse started south at a furious rate of speed, although he was still under the control of his rider. At One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street the horse turned sharply west, and then suddenly shied at something in the road, throwing Mr. Wooster heavily to the ground.

When Mr. Mills reached One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street he did not see either the horse or Mr. Wooster and continued on his way to the armory. Mr. Wooster, who had a severe bruise on the right hip and cuts on his face and head, had been picked up and taken into a house opposite where he was thrown. He was later sent to the armory in a cab and then taken home. The horse was captured at Broadway and One Hundred and Forty-eighth Street and taken to the West One Hundred and Fifty-second Street Police Station.

ASSERTS RIDGELY LACKS EXPERIENCE IN BANKING

Banker J. H. Willock of Pittsburg Criticises the Controller.

CALLS HIS VIEWS WRONG

Thinks Active Bank Presidents or Managers Should Also Engage in Other Businesses.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 14.—James H. Willock, President of the Second National Bank of Pittsburg, ex-President of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, and for years a member of the Executive Council of the American Bankers' Association, criticised Controller Ridgely to-day.

"Controller Ridgely," he said, "has a wrong impression of banking in large cities. The trouble is that he lacks the experience. I venture to say that 98 per cent. of the bankers in Pittsburg know more of the intricacies and necessities of banking in a metropolis than does Mr. Ridgely, however good a banker he may be. He was taken from a small town into his present position, and when he says that a bank President or bank manager should not be engaged in other business affairs he simply is in gross error. And I say this after a banking experience of thirty-three years, which I think has been fairly successful."

This criticism was aroused by Controller Ridgely's statement concerning the failure of the Milwaukee bank, which was traceable in part to speculation by the President. The purport of the statement was that "no man should be allowed to hold managerial place in a National bank who engages in outside enterprises for profit to himself rather than to the bank." The idea was that bank officers and Directors should prevent loaning beyond the strict lawful limit.

Continuing, Mr. Willock said:

"I do not believe in speculation. I am the largest stockholder of the bank, and I watch it as closely as I would the dearest possession of my heart. I am naturally anxious to protect it, and my position in various business concerns enables me to do it in a way I could not otherwise do. I know who borrows here. I know the value of their security and about them. I gain that knowledge by retaining an active interest in business entirely apart from the bank. That is the only way in which it can be done.

"I think my contention will be borne out by every good banker in the country. Take any of the large banks in Pittsburg and see if they have not been made strong and successful by the active manager taking an active part in business life. I give my salary here and perhaps more to charity. I would be foolish to tie myself down to sitting in a bank chair all day watching depositors come in. I do not think that is the province of an active banker, and in that I believe Mr. Ridgely has gone astray."

CHADWICK MUST PAY $200.

Jerome Assistant Mulcted for Assaulting Hopps the Hackman.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 14.—Charles Chadwick, the famous Yale football player, now an assistant to District Attorney Jerome of New York, must pay Henry Hopps, a local hackman, $200 for having assaulted the hackman several months ago. Hopps brought suit for $5,000.

Chadwick was fined $25 by Justice Hicks in the local police court just after the assault. Ex-Judge W. C. Sampson of Summit had charge of the case for Hopps and employed W. B. Guild of Newark. Chadwick was represented by Assemblyman Lehlbach of Newark.

Pawtucket Man's Suicide.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 14.—John M. Graves, about twenty-three years old, son of Charles Graves, 6 George Street, Pawtucket, R. I., committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart on Saturday night in his room in this city. The shot was not heard, as he had wrapped the revolver in a towel to deaden the report, and his body was not found until this afternoon. He left a note which read: "I am tired of living, and have nothing to live for."

MITCHELL STIRS MINERS FOR DEMANDS IN FALL

Terms of Strike Commission's Award Will Lapse Then.

OPERATORS WANT NO TROUBLE

Three-Year Arbitration Period Profitable—May Grant Concessions and Raise Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., May 14.—John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers, will begin his campaign of arousing union sentiment in the anthracite region this week. He will deliver his first address to the miners at Forest City, at the extreme northern end of the hard coal field. He will speak at many towns until he reaches Scranton, and will spend two weeks in the Lackawanna region. Then he will come to Wilkesbarre, whence he conducted the strike of 1902.

After speaking to the miners of this section Mitchell will go to the Lehigh region, and will finish his tour in the Schuylkill field. The leader of the miners expects to spend at least two months in the anhtracite belt.

Mitchell's object is to arouse his followers for any emergency which may arise when the present agreement between the operators and miners expires, six months hence. After the strike of 1902 was settled many miners became indifferent to the union. They refused to pay dues and remained away from meetings. Mitchell was appealed to, and said he would make a personal campaign. The district leaders predict that Mitchell will meet with great enthusiasm and that when he has finished 98 per cent. of the miners and laborers will be active members of the United Mine Workers.

In a letter to a friend here Mitchell says he has no doubt that the men employed in the anthracite mines are loyal to the union, although they are a little indifferent when danger does not threaten.

Mitchell and the other leaders do not say that they expect another strike at the expiration of the term fixed by the Strike Commission's award. Mitchell says, however, that it is his purpose to see that the anthracite miners are thoroughly organized before Fall.

The operators are reticent as to their policy in the future. The powerful financial interests in control of the anthracite mines and the coal-carrying roads are adverse to any further trouble, and if the miners insist on an eight-hour day the operators may offer a compromise proposition, and if this is not acceptable to Mitchell, they may decide to grant the demand and add the additional cost to the selling price

This is what they did at the end of the last strike, and the trade has never been in better condition than in the last three years. More coal has been produced than in any previous three years in the history of the trade, and at an increased selling price.

MITCHELL WRITES A DENIAL.

Didn't Smoke Non-Union Cigars at Banquet—No Labels on Bread.

A letter was read at yesterday's meeting of the Central Federated Union from President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers in reply to the charges made against him some weeks ago as a labor member of the Civic Federation. The letter was addressed to M. M. Richter, Secretary of the committee appointed by the central body to investigate the Civic Federation and the charges made by delegates against its labor members.

The principal charges against Mitchell were made by Morris Brown, a Socialist delegate, to the effect that Mitchell ate non-union bread and smoked non-union cigars at the dinner of the Civic Federation in the Park Avenue Hotel.

President Mitchell in his letter says that the Civic Federation had aided the members of his union during the anthracite strike in 1900, and enabled the strikers to win a partial victory. The Civic Federation through its officers had been instrumental later, he said, in preventing a cut in wages, largely through the efforts of influential members, including Senator Hanna, Charles A. Moore, and Oscar S. Straus. When the demands in the Spring of 1902 were made every member of the Civic Federation, he said, though the demands were not granted, declared that they were justifiable. Well-known members of the Civic Federation who were capitalists contributed large sums in aid of the anthracite miners. Other prominent capitalists not in the Civic Federation had also made contributions. He said he had been unjustly criticised because he took part in the annual dinner of the Civic Federation at the Park Avenue Hotel. Referring to a letter from Delegate Brown, charging him with smoking non-union cigars and eating non-union bread, he says:

"If Mr. Brown had investigated he could have easily ascertained that I did not smoke non-union cigars. It may be true that non-union bread was served, but if this was so I know nothing about it. It is unnecessary to say to your committee that the label is not placed on every slice of bread served. I am not sufficiently churlish to rise and ask at a banquet if the bread being served bears the union label."

The letter was filed without any debate.

JEWELS GONE, MAID ARRESTED

Woman Says She Was Robbed in Boarding House While Receiving Caller.

Jewelry valued at $2,500 disappeared mysteriously from the room of Miss F. Louise Butler in the boarding house at 244 West Fifty-second Street yesterday afternoon. A little later the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station arrested Daisy Hunt, a negro maid of 250 West Forty-first Street, who was employed in the boarding house.

About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Miss Butler had a caller, whom she received in the front parlor on the main floor. Her room is in the rear of the parlor. While with her caller Miss Butler heard some one moving about in her apartment, and saw the Hunt girl, she says, leaving the room. She thought nothing of the incident at the time, as the girl was expected to arrange things in the room.

When Miss Butler went to her room, after the caller left, she found that the drawer of a dresser in which she kept her bag of jewelry was open. There was, the police say, $15,000 worth of jewelry in the bag. What was taken Miss Butler values at $2,500.

She reported her loss to Sergt. McCann at the West Forty-seventh Street Station, and Detectives Quinn and Fitzpatrick were detailed to the case. After arresting the Hunt girl they learned that her sister had visited the house in the afternoon. They set about finding her.

PLANTING PANSIES, SHE FELL.

Child Leaned Too Far Out to Reach Fire Escape—Will Probably Die.

Little six-year-old Grace Teller was planting pansies in a box on the fire-escape landing at her home, 2,029 Second Avenue, yesterday afternoon.

She leaned out too far and fell from the third-story window. Her mother, hearing a scream, ran to the window. She saw the child was not there, and climbed hurriedly down the ladder to where she lay. Some of the pansies were still clasped in the child's hand. It was said at the Harlem Hospital that there is little chance for her life, as her skull is probably fractured.

SAMUEL S. SHUBERT BURIED.

Short and Simple Services Held for the Theatrical Manager.

The body of Samuel S. Shubert, the theatrical manager, who was killed in the Pennsylvania Railroad wreck near Harrisburg, was yesterday placed in the receiving vault of the cemetery of the Temple Emanu-El at Salem Field, Cypress Hills, Brooklyn. The funeral services at Mr. Shubert's mother's home, 229 West Seventy-ninth Street, were private, the only outsiders present being managers and heads of departments in Mr. Shubert's employ. The honorary pall bearers were men connected with the Shubert enterprises. They were Charles Bird, Channing Pollock, Sol Manheimer, J. A. Morris, A. H. Bull, Peter Burke, Fred Zweifel, Benjamin Ottenger, Dr. Leiser, J. C. Rigby, and A. Thalheimer. Mr. Thalheimer was in the same Pullman car with Mr. Shubert when the manager was killed.

The only person at the funeral from any of the theatrical companies directed by the Shubert firm was Jefferson De Angelis. The managers of the Shubert theatres in Chicago, Rochester, St. Louis, and Syracuse were present.

The funeral service was very short and simple. Rabbi Silverman officiated. He referred to the suddenness of the accident which took away Mr. Shubert while he was scarcely more than a boy and while he was at the beginning of his career and lauded Mr. Shubert for his indefatigable energy and indomitable will, which in less than ten years had made it possible that a bare-footed newsboy on the streets of Syracuse should be mourned by the theatrical profession all over the world. The entire ceremony lasted less than five minutes.

Although no association was represented at the funeral by its members there were floral tributes from the Association of Theatrical Managers of New York, the corresponding association of Chicago, the Union of Stage Mechanics and other societies. The various departments and companies under the direction of the Shuberts were also represented; a large broken column came from the employes of the home office at the Lyric Theatre. Those of the immediate family who were present were Mr. and Mrs Shubert, the manager's parents; Jacob Shubert, his brother; Dora and Clara Shubert, sisters. Lee Shubert, another brother and partner, will arrive from London a week from to-day. When he comes the body of the manager will be taken from the receiving vault, into which it was placed yesterday, and buried in the same cemetery.

ANOTHER WRECK VICTIM LOW.

George Loeffler of Pittsburg May Die —No Trace of E. D. Edson.

HARRISBURG, Penn., May 14.—None of the thirty-four victims of the South Harrisburg railroad disaster was able to leave the Harrisburg Hospital to-day. With the exception of George Loeffler of Pittsburg, Miss Anton Piler of Cleveland, and Harold Elfreth of Philadelphia, it is believed that all are out of danger. Loeffler is in a critical condition. The other two are expected to recover.

Col. H. P. Bope of Pittsburg, another victim, who was staying at the residence of a friend near the hospital, left this afternoon for his home in a private car. J. W. Anderson of Pittsburg, whose son died last night, is in a serious condition and was unable to go home with the body.

The railroad officers say that the report of the death of a Mr. Shaw of Pittsburg was incorrect, due to a mistake of a Harrisburg physician in reporting the death of another victim. This makes the number of deaths twenty-two instead of twenty-three. The company can find no trace of E. D. Edson, the New York lawyer, whose body, it is thought, was burned in the wreck.

H. W. Smith of 257 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, who went to Harrisburg Friday to search for his brother-in-law, E. D. Edson, got back yesterday afternoon. He had been unable to discover any trace of Mr. Edson's body. W. E. McMillian, who was traveling with Mr. Edson and is recovering in the Harrisburg Hospital, told Mr. Smith that when he last saw Mr. Edson he was crawling on hands and knees in the direction of what was left of the door of the Pullman. McMillan got to the roof of the car, and then came the second explosion.

BRICE DEFENDS CHAUFFEUR.

But Magistrate Holds ex-Alderman's Driver on Policeman's Testimony.

Stewart M. Brice, an ex-Alderman and son of Calvin S. Brice, and Clarence Jones, a banker of 165 West Fifty-eighth Street, were in the West Side Court yesterday morning to defend Julius Havosse, a chauffeur of 151 East Twenty-sixth Street, who had been arrested for exceeding the speed limit.

Policeman James Nierney of the Bicycle Squad, who made the arrest, was standing at Eighty-eighth Street and West End Avenue Saturday afternoon when he saw the big yellow machine come flying past him at what he thought was express train speed. He followed the machine up West End Avenue and placed the driver under arrest at Ninty-sixth Street. Mr. Brice and Mr. Jones went to the police station and gave bail for the chauffeur. Nierney, in court, said he timed the machine from Eighty-eighth Street to Ninety-third Street, and that it was making eighteen miles an hour. Mr. Brice and Mr. Jones both protested against the arrest. They told the Magistrate that the car was going so slow that when the policeman rode up they thought he was going to tell them something was wrong with the auto. The Magistrate held the prisoner in $100 bail.

"Why," said Mr. Brice afterward, "the machine was not going any faster than I could walk. This policeman came up to us, attired in civilian clothing, and without any badge to show that he had any authority. He was very insulting."

C. F. Murphy Expected Home To-day.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, is expected home from Mount Clemens, Mich., this afternoon. Considerable interest is manifested in what Mr. Murphy may have to say about the gas question and the probable fate of the five Tammany Senators who voted against the 80-cent gas measure at Albany.

EIGHT CHOICE PLACES AT HIGGINS'S DISPOSAL

Bills Before Him Create Two Commissions and Enlarge Third.

CARRY ALSO MUCH PATRONAGE

Fixed Salaries Equal Those of Cabinet Officers, and Governor Is to Decide Others.

Eight places, which from a pecuniary standpoint will be very desirable, will be at the disposal of Gov. Higgins within the next month if he approves the State Lighting Commission bill, the State Water Commission bill, and the bill providing for an increase of two members in the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

The State Lighting Commission is to consist of three members, each of whom is to receive $8,000 a year with $2,000 for expenses. There is also to be a Secretary of the commission at $6,000. The State Water Commission is to consist of three members whose salaries are to be fixed by the Governor. It is not likely that the salaries of these Commissioners will be less than $8,000 and they may be more. The commission is to name its own Secretary and fix his salary and also is empowered to employ as many clerks as it may think necessary to carry on the business of the commission.

The two additional Railroad Commissioners will receive $8,000 a year. It is practically assured that George W. Aldridge the present Secretary of the commission, is to receive one of these places. That will leave a vacancy in the position of Secretary of the commission, which is a $6,000 office. George Edward Graham is one of the leading candidates for this place.

The other additional Commissionership, it is said, is certain to go to some New York City man, and the expectation among the Republican politicians is that Gov. Higgins will place it at the disposal of Gov. Odell to aid him in the municipal campaign. The New York member of the commission will be expected to devote his attention to the transit problems of the city with a view to correcting some of the abuses now the subject of complaint.

In view of the fact that Mayor McClellan will be empowered under his Water Commission bill to appoint a commission of three, the commission having power to name a Secretary and whatever clerical force it may deem necessary, it is the belief among the Republican politicians that Gov. Higgins will take all three of the members of the State Water Commission from up State. No names have as yet been suggested.

There has been considerable speculation as to the make-up of the Lighting Commission. The general opinion is that the Governor will appoint one of the members of that commission from New York, one from Buffalo, and one from some city in the central part of the State. It is possible that some of the men who served on the Gas Investigating Committee may receive appointments on this commission.

None of the appointments on the Water, Lighting, or Railroad Commissions is to be made, it is understood, until State Chairman Odell returns from abroad and Gov. Higgins has consulted him.

The appointment of James S. Whipple to be Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner leaves a vacancy in the position of Secretary of the Senate. While the Senate selects its own Secretary, the choice is usually made in obedience to the wishes of the organization. There is little doubt that the choice of the organization for this post will be Lafayette B. Gleason of Delaware County. Mr. Gleason admittedly has placed the organization under obligations to him for the work which he has done in the campaigns of the past several years as head of the speakers' bureau, and besides he is in line of promotion, having been Clerk Whipple's chief assistant. The fact that Lieut. Gov. Bruce is also from Delaware County and that he and Col. Gleason are friends is another weighty influence in his favor.

Republican politicians will watch with great interest the manner in which Gov. Higgins distributes the new patronage at his disposal. They say that these appointments will clearly indicate whether or not Gov. Higgins has any desire to build up a following to procure his renomination.

VEILED MURDERESS DIES WITH 50 YEARS' SECRET

Henrietta Robinson, Long a Prisoner, Never Told Her Name.

SLEW TWO AT TROY IN 1853

Death Sentence Commuted, Spent Last Years in Asylum Lacemaking—Seventy-eight Years Old.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, May 14.—Henrietta Robinson, who was known as the "veiled murderess" and whose name was assumed, died at the Matteawan State Hospital this morning.

According to the only clue she ever gave to her identity, she belonged to one of the English titled families. This much of her secret was gleaned by hospital physicians about a year ago.

Securely sewed in her needle case the authorities found, after her death, a locket and a worn piece of newspaper, upon which was written:

When first I saw this world of joy and pain,
Assailed by doubt that ever will remain,
I wondered what it meant to live to die—
The question oft I pondered, but in vain.

Of late years she had been visited by no person but her attorney, who saw her once in about five years. She received a box at Christmas from a Philadelphia woman, whose identity the hospital authorities refuse to divulge. As no one has claimed the body, she will be buried in the hospital cemetery.

When it was apparent she was going to die, she was urged to reveal her identity, but refused. She said she had kept the secret during the half century she had been in prison and it would die with her.

Mrs. Robinson was arrested for the murder of Timothy Lanagan and Catherine Lubee in Troy in 1853. She insisted upon wearing a veil during her trial, although urged to remove it by the Judge and Martin I. Townsend, her attorney. She was convicted, sentenced to be hanged, and sent to Sing Sing in 1855. Her sentence was commuted, and in 1873 she was sent to Auburn. About fifteen years ago she was removed to the Matteawan Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

She was a quiet prisoner, and of late years had spent her time in making lace, which she wore. The hospital records show that she was seventy-eight years old, but on her birthday anniversary last Wednesday she said she was eighty-nine.

SAY IT'S WASHINGTON'S HAIR.

Lock Found in Cedar Chest in Possession of Jersey Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISON, N. J., May 14.—Mrs. William McGarrett of 519 Bergen Street has in her possession a lock of hair said to be from the head of George Washington. The hair, with a medallion portrait of Washington, was found in a cedar box among Mrs. McGarrett's family possessions some time ago.

In the box was also found a letter describing the contents, and an affidavit as to its genuineness. The paper is headed: "The God-like Washington, died 14th Dec., 1799. All America in tears." It reads as follows.

"The within is the best likeness I have seen. The hair is of his own head. This will increase its value with time. It's my earnest Request this may be preserved to succeeding generations. The hair was presented to me by Maj. Billings, Continental Army. E. WATSON."

The box was presented by Major Billings to Miss Sarah Lawrence, who died in Woodside, L. I., in 1873, at the age of seventy-eight years. Before she died she gave the two mementos to her nephew, Richard L. Cooper, Mrs. McGarrett's first husband, who died thirty years ago. After her husband's death Mrs. McGarrett placed them in a cedar box, where they reposed for many years until recently. The hair is light brown in color and the picture is a small engraving.

Sanskrit Drama in Open Air.

The Progressive Stage Society will produce the Sanskrit drama "Sakutala," by Kalidasa, in the open air, on Saturday afternoon, June 17, at Arrochar, S. I. This will be the first of a series of open-air performances of Sanskrit and Greek dramas to help create a fund, which, it is hoped, will insure weekday performances by the society during the Winter.

MR. SHAW'S THREAT.

Without disrespect to the Secretary of the Treasury it may be suggested that he was not a happy choice to represent the President and the Government of the United States at the farewell banquet to the International Railway Congress on Saturday evening. He was not a happy choice because his mode of thinking and talking is not calculated to give the most favorable impression of our statesmen to a body of peculiarly able, keen, experienced, and influential men. There was, indeed, a sense in which the choice may be accepted as a good one. Mr. SHAW is a pretty fair representative of the protected and favored class who shape our commercial policy. Though our foreign visitors may not get a favorable impression of our statesmen from him, they may get a pretty accurate one, and may take home with them a reasonably correct notion of what the spirit of our commercial policy is and is likely to be.

What the Secretary of the Treasury really did was to convey to these gentlemen, representing the transportation enterprises and systems, and, indirectly, the entire business interests of all Europe, something very like a threat of tariff war, of retaliation, should any of the European nations pursue a line of conduct which some of them unquestionably intend to pursue. He started out with a somewhat grandiloquent statement of the equality of terms granted by the United States. "The Constitution," he pointed out, "insures to all the earth the right to buy in our markets on equal terms." We neither grant export bounties nor impose export duties. On the other hand, we also have "so far" offered equal terms to all sellers. Our "tariff duties imposed for purposes of protection, as well as those imposed for purposes of revenue, are equal as between those countries which protect their markets and those which make their markets free." We "criticise no nation for levying duties either for purposes of protection or for purposes of revenue, provided only"—and precisely here is the implied threat—"they are made to rest no more severely upon us than upon others."

The Secretary of the Treasury then went on to call attention to the fact that the United States has "never yet levied retaliatory tariffs." And he wound up with these words, which are distinctly minatory:

> I can therefore assure you, and our own people as well, that the world will never be involved in tariff wars or retaliatory legislation so long as the United States pursues its present policy and other countries do not discriminate against those who do not discriminate against them.

Consider for a moment the circumstances under which this announcement is made. The Finance Minister of our Government is naturally accepted by foreigners as speaking with especial authority on all matters of commerce, and as speaking not only for himself but for his Government. That would inevitably be true of any Minister of Finance in any foreign Government. Mr. SHAW, as we have said, was addressing men of influence in business from all parts of Europe. A few weeks since the Government of Germany announced to our own that it was about to change its tariff policy. The change intended is in substance that described by the Secretary of the Treasury. Germany does propose to levy higher duties on our goods than those she levies on the goods of nations that reduce their duties against her. She does, in the language of our Secretary of the Treasury, propose to "discriminate against those (including the United States) who do not discriminate against her," but who refuse to discriminate in her favor. We may add that this policy is already adopted by France and by several less important commercial nations. It becomes more conspicuous for us in the case of Germany because our trade with that country is larger and more varied than with any other European nation, and is second only to our trade with Great Britain.

We need not say that the "equality" in our treatment of all countries of which Mr. SHAW so roundly boasts is not in reality anything to be very proud of. In trade we treat all nations with impartial rudeness. We shut them all in like degree from our markets. And we do it because we are foolishly as much afraid of one as of another, and have the same narrow view of the expediency of exchange with one as with another. Owing to our vast and varied natural resources, to the energy of our people, to the rapid growth of our population by immigration, and most especially owing to the perfect freedom of trade within our own wide boundaries, we have prospered greatly. Finally we have reached a stage where foreign trade is valuable, and in the future must increase in value. Our second largest customer is tired of our attitude of grudging and greedy exchange and plainly tells us that she will try to bar us out of her markets unless we let down the bars to our own. And the answer of our Finance Minister is that if she does that we shall retaliate and put up higher bars. It would be the worst possible line to take. We are very sorry that Mr. SHAW was permitted to threaten that we would take it.

THE PRACTICAL TEST.

Mr. A. B. STICKNEY, President of the Chicago and Great Western Railroad, is one of the very few practical railroad men who have publicly avowed sympathy with the President's design to confer the ratemaking power upon the Inter-State Commerce Commission. In the statement he made before the Elkins Committee on Friday Mr. STICKNEY declared that the Commission would be "the most satisfactory arbiter possible"; he would have it fix minimum as well as maximum rates.

There was a statement made before the Elkins Committee a few weeks ago by another railroad man which it may be interesting to quote as a commentary upon Mr. STICKNEY'S opinion about the satisfactory arbitrament of the Federal Commission in the matter of railway rates. Mr. WALKER D. HINES, formerly First Vice President of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and now appearing before the committee in behalf of the Atlantic Coast Line, being asked by Senator CULLOM how the fixing of railroad rates in one part of the country could have any effect upon the business of railroads in other parts of the country, made this reply:

> Assume that the Commission should, as it tried to do in the Social Circle case, reduce the rate from Cincinnati to Atlanta. It attempted to reduce it in that case from $1.07 to $1. The rates from all points on the Ohio River are the same to Atlanta by all railroads. The rates from Memphis, Vicksburg, and New Orleans are 4 cents less to Atlanta and to all points taking Atlanta rates. That one reduction would have brought down the rates from Louisville and Evansville and Cairo the same as from Cincinnati; it would have brought down the rates from Memphis, Vicksburg, and New Orleans, and all points on the Mississippi, in the same way. That would no doubt have pulled down the rate from Mobile, which sells into that same territory in competition with New Orleans. That probably might have affected the rate from Montgomery, and have gone clear around the circle; and practically every rate to points in Southeastern territory (which consists of an important part of Alabama, all of Georgia, all of Florida, and some of South Carolina) would have been pulled down by that one reduction which the Commission made on the testimony of a single witness.

As a further commentary upon Mr. STICKNEY'S views the opinion of WILLIAM M. ACWORTH, M. P., one of the delegates of the British Government to the International Railway Congress, is worth noting. In England they have a Railway Commission which has not the power to fix rates or reduce rates, but has the power to forbid the increase of rates. In his statement before the Elkins Committee Mr. ACWORTH said:

> But as to ratemaking, I have no doubt that the interference of Parliament, the courts, and the Executive has all tended to stereotype and keep rates at an unnecessarily high level.

He was of the opinion that "the free play of the forces of the business world" would yield the best results in supplying a reasonable control over railroad rates. But he believed decidedly "that the community in some way should interfere to protect all customers from unfair treatment." In the judgment of men who have most deeply studied the railroad problem in the United States the views of Mr. ACWORTH are no less applicable here than in England.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN.

Here is a brief but adequate statement of the situation as to gas and electric companies: The people of New York demanded cheaper gas. A legislative committee appointed to investigate the conditions surrounding the manufacture and distribution of gas in this city decided that the demand of the people was reasonable and should be granted. An Eighty Cent Gas bill was introduced in the Legislature. It was beaten in the Senate, which is two-thirds Republican. Democrats aided in strangling it, but the chief responsibility was upon the Republicans. To escape the political consequences which threaten, the Republicans point to the passage of the State Gas and Electric Lighting Commission bill and declare that the Commission will give the gas consumers of New York the relief which the Legislature denied. Perhaps it will, but if it does the people will have to pay a price which we believe will stagger them when they come to understand the cost.

All that BENJAMIN B. ODELL did when he was Governor to centralize the powers of Government so as to increase the efficiency of the Republican State organization was insignificant in comparison with that which may be done if the State Gas and Electricity Commission bill becomes a law through the approval of Gov. HIGGINS. By the bill creating the Commission the Legislature delegates to the Commission all of the power that it possesses over the light and power companies of the State, with the single reservation that the Commission may not increase the maximum price of gas and electricity beyond the limits now fixed by law. With that sole exception, the power of the Commission is absolute with respect to light and power corporations. The Commission even has the power to refuse a certificate to do business to any company desiring to compete with any other company or companies already established. All local power over light and power corporations, which, for the most part, are purely municipal corporations, is abrogated. Never has there been struck a more deadly blow at home rule in the history of the State.

The State Gas and Electricity Commission will be a partisan Commission, and the members of it, appointed as they will be by the Governor and not directly responsible to the people for their conduct, would be more than human if they did not use the powers which they will wield for partisan advantage. The light and power companies of this State have an assessed valuation mounting into the hundreds of millions. With their corporate destiny in the hands of a Republican partisan Commission, how easy it ought to be for State Chairman ODELL to get campaign funds to the amount that he may deem necessary.

As a further step to the perpetuity of Republican power in the State, the Legislature at the special session might pass a bill conferring upon the Railroad Commission powers over railroads similar to those powers which will be exercised over light and power companies by the State Commission of Gas and Electricity, and with the unlimited funds which the Republicans would then be able to command what could wrest from them the control of the State Government?

THE MAYOR'S PROTEST.

Before accepting the Greater New York Water Supply bill Mayor MCCLELLAN was careful to record this protest against the mangling his original measure received at the hands of the Legislature:

> The bill as it is now presented to me is in many respects different from that which at my request was introduced in the Legislature over four months ago. It bears evidence of additions and omissions which represent the concessions to which the city was obliged to consent in order to secure any bill to provide for an additional water supply.
> I know the uselessness of complaint, but I wish to record the fact that this bill and the one originally introduced show by contrast what we sought and what we received, so that if supplemental legislation be necessary later on, it cannot be urged that this measure represents fully the claims of New York City.

The chief omission from the Mayor's bill is the section conferring upon this city full control of electrical power for street lighting, with the right to sell surplus power that may be generated from the streams it shall buy in the Catskills. The most objectionable addition is the section by virtue of which the City of New York "shall have no power to acquire" any additional watershed without the approval of the State Water Supply Commission.

This provision hamstrings the whole bill. How completely the State Commission dictated by Republican interests might delay, restrict, and nullify the operations of the Mayor's non-partisan Commission in its $100,000,000 project may be inferred from the fact that the Municipal Commissioners must prepare maps and plans for its approval; that by the terms of the act creating it the State Commission may prolong indefinitely the public hearings upon these plans; that after the last hearing ninety precious days may elapse, when the Commission may finally approve or "reject the application entirely," or return the plans, it may be, with such inimical amendments as the Mayor's bill has itself suffered.

The State Water Commission is bound to wield political influence through its power to subject the city to endless delays and restrictions. Manifestly it is better and cheaper to acquire lands in Ulster County and construct works commensurate with the requirements of a population which will amount to seven millions in 1925. The State Commission may not allow it. Incidentally such a foundation would provide the city with means of electric power more than sufficient to free it from the extortion of the lighting companies—it might sell power and thus reduce the water rates. But the Stevens Lighting bill, to which a State Lighting Commission string is carefully attached, forbids the sale of surplus power.

Altogether Ramapo, the city gas and electric-lighting companies, and Gov. ODELL ought to be more pleased with the water supply and power situation than this city, which appears to have surrendered its principle of home rule upon a doubtful chance. All depends upon Gov. HIGGINS'S right selection of men for the twin State Commissions.

JAPAN AND FRANCE.

We think it probable that Great Britain will be able to check the irritation felt in Japan as to the conduct of France. There was logical, if not legal, cause for irritation, but it is of the last importance to Great Britain that she should not be drawn into the war if it is possible to avoid it, and her recent understanding with France will help to make it impossible.

But meanwhile it will, perhaps, do no harm for France to get a realising sense of what complications may arise should she unnecessarily make an enemy of Japan, and to this realising sense the discussion now going on as to Indo-China will certainly contribute. The Government is said to be aroused by the protest of Japan as to violation of the Journal tells all about the interesting excursion. The story of the proceedings reads a good deal like the condensation of a chapter from HERMAN MELVILLE, except for the fact that the white men behaved themselves with a propriety and courtesy equal to those displayed by the savages, and that, certainly, is a distinctly modern innovation. Elaborate speeches were made, kava was ceremoniously prepared and imbibed, flower wreaths were distributed and worn, and innumerable gifts were exchanged according to the ancient custom. And the old Adams gravely fired salutes in honor of the great occasion. We are not told that any mention was made of LEARY the inimitable, but we have the faith to believe that he was not forgotten.

Bird Shooting in the Parks.

It is deeply humiliating to learn that there are in New York creatures made in fairly convincing imitation of human beings who are so determined to shoot the song birds in the Bronx reservation that the utmost efforts of the Zoological Park officials cannot wholly prevent them from hunting this sort of game there successfully. It is said that the majority of these criminals are poor Italians, who kill the birds for food, as they had done at home in the few places where there were any birds left to kill, and for these fellows there is a trace of excuse in their ignorance and their needs. It seems, however, that there are others for whom not even that much—or little—can be said, and one German is mentioned who, when arrested for shooting at robins, paid with a smile the dollar which was the absurd fine imposed upon him, and said that he had plenty more for buying sport at the same rate. That this outrageous person is a German is not, of course, an explanation of his outrageousness; it only emphasizes that quality by proving that he has intentionally and deliberately as well as laboriously protected himself from acquiring the decencies of civilization. The men who shoot birds in the New York parks are mere savages, without the mere savage's irresponsibility. Their conduct is so intensely irritating that it almost tempts us to retract everything we have ever said about the stupidity and uselessness of corporal punishment and to advocate the prolonged application to each of them, when caught, of an oaken or hickory club about four feet long and from two to three inches in diameter. We don't really think that a proper remedy for the evil, but it would have certain charms for the observer.

A NIAGARA COMPROMISE.

Suggestion That Power Companies Use the Water at Night Only.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A letter published in yesterday's TIMES defends the utilization of the waters of Niagara on the ground that the volume of water now used has not noticeably affected the Falls. If the power companies would stop right where they are this would be a good defense, but it is well known that not only are the existent companies seeking further concessions, but new concerns are anxious to enter this field, which is a veritable Klondike.

This morning's TIMES, by the way, published the fact that a company with $5,000,000 capital has just been organized for the exploitation of Niagara power throughout the State. It does not take a prophet to foresee that Niagara Falls is doomed unless the United States and Canada reach an understanding on this matter and pass uniform laws for their preservation.

A satisfactory compromise between the utilitarians and idealists may be effected by permitting the companies to use the full power of the Falls, say, from a half hour after sundown until sunrise; the rest of the time the waters would be allowed to flow over the Falls in their full pristine glory. PENSIONS AND SOCIALISM.

Their Relation as Indicated by the Vetoed Yale Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note in to-day's TIMES your apparent approval of the Mayor's veto of "the Yale bill for pensioning city employes." I am with you so far. Now, you are willing to make an individual exception, but say, "to that extent the bill must make a precedent, and, of course, precedents of this sort are always stretched. * * * And if the Legislature stretch the precedent it will to that extent really violate the precedent." This position seems to me inconsistent with the first; in fact, the last sentence is a paradox. This is merely apropos to my subject.

Individualism means independence and progress; Socialism means stagnation and decay. I wish to enter my protest against our rapid drift toward Socialism. Socialism has simmered and boiled a long time, and it is now kicking up in the pot and needs a bucket of cold water thrown in to assuage it. A definition of Socialism is that "two-thirds of the people would be paying all they could to support the other third." The drones would propagate their kind far more rapidly and decadence would be inevitable.

PHILARETAN.

Brooklyn, May 12, 1905.

A Truly Moving Appeal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some of your friends are grieved over the extra judicial tone of your utterances since you moved up to Times Square. That you are not in doubt of the soundness of your lofty position may be inferred from the alacrity with which you publish letters from correspondents when they agree with you; for example, in the Nan Patterson case. Whether communications not in accord with your views are published or not is immaterial.

In the good old days of Printing House Square you never would have presumed to change judicial procedure in a single day by announcing, as you did recently, that counsel for the people in a famous criminal trial would sum up to the jury first, to be followed by counsel for the accused. And you've fallen into slang, too. Would your great ally in London understand what is meant by saying it is "up to" so-and-so? Please come back to your old home before it is too late.

JAMES A. DOUGLAS.

New York, May 12, 1905.

The Prosperous Police Pensioner.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. R. J. Forbes's article in your paper this morning is quite right. I think it is a shame that policemen that are pensioned off should secure other positions. I know of several myself that are pensioned and have positions with banks or insurance companies, with any number of good men out of work.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Anti-Pass Laws and Their Obligations.

President STICKNEY of the Chicago Great Western Railroad may not have been speaking as an altogether disinterested moralist when he suggested to the members of the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce a division of responsibility for violations of the anti-free pass laws between those who take the illegal passes and those who issue them. Presumably, however, he spoke with accuracy as well as from knowledge, and the charges he made lacked only names to be quite explicit. "As an individual rule of action," he said, "the law against free passes was ignored by the Congressmen who passed it and by the President who approved it, and subsequent Congressmen and Presidents, with rare exceptions, have ignored its provisions. Traveling they present the evidence of their misdemeanor before the eyes of the public in a way which indicates no regard for the law. The Governors of the States, many of them, Judges—in short, all officialdom from the highest to the lowest—the higher clergy, college professors, editors, merchants, bankers, lawyers, present the evidence of their misdemeanor in the same manner." That includes practically everybody to whom the railways would ever be likely to give a pass, and amounts to little less than an accusation that nobody feels that anti-pass laws impose an obligation on the traveling public as well as on the purveyors of transportation. So the charge is the often reprehended indictment of a whole people, and it may well be asked if an obligation unfelt by an enormous majority of consciences really exists. What Mr. STICKNEY ignored is the great difference between the quality of laws that formulate recognized moral principles and those that merely penalize an act of no intrinsic moral quality. The anti-pass laws threaten with fines corporations that give to some the service they sell to others. It has no menace for the ordinary pass-taker, and we cannot see that the latter, when conscious that he accepts the favor with no intention of doing anything wrong in return for it, is in a particularly parlous state. He is, all things considered, an unwise person, for he knows or ought to know that pass-giving is on the whole a bad business, but he does not violate the law, and he does not exactly encourage others to do so. Of course, the man in or out of official life to whom the pass is a bribe occupies a wholly different position, and Mr. STICKNEY'S "you, too," was in his case all right.

Once Famous and Still Afloat.

In the days, not very remote, when there was a "Samoan question" of an importance since obscured by that of questions more exciting, we heard a good deal about the man-of-war Adams and the remarkable RICHARD LEARY, himself most distinctly a man of war as well as of impish humor, who commanded her. The Adams, even then fitter for a naval museum than the high seas, conducted herself with scandalously enjoyable impudence in the amazed presence of German and English ships to which her destruction would have been a mere ripple on the idle hour before luncheon time. The infinitely more valuable LEARY is gone now, but the old Adams is still at Tutuila, and, though condemned, dismantled, and generally forlorn, she was yet found capable only last month of carrying Commander MOORE and a picturesquely variegated suite on a trip that the lamented LEARY would have enjoyed intensely. For the object of the journey was to convey to the chiefs on the outlying Manua'an group certain medals, watches, and diplomas sent to them by President ROOSEVELT in recognition of the wisdom and good taste that led them last year to petition for participation in the blessings of American rule. DR. MacARTHUR HONORED.

At End of Thirty-five Years at Calvary —Never Absent Through Illness.

Thirty-five years of pastoral work at the Calvary Baptist Church were completed yesterday by the Rev. Robert S. MacArthur, and appropriate services were held. On Saturday night Dr. MacArthur was entertained at dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria by the Trustees of the church and a massive solid silver loving cup was presented to him. To-night there will be a gathering in the church to continue the celebration, and on Tuesday the congregation, in honor of Dr. and Mrs. MacArthur, will hold a reunion and sociable in the chapel.

The pulpit was draped with the American flag at the services yesterday. At the morning service Mr. William M. Isaacs, the clerk of the church in 1870, who wrote the letter calling Dr. MacArthur to the charge, presided. Several ministers of the Baptist Church were also present and took part in the service.

Dr. MacArthur in his sermon reviewed the more personal side of his work, pointing out that he had never missed a Sunday through illness, and declaring that he now was entering his thirty-sixth year with renewed strength.

"One special point," he said, "is that this pastorate has been and in all probability will be the one pastorate of my ministry. Perhaps when my work at Calvary is done, some work may be found as Bishop at Large with some section of the country as my diocese. It has been shown by experience how much good a retired pastor can do in this capacity."

APPROVAL OF RUSSIA.

Says Other Governments Could Stop Her Outrages If They Would.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What would be the attitude of a civilized man, professedly a Christian, to a neighbor who maltreats his children, beats his servants, and wantonly crushes his dependents for no reason except to show and maintain his unlimited authority? Would not the gentleman in question remonstrate with his barbaric neighbor, show him the evil of his ways, and admonish him to desist? And if his efforts prove vain and the neighbor persist in his cruelties, would the gentleman continue his friendship with him, hobnob with him, congratulate him upon the birth of a son or condole with him over the bruises received during his misdeeds?

The truly refined man would probably sever all friendly connections with the obnoxious neighbor, and call upon his good friends to do likewise. Now, a nation is but an assemblage of individuals, and the rule of conduct of an individual should hold good for a nation. The Russian Government has been committing murder en masse. The massacres of Kishineff, of Gomel, the outrages at Baku, the slaughter at St. Petersburg on Jan. 22, are but a few of its doings. While these lines are being written the newspapers tell of horrors and outrages in Zhitomir. One asks one's self, Is this 1905 or 905? Are these calm lookers-on civilized Europeans and Americans, or are they savage islanders who value human life but lightly and shudder not at bloodshed?

If England, the United States, Germany, Austria, France, &c., should call on Russia to desist, she would have to comply with their request. And would it not behoove our President, rather than to condole with the Czar over the death of the unspeakable Sergius, to express to him the indignation of the American people over the outrages perpetrated by his Government? MORE SUBWAY SIGNS AGAIN.

The Argument of Utility Carried to Its Unpleasant but Logical End.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The reappearance in this morning's issue of a letter advocating "Subway Signs" affords a desired opportunity to present opposing views. Firstly, your correspondent appears to represent the class that is interested in signs, in ignoring any aesthetic, refining, or educational influence in the surroundings or artistic objects in a city. Why not, then, build our Custom House or our churches of rough brick or leave our parks in primitive condition? But having "foolishly" expended so much money in rendering the Subway station another pleasing structure, such a view would indorse the vandals who dare to deface the Palisades, reduce Niagara to a colony for factories, or plaster our architectural achievements with vulgar displays of personal interest.

Persons in such a frame of mind have doubtless been educated to it, for on my initial visit to this city I was first impressed by the loud display of signs, almost covering the buildings, as if each occupant endeavored to exceed the others in violent proclamation of his business; however, that was on his own premises.

But, secondly, and what appears to a large proportion of us, the public, as the most offensive phase, is that the power of money should enable the vandals to deface public places, which belong to the people, by obtruding upon the eye at every turn their private interests.

ARTESIAN WELLS WANTED.

A Suggestion for the Relief of the Needs of Staten Island.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that Gov. Stokes of New Jersey has signed the bill (as reported in this morning's TIMES) forbidding the sale of potable water outside the State, which kills that $1,500,000 scheme for supplying Staten Island by a pipe line across the Kill Von Kull by a private Jersey corporation, it is a great pity we have not officials with sufficient "grace, grit, and gumption" to make an exhaustive search of the possibilities of the island for an artesian supply.

A professional well driller makes the assertion that there is an unlimited supply at a moderate depth, and a professional man stated recently that at 700 feet depth there would no doubt be found sufficient water for some time to come.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Port Richmond, S. I., May 13, 1905.

Nobody Was Offended.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Representative Smith of Michigan tells this story:

"A certain citizen of my district was called upon to defend a man who had soundly whipped a worthless individual. He had been indicted for assault and battery, 'contrary to the peace and dignity of the people of Michigan.' The lawyer contended that the prosecution could not hope to convict unless the entire allegation was proved. 'We admit the assault and battery,' he said, 'but we deny that it was contrary to the peace and dignity of the people of Michigan.'

"The jury so held, and the fellow was acquitted."

Consideration.

From The Chicago News.

De Long—I say, old man, when are you going to pay back the $10 I let you have six months ago?

Shortwad—Oh, in a few days. I would have paid it back long ago, only I was afraid of hurting your feelings.

De Long—In what way?

Shortwad—I didn't want you to think I thought you needed the money.

WORLD'S RAILWAY HEADS OPPOSE LAW-MADE RATES

But Favor Legal Bar to Discriminative Charges.

300 DELEGATES GO ON TOUR

Remarkable Railway Appliance Exhibition Ends with the Congress—Auto Cars Discussed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The action of greatest public interest of any at the seventh session of the International Railway Congress, just closed here, was the framing of its conclusions on railway rates as follows:

"Tariffs should be based on commercial principles, taking into account the special conditions which bear upon the commercial value of the services rendered. With the reservation that rates shall be charged without arbitrary discrimination to all shippers alike under like conditions, the making of rates should as far as possible have all the elasticity necessary to permit the development of the traffic and to produce the greatest results to the public and to the railroads themselves."

These conclusions were ratified at the close of the session, after President Roosevelt's speeches had been a topic of discussion and two days after Secretary Taft's address. Delegates from every country in which railways operate took part, and the conclusions were unanimous.

The probable future of auto cars on railways, particularly in the suburban traffic problem, aroused discussion. The conclusions of the congress follow:

"It may be expected that from now on automobile cars and auto motors hauling trailers will constitute a valuable means of transportation, which on some lines will have a great future. Owing to the saving in the number of employes required, the probable reduction in cost of maintenance, the material reduction in the cost of traction and better utilization of rolling stock, and the smaller extent of station installations required, it will be possible materially to reduce the cost of working lines with little traffic, and will, in the cases of other lines, result in a material improvement in the working of some classes of service. Their use will certainly effect a change in the system of operation in the case of a great number of lines, and appears to have a real future before it."

Particular attention was devoted by the Congress to the subject of light and ventilation of cars. Electric lighting shows advantages for intermittent lighting on lines where there are frequent tunnels, and for operating driving fans.

There is a tendency to extend the use of steam heating in many countries. To obtain sufficient heat for long trains and for times when the temperature is particularly low, it is found advisable to use special pipes or mix compressed air with the steam. On several American railways now fresh air is circulated through the cars, forcing the foul air out at the top.

One striking difference in railway practice in the United States and abroad came out in the discussion of branch roads, or "light railways," as the Europeans call them. Here they are built by private enterprise. In Europe they frequently demand State aid and get more liberal terms than those afforded main lines.

"The Congress expresses the wish," the report continues, "that the present tendency of legislation to establish more liberal regulations for lines with small traffic and light trains may become more general, and that the efforts of the managements to equip their light traffic lines with a more economical organization, which promise to give remarkable results, be continued."

Methods of treating railway ties chemically to protect them against deterioration and lessen the demands on the country's forest supply were favored, and it was urged that careful records of experimentation be kept.

The railway appliance exposition which has just closed here as an attendant feature of the congress cost many thousand dollars. It is said by railroad men that it is the first time in the history of modern transportation that such a show has been organized at such cost to be open to the public for so short a period as ten days. The work of dismantling the buildings and removing the machinery began yesterday afternoon, and will be completed to-morrow night. The exposition was placed in the park around the Washington Monument, and, although crowds were on the grounds daily during the last week but little damaged was done to grass or shrubbery.

No value can be set on the machinery exhibited, but the fact that the American manufacturers were willing to spend so much money on an exhibition to be open only ten days astonished foreign visitors. The engineers and mechanical men of the more important railroads were summoned by their chiefs to inspect the exhibits.

The social features of the congress were largely in the hands of Samuel Spencer, President of the Southern Railway; Stuyvesant Fish, President of the Illinois Central, and George Westinghouse. Mr. Spencer and Mr. Westinghouse have quarters in Washington, and Mr. Fish, President of the American Railway Association, took a house here for the occasion.

Two parties of the foreign delegates left Washington to-night on tours of the United States, as guests of the American Railway Association. The parties include about 300 delegates, and occupy four special trains. One party will reach New York on May 23, after having visited Altoona, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Schenectady, and Boston. The other is due in New York on May 27, stopping on its way at Altoona, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Saratoga, Schenectady, and Albany.

The Wrath-Inciting British Flag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Walking up lower Fifth Avenue yesterday morning the writer, whose great-grandfather, a British hireling, wounded and all but killed with a British bullet at Bunker Hill the great-grandfather of "Reciprocity," was aroused to mad-bull ferocity to observe a red rag floating jauntily from a hotel window in the fresh Spring breeze. Unfortunately the police were on hand and the red rag was too high to reach and tear down. Continuing his walk up the avenue the writer devoutly thanked God that the flag of Britain is indeed a rara avis in this town.

Zealot for Truth, and Beauty's arch-priest, too,
Whose fervent youth in worship overflowed,
Whose burning tongue proclaimed as sovereign code
The will to serve and energy to do,
Who to all tyrants' lips did press the rue
Of thy fierce scorn, what stern emprise is owed
This century past to thee! What hearts have glowed
To seek with thee the glad, the high, the true!
One hundred years since thy mere mold of clay
Was broken and resigned to parent earth!
Yet knows that Bell, thy spirit, no decay;
Its resonant tone reveals the fine alloy,
And to our ears, on its harmonious girth,
The ancient gods still ring the chimes of Joy!

HERMAN MONTAGUE DONNER.

GETS CROKER'S BODY; POLICE INQUIRY ENDS

Richard Croker, Jr., Told Murder Theory Is Not Justified.

THE NEGRO GUIDE RELEASED

Police Will Prosecute Chinamen for Running Illegal Resort—Tammany ex-Leader Not Expected.

NEWTON, Kan., May 14.—Richard Croker, Jr., arrived from New York today and went to the undertaking rooms in which the body of his brother, Herbert, lay. He identified the body as that of his brother and gave directions to have it sent to New York on a Santa Fé train at midnight. Mr. Croker and two friends from New York accompany the body.

Mr. Croker said that decision as to an autopsy would depend on the wishes of his mother, but he thought an autopsy unlikely. He identified the clothing found here as his brother's.

He said his brother did not have any jewelry upon his person when he left New York, and not much money as he expected to use drafts. Herbert Croker's baggage cannot be found. It was shipped from Kansas City to Bliss, Oklahoma, but has not been received at Bliss.

KANSAS CITY, May 14.—The police have completed their investigation of the visit of Herbert V. Croker to an opium resort and to North End saloons preceding his death in a Santa Fé train near Newton, Kan., on Friday morning, and, unless the relatives request it, will take no further action.

Charles Wilson, negro porter at the Coates Hotel, who accompanied Croker to the opium den and later put him on a train, was released from jail to-day. Ah Lee and Gee Khee, proprietors of the opium joint, are held and will be prosecuted in police court for conducting an illegal business.

Richard Croker, Jr., was met at the Kansas City station to-day by two detectives, who told him the particulars of his brother's visit to Kansas City. Mr. Croker asked if it could be possible that his brother had been murdered. When told that the result of the investigation did not justify that belief, he intimated that no further investigation would be requested.

Mr. Croker said that his brother left New York with $100, and that his family did not know that he intended to stop at Kansas City.

Chief of Police Hayes said to-day:

"I am confident that young Croker met with no violence or foul play in Kansas City. We have run down every clue, and our search has always brought us back to the story told by the negro porter, which I think is right. On this account I ordered the release of the porter. In my opinion Croker came to Kansas City Friday morning, probably on the Santa Fé train which reached here at 1:30. He went to the Coates House, and from there to the races.

"He returned from the track in the evening, and was then taken in tow by the negro. We have investigated the story that Croker won $200 on the races, and was robbed afterward, and have been unable to verify it. I think the negro told the truth when he said that Croker had only a twenty-dollar bill. The case has now been dismissed, and nothing more will be done unless the relatives ask for further investigation.

"I think that the young man's constitution was not strong enough to stand the form of dissipation that he indulged in here. After drinking hard he smoked opium, which proved too much for his heart."

Friends of the Croker family last evening said that the funeral would be held at the residence, 5 East Seventy-fourth Street, and later at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, where the funeral of Frank Croker was held in January. Until the arrival of Richard, Jr., with the body of his brother plans for the funeral will not be made.

The impression grows that Richard Croker, the former leader of Tammany Hall, will not again make the trip to this country.

ROBERT J. WYNNE HERE.

Consul General to London Comes to Testify at Beavers's Trial.

Only two of the four transatlantic liners that passed Nantucket Saturday made port in time to dock yesterday, the fortunate vessels being the American liner St. Louis, from Southampton, and the White Star liner Cedric, from Liverpool. The Cunarder Slavonia, from the Mediterranean, and the Anchor liner Columbia, from Glasgow, were the other two ships that passed Sandy Hook late in the afternoon, having been held outside nearly all day by the dense fog that blanketed the coast yesterday.

On the St. Louis, which docked early in the morning, one of the passengers was ex-Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne, now Consul General at London, and Mrs. Wynne. Mr. Wynne comes home to testify in the Beavers trial. He is also one of the defendants in the suit brought by Mae Catherine Wood, who says that he and William Loeb, Jr., Secretary to the President, were instrumental in procuring certain valuable letters of hers in Washington several months ago.

On the Cedric were Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Huntington. Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, Mr. Huntington's mother, met them at the pier. Others on board were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Eustis, Lady Kirkpatrick of Canada, and the Rev. J. A. French.

CITIZENS' UNION SLATE.

To be Prepared by a Committee to be Chosen To-night.

The City Committee of the Citizens' Union is to meet to-night at the headquarters, Union Square East, for the purpose of appointing a committee to submit a slate of nominations for the offices on the city ticket. It is expected by some that this committee will be authorized to confer with similar committees of other political organizations opposed to Tammany Hall as an organization.

Rumors are many as to what this committee will do. There are those who are of the belief that an indorsement of the McClellan administration will be asked. That such a resolution would be bitterly fought is conceded.

Rifleman-Preacher Resigns.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., May 14.—The Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Linden Baptist Church, surprised his congregation today by announcing his resignation, to take effect on June 15. All he would say about the reason for his action was that a place in the northern part of New Jersey had been offered to him, and that he would probably accept it. His new work, he said, was of a religious nature. Mr. Hare is Chaplain of the Third Regiment, National Guard of New Jersey, and is an expert rifle shot.

Dinner to German Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Senator and Mrs. Newlands of Nevada gave a dinner to-night to Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassador, and the Baroness. Among those present were Secretary and Mrs. Taft, Associate Justice Brown of the United States Supreme Court and Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Nicholas Fish, Lieut. and Mrs. von Bredow, and Col. Clarence R. Edwards. Lieut. and Mrs. Von Bredow, the latter a daughter of Senator Newlands, have just returned from their wedding tour, and will sail for Germany on May 20.

JESSIE BARTLETT DAVIS DIES.

Singer Expires Suddenly at Her Home in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Jessie Bartlett Davis, the singer, died suddenly at her home in this city to-day of heart disease, superinduced by nephritis. She was taken ill on Friday, on Saturday morning became unconscious, and remained in that condition to the end. She was forty-six years old.

Jessie Bartlett Davis was born on a farm near Morris, Ill. Her parents were Elias Lynn and Rachel Ann Bartlett. She received her musical education under Frederick Root of Chicago, where she sang contralto in the Church of the Messiah. In July, 1879, she joined the Chicago Church Choir "Pinafore" company, in which she gained a wide reputation as Buttercup. She next made her début in Italian opera in New York, singing Siebel to Mme. Patti's Marguerite in "Faust."

She joined the Carleton Opera Company and later the American Opera Company, touring the United States in both. After studying for one season in Paris, she became prima donna of the Bostonians.

It was in this position that she did her best work and achieved a reputation which made her name almost a household word. She sang a wide range of parts with averaging success, but made her chief hit while a member of the Bostonians in De Koven's opera, "Robin Hood," never failing to rouse the enthusiasm of the audience with the song, "Oh, Promise Me."

This song she continued to sing when she severed her connection with the Bostonians in 1901 to enter vaudeville, where it was said that she received a salary of $1,000 a week. Her last regular engagement in opera was with Francis Wilson's company in "Erminie" last year.

Mrs. Davis was the wife of Will J. Davis, a theatrical manager of this city, who was part proprietor and manager of the ill-fated Iroquois Theatre in Chicago.

WILLIAM E. STRONG DEAD.

Was a Member of the Stock Exchange Firm of Strong, Sturgis & Co.

William Everard Strong of the banking house of Strong, Sturgis & Co., 30 Broad Street, died at his home, 176 Madison Avenue, yesterday, after a brief attack of pneumonia. Mr. Strong was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1836, and came to New York in 1864. His wife, who survives him, was Miss Alice Smith of Alexandria, Va. He is survived also by two daughters—Mrs. Norton Gage of England and Miss Alice Strong of this city.

Mr. Strong was a member of the Stock Exchange, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Union, Knickerbocker, Players, Racquet, and Riding Clubs, and of the New England Society. He was also a Director in several corporations, one of them being the Iowa Central Railway Company.

HOWARD M. TICKNOR DEAD.

Author and Critic Passes Away at His Home in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Howard Malcolm Ticknor, author, lecturer, and critic, is dead at his home here after a brief illness.

He was a native of Boston, whence he came a few months ago.

Howard Malcolm Ticknor was born in Boston on July 4, 1836, graduated from Harvard in 1856, and then for two years studied vocal music in Italy. In 1864 he was a member of the publishing firm of Ticknor & Fields. Later he was assistant editor of The Atlantic Monthly and editor of Our Young Folks. From 1868 to 1878 he was a Vice Consul in Italy. On returning to this country he became instructor of elocution at Harvard and Brown Universities. Subsequently he became musical and dramatic critic on various Boston papers.

Mr. Ticknor succeeded his father as a member of the famous Boston publishing house of Ticknor, Reed & Fields, who were the publishers of Longfellow, Whittier, Emerson, Holmes, and Lowell, and who also introduced Tennyson and Browning to American readers.

NEWSBOYS TO BURY MATE.

Save "Dutch" Johnson, Victim of Pneumonia, from Potter's Field.

Frederick Johnson, nineteen years old, who lived for years in the Newsboys' Lodging House at 14 New Chambers Street and who died in Bellevue Hospital last Friday, will be saved from a burial in Potter's Field by his former comrades, and to-day his remains will be buried in Linden Hill Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Johnson, who was known as "Dutch" by the newsboys, died of pneumonia. Perhaps he smoked too many cigarettes, the boys say, although Superintendent Heig of the home tried to cure him of the habit.

The boys and his employers subscribed to a fund to provide for the burial, after prevailing on the Bellevue authorities to hold the body until to-day.

The funeral will take place from Herrlich's undertaking rooms at 506 Sixth Street at 11 o'clock this morning, and newsboys will act as pall bearers and attend the services.

TO KEEP THE IRVING PLACE.

Report That Conried Was to Lease Theatre Denied by His Lawyer.

A report to the effect that Heinrich Conried was to lease the Irving Place Theatre to a producer of melodrama has been circulating in theatrical circles for three or four days, but ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, counsel for Mr. Conried, denied yesterday that there was any truth in it.

"I was talking to Mr. Conried yesterday," said Judge Dittenhoefer, "and I am sure he has no intention of leasing the Irving Place Theatre. As far as I know, the policy of the Irving Place Theatre will be the same that it has been since Mr. Conried took possession."

Senator Tillman Well Again.

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 14.—United States Senator Tillman of South Carolina, who went to Atlanta about two weeks ago, to be treated for nervous trouble, passed through Augusta to-day on his way back to his home at Trenton, S. C., much improved and apparently cured.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—There will be showers and thunderstorms Monday in Atlantic Coast districts, also in the Gulf States, and rain is probable in the lake region. Tuesday will be generally fair, except in the lake region and Ohio Valley, where showery weather will continue.

Important temperature changes are not anticipated.

The winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be increasing south, with thunderstorms and squalls; on the South Atlantic Coast fresh south, with occasional thunder squalls; on the lower lakes fresh to brisk south winds and thunder squalls, and on the upper lakes fresh northwest.

Steamships departing Monday for European ports will have fresh southwest winds and showery weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, and New Jersey—Showers and thunderstorms Monday and Tuesday; fresh to brisk south winds, with occasional thunder squalls.

New England—Showers and thunderstorms Monday and probably Tuesday, increasing south winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania—Showers and thunderstorms Monday; cooler along the lakes; Tuesday, fair; fresh west winds.

	1904.	1905.
3 A. M.	56	54
6 A. M.	55	54

MERCIFUL MARK TWAIN WRITES TO MAIMED GIRL

Wouldn't Break Railway Officials' Necks—Only Legs.

SYMPATHY FOR THE INVALID

Miss Sinsheimer Was Hurt in Newark Grade-Crossing Disaster—Humorist Sends Her a Book.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Mark Twain has written a sympathetic letter to Miss Madeline Sinsheimer of this city, who is an invalid as the result of the Clifton Avenue grade crossing accident of more than two years ago, in which nine pupils of the Newark High School lost their lives. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Miss Madeline: Your good and admiring and affectionate brother has told me your sorrowful share in the trolley disaster which brought unaccustomed tears to millions of eyes and fierce resentment against those whose criminal indifference to their responsibilities caused it; and the reminder has brought back to me a pang of that bygone time.

"I wish I could take you sound and whole out of your bed and break the legs of those officials and put them in it—to stay there. In my spirit I am merciful, and would not break the necks and backs also, as some who have no feeling.

"It is your brother who permits me to write you this line, and so it is not an intrusion, you see.

"May you get well, and soon.

Mr. Clemens also inscribed this characteristic line in one of his books which he sent to the sufferer:

"One of the most remarkable differences between a lie and a cat is that the cat has only nine lives.

"Truly yours,

"MARK TWAIN."

Miss Sinsheimer will never fully recover from the effects of her injuries, and was removed Thursday from her home, 254 Fairmount Avenue, to the Orthopedic Hospital in Philadelphia.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dr. Alexander W. Rogers.

PATERSON, N. J., May 14.—Dr. Alexander W. Rogers, the oldest physician in this city, and the oldest graduate of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, died here to-night. Dr. Rogers was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1814. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1836, and from the following year practiced in this city. His father was a Baptist clergyman, and Dr. Rogers was prominent in Baptist work. He personally supported a missionary in India, and was active in local church work.

He founded the Passaic County Medical Society. He visited Europe frequently, and paid his last visit last Summer. Many years ago he ran for Mayor on the Prohibition ticket. His wife died in 1893. James H. Rogers, a prominent lawyer, is a son.

Col. James Perley Page.

Col. James Perley Page died at his home, 12 West Forty-fourth Street, yesterday of pneumonia. Col. Page was sixty-eight years of age. He was a member of the Republican Club. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 10:30 A. M. in the chapel of the Collegiate Church.

Obituary Notes.

S. J. HENRY of Wakefield, in the Bronx, died on Saturday of apoplexy. Mr. Henry was sixty years old, and for many years was a carriage manufacturer. He was a member of Greenwich Lodge, F. and A. M. The funeral is to be held to-day in the Wakefield Methodist Episcopal Church.

M. B. COPELAND, President of the Middletown National Bank, died yesterday, in his seventy-seventh year, of a general breakdown. He had been President of the bank since 1883, and Treasurer of the Connecticut Hospital for the Insane since the institution was founded about thirty years ago.

Pittsburg Bats Out a Victory Over Brooklyn by a Score of 5 to 1.

There was not so large an attendance at Washington Park yesterday to see the Brooklyn and Pittsburg teams play the game that was scheduled for Wednesday as on the previous Sundays, but considering the uncertainty of the weather, the turnout was as good as could have been expected, at least 5,000 persons being present.

The contest was an interesting one because of the fine displays in the field and the closeness of the score for seven innings. Even when the ex-champions gradually drew away from Hanlon's men the local enthusiasts continued to "root" hard for their favorites, and this state of affairs prevailed until Dobbs, the last man at the bat, struck out, when the score was 5 to 1 in Pittsburg's favor.

The victory of the visitors was due to their superior batting, for both teams fielded almost perfectly, a wild throw by Ritchey being the only mistake of the game. Leever was in excellent pitching form, as was shown by the batting record of the Brooklyns. Sheckard and Batch were the only men to hit him safely, Batch being credited with two of the three hits. Eason, too, did creditable work for five innings, one hit being the total of the Pittsburgs' efforts. Then the visitors seemed to gauge his delivery, and, with the exception of the seventh inning, batted him lively.

Although the Pittsburgs had men on bases both in the first and third innings, due principally to bases on balls, it was not until the sixth inning that they scored. Beaumont led off with a safe hit to short stop, and on Howard's sacrifice reached second. Wagner batted strongly to left for a base, but Beaumont in his eagerness to reach the plate from second base was caught easily by a pretty throw of Sheckard to Bergen. With Wagner on third and two out, Clancy put a ball over the right field fence and two earned runs were the result. The visitors had six men to the bat in the eighth inning, and although they collected a three-base hit and two singles, only one runner crossed the plate. Beaumont opened with a three-base hit to left field, and he tallied on Howard's one-base stroke to centre. Wagner followed with a hit to left field, but Clancy was thrown out at first by Bergen. Ritchey's hit to Lewis caused the retirement of Howard at the plate, and Wagner was left on third by McBride's out from Lewis to Babb. The Pittsburgs made two more runs in the ninth on two bases on balls, a single by Clarke, and Wagner's double to left field.

The Brooklyns were retired in regular order in the first three innings, but in the fourth Batch hit a two-bagger to centre field and Owens got first on called balls. Lewis ended the inning by flying out to centre. In the fifth inning Howard made a sensational catch of Dobbs's hit just as the ball was about to strike the fence. The Brooklyns' only run came in the sixth inning by Sheckard's two-base hit to between centre and right fields, Lumley's out, and Batch's single.

Chicago Finds Puttmann's Pitching Easy to Hit and Wins by 9 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The Chicagos made the series with New York an even break up to date by walloping Griffith's men at a 9 to 3 gait to-day. The game was the exact opposite of the one of yesterday, however, for both teams banged the ball hard, the local men striving to make enough hits to keep their batting averages from shrinking to invisibility. They had another incentive, too, for Griffith sent to the rubber the elongated pitcher named Puttmann, whose side-wheel, windmill style of delivery had put them down and out of the pennant race on one Sunday last Fall, just as they were at the top of their stride in the final spurt. Yesterday was the first time they had seen him since, and they accepted the chance to even up old scores by pasting him for twelve hits and a total of seventeen bases. Better than that, they bunched them, while the visitors wasted a lot of theirs by scattering them.

Altrock had the goods when the pinch came, and although the visitors batted him for nine safeties, including a home run into the left field bleachers, they could sneak only three runs across the plate, chiefly because he had all the base runners hugging their bases. Fast, steady support helped him out all the time. Puttmann's support was almost equally strong, but a "three-base error" by Chase, who performed miracles on several difficult catches, added two runs to the Chicagos' total late in the proceedings.

The visitors went after Altrock hard in the eighth inning and banged out three singles, which scored a run, but a fast double play on Conroy's hit to Dundon stopped the fireworks. In their half the Chicagos tallied three runs on one hit. The score:

Baltimore's Batting and Hesterfer's Pitching Causes Newark's Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Poor grounds, Hesterfer's wildness, and Baltimore's excellent fielding were responsible for Newark's defeat by Baltimore to-day by the score of 6 to 1. Mason's good work in the box was a feature. The visitors led off with a run in the first inning, followed by another in the second, two in the fifth, and an equal number in the ninth. Score:

POLO SUPPLANTS GOLF AT ESSEX COUNTY CLUB

Historic Field Will Again Be Used by the Horsemen.

INTER-CLUB GAMES PLANNED

Graham Douglas of Squadron A Is Captain of the Team—Veterans to Resume Practice.

With the revival of polo this season at the Essex County Country Club of Orange, N. J., one of the original clubs in the Polo Association will again take its place among the active participants in the game. Polo has not been played at Essex County since 1892. For five years previous to that date the Essex County Country Club ranked among the leaders in polo, and its team was the equal of any that the other seven clubs in the association could then furnish.

The old polo field has been kept in good condition. Of late years it has done duty as a valuable adjunct to the golf links, and two greens have been laid out on the polo field. One green, however, is just beyond one of the goal-post ends of the field, but the other green occupies the lower corner. They will be roped off during the polo playing, so as not to injure the greens.

Graham Douglas, who is well known as one of the leading polo players in Squadron A, has been chosen Captain of the Essex County polo team, and he will begin active practice this week. No definite plans have yet been made for a tournament this year, but the Polo Committee hopes to arrange a series of inter-club invitation matches with the two neighboring New Jersey clubs—the Whippany River Club at Morristown and the Somerset County Polo Club at Bernardsville. Both of these clubs contain a number of young and comparatively new players, and while some of the old-time veterans who made Essex County polo famous several years ago will again get into the game, most of the players will probably be drawn from the younger set.

Douglas Robinson, who was an active player in the early days of Essex County polo, will try for the team this year, and among the other leaders will be Charles A. Mund and James A. Hart. These men are all experienced polo players, and will form the nucleus of a club team.

Capt. Douglas expects to have about fifteen or twenty men in active practice within a few days. The old club field, which is 800 feet long, has been put in first-class condition, and arrangements have been made with the golfers of the club whereby the devotees of the links will refrain from playing on the polo field portion of the course after 4 o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. For the present those will be the polo days at the club, but before Summer it is hoped that the polo field will be entirely free for the horsemen.

The Polo Committee of the club consists of Charles A. Mund, Chairman; W. E. Stewart, Douglas Robinson, James A. Hart, and Graham Douglas.

Capt. Douglas will still remain among the polo players of Squadron A, but he will not be seen so frequently at Van Cortlandt Park as in the past, as the greater part of his playing this season will be at Essex County. An invitation will be extended in the future to the Squadron A team to meet the Essex County players, and a club tournament may be given next Fall.

FINAL PRACTICE AT TENNIS.

American Team Will Begin at Philadelphia and Wind Up at Bay Ridge.

Plans for the practice of the American lawn tennis team, preparatory to its sailing for the international championship competitions at London, have been arranged by the Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, composed of Dr. James Dwight, the President of the association; Robert D. Wrenn, Richard Stevens, and Raymond D. Little. The first of the tuning-up series will begin to-morrow on the courts of the Germantown Cricket Club, at Manheim, Philadelphia. Turf nearly equal to the famous English turf is to be found on these courts. To make the conditions more nearly like the contests for the Dwight F. Davis Cup the committee has also imported a lot of the English tournament balls for the men to play with. William A. Larned, Beals C. Wright, and William J. Clothier will begin the practice matches to-morrow, while Holcombe Ward, the National champion in both singles and doubles, will not enter into the practice until Wednesday.

The play on the Germantown courts will continue until the last of this week. It is planned to bring the best of the local Philadelphia men against the challengers. Ward said that the original plans of the committee had been changed, and that the contemplated practice on the Longwood Cricket Club's courts at Boston had been abandoned. After the Philadelphia practice the team will play on the courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club at Mountain Station, N. J. Here a special tournament has been arranged for it.

After leaving the Orange courts the team will go to the Knollwood Golf Club, at White Plains, N. Y. There the work of the players will be similar to that on the Orange Club's grounds. The Crescent Athletic Club's courts at Bay Ridge will be the scene of the team's final practice. The men will play from Monday, June 5, to Saturday, June 10, sailing for England on Tuesday, June 13.

CUBAN X-GIANTS 6, RIDGEWOOD 5.

One of the most interesting games played at Ridgewood Park, L. I., this season was that between the Ridgewoods and Cuban X-Giants yesterday. It was evenly contested throughout, and it was not until the tenth inning that the colored players won by a score of 6 to 5. Score by innings:

Every Man Who Buys One of These Vogel Brothers' Worsted Suits at $17, $18 or $20

—signs a declaration of independence against the custom tailor. And what does it? The style, the very good values, to be sure. They are suits of the popular smooth-finished gray worsteds, identified by every little knack of style known to the tailor craft. In them you will find fashion's every decree faithfully carried out—broad shoulders, snug-fitting collars and smooth-setting coat fronts.

Single and double breasted sack models, including the new long single breasted sack, with long, wide, peaked lapels and deep centre vents.

BROKAW BROTHERS
ESTABLISHED NEARLY HALF A CENTURY

PURE wool fabrics vs. adulterated wool fabrics seems to be a popular topic. With us there is little to be said, for however high wool goes, or however temptingly the adulterated article is presented, we shall buy the pure production only. Our manufacturing policy for fifty years has been based on quality, not cost, and the first demand of quality is an all-wool fabric.

Electric or Gasoline

It requires the Studebaker experience and judgment to produce the best automobiles of either class—Gasoline or Electric. It requires the Studebaker confidence in the perfection of their product to say openly and without prejudice—Gasoline or Electric—depending on the use for which you desire an Automobile. It requires the Studebaker equipment to produce for every taste and purpose, in each class, a variety of cars which by themselves would ordinarily represent a great business.

The value of this is two-fold, you can in our warerooms see and select just the right car. You can at our warerooms have, not only a practical demonstration but the manufacturer's word as well.

BELMONT PARK TESTS PATRONS' ADAPTABILITY

A Place of Magnificent Distances and Varied Conditions.

RACE DISPUTES IMPOSSIBLE

Judges Only Can See the Finishes—Mounted Spectators in the Field Entertained Regulars.

Patrons of the turf, in the nine days of racing at the new Belmont Park course, have grown accustomed to everything about the plant of the Westchester Racing Association except its bigness, and the New Yorker's adaptability to conditions has caused cessation even of the criticism of the arrangement of the finishing post. Spectators in the grand stand see little of the finishes, and occupants of the field stand see nothing, as at the opening of the meeting, but philosophy has come to the rescue, and racegoers, in ignorance of how any close contest may have resulted have adopted a new plan of action, and after each finish where there is any doubt as to the winner or placed horses, perfect silence settles over the two inclosures. Then when the winner's number is displayed, the partisans of that particular horse cheer exultantly, while the silence of the losers continues.

A beautifully optimistic view of the arrangement at Belmont Park has found there an improvement on the older plan where the public actually had some chance to judge the finishes, in the argument that at Belmont Park there is no chance for the disputes or ill-feeling which sometimes followed decisions at the older tracks when the judges disagreed with the placing judges, on the ground that it did not make any difference what the public thought, as the judges' placing settled matters finally. The location of the winning post on the new track is regarded as having a beneficial effect in another sense by accustoming the betting public to instant and confident acceptance of the official placing, regardless of what individual spectators may have seen or thought they saw.

The subway between the railroad sidings and the track inclosure, and some other things which were regarded as drawbacks when racing started at Belmont Park, have ceased to arouse comment, because the public already has accepted them as a part of racing at the Queens course, but the immensity of the grounds still keeps the New York racegoers as strangers to the surroundings.

No one has computed the distance that the average betting man must travel in the course of six or more trips a day in the circuit of paddock, betting ring, and grand stand, but the distance is great enough to be responsible for a marked diminution in the number of visitors to the paddock, as compared to the average at the older tracks. At Gravesend and Sheepshead Bay policemen have been required to keep in order the streams of visitors who wished to witness the races from the infield, while at other tracks the crowding of the infields led to the barring of all except trainers and attendants of horses from the field.

At Belmont Park, however, the opening of the subway, which permits free access to the field from the grand stand inclosure, so far has not availed to attract any of the grand-stand crowd to the green oval. The only spectators who have witnessed racing from the field so far were the mounted members and guests of the Turf and Field Club and the Westchester Racing Association, who on Saturday followed the course of the race for the Whitney Memorial Steeplechase. These, however, did not enter the field through the subway.

It is improbable that any person, representative of the general public, ever will raise the question of individual rights by attempting to lead a saddle horse through the grand stand subway into the field, but until that attempt is made the difference will exist that the field is for the public afoot and the club members and guests on horseback. Because of that the field is likely to be much more popular with the club members than with the grand stand patrons, though the spectacle of last Saturday furnished much entertainment for the public, and brought wishes that "following" the steeplechasers on horseback may become a permanent amusement, as the grand stand got a full share of enjoyment out of the first instance. The novelty of the sight caused some of the regulars to assume that because of the importance of the race a special extra force of patrol judges had been put on duty, and when the mounted spectators were galloping in all directions through the field one regular remarked anxiously, "sposin' one of them horses fouls a patrol judge, what'll happen then?" The mounted spectators, however, kept out of the regular steeplechase course, which is around the inner edge of the inclosing fence, and the steeplechasers had a free course, with the only chance for mishap in the possibility of bolting by either the racers or saddle horse.

GREAT RACES NEAR AT HAND.

$12,000 National Stallion Will Be Feature of the Week.

Big events of the turf will begin to crowd each other closely this week, when, following the running of the National stallion race on Saturday at Belmont Park, there will come within a few days the races for the thirty-ninth running of the Belmont Stakes, The Jockey Club Weight for Age Stakes, the Grand National Steeplechase, and the opening of the Gravesend meeting with the first of the great mile and a quarter handicaps, the Brooklyn.

The National stallion race is the great event of the coming week, and will be the first of the season's important produce races. It is to be at five furlongs, straight, for two-year-olds, with a prize amounting to about $12,060 gross to be decided. The entries include about all the most talked-of colts and fillies of the season, and in the race the unbeaten First Water, from N. Bennington's stable, will be called on to meet the stars of the big establishments, which include August Belmont, James R. Keene, H. B. Duryea, P. J. Dwyer, Harry Payne Whitney, J. E. Madden, J. B. Haggin, Sydney Paget, and R. T. Wilson, Jr., among the most liberal nominators.

For the Belmont Stakes, to be run on the last day of the Belmont Park meeting, there are thirty three-year-olds eligible for the mile and a quarter race, with Tanya the most conspicuous of the number, Sysonby not being eligible. The Brooklyn Handicap also is arousing keen interest through the fact that a number of the horses that are counted on to start for that race have been tried in races at Belmont Park, and the promise that some of the top weights also will be seen with the colors up within the next few days. Of the Brooklyn Handicap eligibles two that figure among the conspicuous horses have been returned winners within a very short time, these being Colonial Girl and Gaziallo. Wild Mint, Jacquin, and Sysonby also have been winners at Belmont Park, while racing there has shown two of the lot that figured as stars, Delhi and Beldame, to no great advantage, though there is room for both to improve and show much better before the Brooklyn is run.

The Triumph Stakes is the feature of a supplementary list of events which the Brighton Beach Racing Association announces to complete its roster of fixtures for the Midsummer and Autumn meetings of 1905. The Triumph, to be run in the Fall, marks a departure in two-year-old racing, as the distance has been fixed at one mile. It is the only two-year-old stake at a mile in this country, and the object of the association in putting it on is to offer horsemen the opportunity to test the endurance as well as the speed of their two-year-olds. In designing the conditions of the race care has been taken not to burden the entries too much, and the weights have been fixed at ten pounds below the scale, with the only penalty five pounds for winners of $10,000. The Triumph will have $5,000 in added money, and in addition the historic Pharsalia Plate, worth $2,000—a plate which was first run for and won at Natchez, Miss., in 1846.

Six other stakes are announced by the Brighton Beach Racing Association for the Summer and Fall Meetings, all to close on Monday, May 29.

YACHTS WILL RACE ABROAD.

Five Kaiser Cup Entries to Contest for Dover-Helgoland Cup.

It is probable that five of the competing yachts in the contest for the Kaiser Cup will enter in the Dover-Helgoland race on reaching the other side. For this contest the Emperor has offered another trophy for the winner. He will personally present it to the winner. Besides this he will give additional prizes to the other yachts, one prize to every three competitors.

The Atlantic, Endymion, Atlas, Hildegarde, and Hamburg are the five expected to compete. What the Apache, Utowana, and Fleur de Lys may do is undecided. The Valhalla, Sunbeam, and Thistle will not enter.

Henry P. Redmond is very confident that the Atlas can carry off the cup. He thinks he can readily outsail the auxiliaries. The Endymion and Atlantic are also thought to have a good chance by those who support them in the ocean race, while the Hamburg is very sanguine of success.

All the American boats will go to Dover to see the start on June 17. They will most of them also go to Kiel. The Atlas will enter in the Kiel regatta and the Fleur de Lys may also start. Mr. Redmond said he proposed to enter every race in sight.

A letter was received by the Race Committee from the Imperial Yacht Club regarding the Helgoland race and particularly urging entries from the competing yacht owners. The conditions of the race were announced as follows:

For all cruising yachts belonging to any recognized yacht club of eighty tons and upward.

To be sailed for on Saturday, June 17, from Dover to Helgoland, to start at 11 A. M. Three to start or no race.

To be sailed under Y. R. A. rules, but all vessels are to carry at least their outter and dinghy. No paid hands to be carried beyond the ordinary crew of the vessel with the exception of a pilot.

All yachts to be handicapped after the manner of yachts for the King's Cup at the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta at Cowes.

A sub-committee has been appointed for the purpose of handicapping the yachts, which is composed only of sailors which vessels come under the category of cruising yachts, and against whose decision there shall be no appeal.

FAST AUTOS FOR MORRIS PARK RACES

Ideal Track for Speed Tests of Motor Cars.

OPENING MEET ON SATURDAY

Ninety Men Working on the Course for Four Weeks to Get It Into Condition.

The first automobile track in America to be devoted exclusively to motor racing will open at Morris Park next Saturday afternoon, when some of the most experienced amateur and professional chauffeurs will take part. Heretofore tracks for automobile racing have been shared by horses and could not be put in proper shape for motor cars.

As a race course, Morris Park compares with any in the world, and it is especially suited for automobile racing. It really has three tracks. There is a main track almost a mile and five-sixteenths in circumference; an inside course from a chute and around the Withers turn of one mile, and a straightaway stretch of three-quarters of a mile. The flying mile can be made with one wide, easy turn, while the flying kilometer is an ideal straightaway. The latter is 100 feet wide, with a homestretch the same width, while the back stretch is from 100 to 144 feet wide. The turns have been well banked under the supervision of Henry G. Opdycke, who has had ninety men working on the course during the past four weeks. Road scrapers and ten-ton steam rollers have made the stretches and turns as smooth and as hard as asphalt.

The Morris Park Motor Racing Club is limited to 250 members. The Governors of the new club are Col. John Jacob Astor, Major C. J. S. Miller, H. L. Bowden, W. Gould Brokaw, Jay Cooke, 3d, William S. Fanshawe, William Osgood Field, Edwin Gould, William Pierson Hamilton, J. Horace Harding, Arthur Iselin, Robert Lee Morrell, Dave Hennen Morris, John T. Pratt, Edmund Randolph, William C. Reick, Winthrop E. Scarritt, George Isham Scott, Albert R. Shattuck, Edward Russell Thomas, and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

It is planned to have nine or ten race meetings this season. On June 9 and 10 there will be a twenty-four-hour race, and on July 3 and 4 the American Automobile Association will have its National meet.

Included in the programme for the opening races next Saturday are seven events. Barney Oldfield, the champion track driver of the world, and Charles Basle, who drives H. L. Bowden's German racing car, will meet in a match race. Half a dozen other new racers will also be seen, including Webb Jay's new steamer, Major C. J. S. Miller's French car, Col. E. H. R. Green's new middleweight car, and possibly H. W. Fletcher's eighty horse power French machine, with which he won the 100-mile Vanderbilt trophy race at Ormond.

GOOD FIELD FOR BIG MEET.

Colleges Show Strong Lot of Entries of Good Class for Championship.

With over 400 entries from eighteen colleges, the annual championships of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, which are to be decided at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 26 and 27, promise some interesting sport. Every track event is filled with the cream of the athletes of the Eastern colleges, and the performances are bound to closely approach the records. With the exception of the pole vault, the entries for the field events are hardly of the same high calibre.

Yale, Cornell, and Pennsylvania have very good teams, and should make a pretty three-cornered fight. Yale and Cornell meet in the events where both are strong, and will cut into each other. On the extent of these cuts depends Pennsylvania's position. If Yale wins places in the sprints or hurdles, she will win the meet beyond a doubt. If shut out of both and Dear and Hyman of Pennsylvania perform up to Quaker expectations, the Red and Blue has an outside chance to beat Yale out. Cornell should get third, possibly second, with Princeton and Harvard in a pretty contest for fourth place.

There is considerable talk of W. A. Schick, Jr., the Harvard Captain and sprinter, not being in condition. J. C. Seitz, the Georgetown flyer, ran several fast races in indoor meets during the Winter. Other good men are D. J. Torrey, Yale; W. D. Dear, Pennsylvania, and S. Hutson-Miller, Princeton, who have all run ten seconds.

In the 220-yard run Schick is at his favorite distance. R. L. Twitchell, Yale, and the two Pennsylvanians, W. D. Dear and H. A. Hyman, will take a lot of beating.

J. B. Taylor, the colored runner of Pennsylvania, is ineligible to compete because of scholarship debarments. H. A. Hyman is fast, though he has done only 0:50 2-5 this year. J. C. Atlee, Princeton, will give him a hard rub. E. J. Dives, Harvard; S. R. Burnap, J. Cahoon, W. Keating, and J. Mulligan, Georgetown, and J. C. Carpenter, Cornell, must be reckoned with.

The half-mile looks to be at the mercy of E. B. Parsons, unless D. C. Munson starts. The other men who stand out most prominently are F. B. Townsend, Cornell; R. E. Williams, Princeton; B. Moore, Yale, and J. A. Taylor, Columbia.

D. C. Munson, Cornell, should repeat his victory of last year in the mile run. R. E. Williams should be close up at the finish. E. C. Tatnall, Haverford, and C. B. Alcott and Hill of Yale are fast.

W. J. Hall, Yale, ran a pretty race in the two-mile event at Princeton last Saturday in 9:49 3-5. Cornell has three good distance men in A. L. Willgoose, C. F. Magoffin, and J. C. Hemingway. A. King, Harvard, and D. C. Chapin, Yale, are also dangerous.

E. S. Amsler, Pennsylvania, is going at a record-breaking clip. F. R. Castleman, Colgate; A. Vonnegut, Cornell; L. Ashburner, Cornell; R. G. Leavitt, Williams, and two Yale men, Eales and Mertz, are doing good work. W. M. Armstrong, Princeton, is another likely contestant.

In the 220-yard hurdle, besides E. S. Amsler and F. R. Castleman, C. T. Robinson, Syracuse; R. C. Turner, Cornell; J. F. Doyle, Harvard; L. C. Porter, Yale, and J. M. Cates, Yale, are the other prominent entries.

F. H. Schoenfuss, Harvard; J. A. Boyd, Pennsylvania, and H. F. Porter, Cornell, look best in the shot put, with R. E. Rollins, Amherst, figuring. In the hammer throw, C. Van Duyne, Syracuse, and Shevelin and W. Harris, Yale, appear to lead.

The best man in the broad jump seems to be L. W. Symonds, Princeton. He recently cleared 22 feet 11½ inches. C. B. Tippett, W. Mosher, Cornell; Weede, Pennsylvania, and Sheffield and Knox, Yale, are good jumpers. A dark horse is J. Weber of Stevens Institute.

The high jumpers are very closely matched. J. W. Marshall, Yale; G. R. Moffett, Pennsylvania, and H. F. Porter, Cornell, have cleared 5 feet 11 inches. G. MacDonald, Pennsylvania, is in the same class with these men.

One of the best-contested field events will be the pole vault. Ward McLanahan, Yale, will find his work cut out for him this year. T. M. Jackson, Cornell, topped the bar at 11 feet 9¾ inches in the Cornell-Princeton meet. W. Gray, (11 feet 6 inches;) M. Dehr, and F. O'Brien, (11 feet 3 inches,) all of Yale; J. H. Phillips, Cornell, (11 feet 6 inches;) Kirkpatrick and Swain, Pennsylvania, (11 feet 3 inches,) and Williams, Columbia, (11 feet 3 inches,) are others.

Games of Sheepshead Bay A. C.

Three events were contested by members of the Sheepshead Bay Athletic Club at the club grounds, Twenty-fifth Street and Voorhees Avenue, yesterday, and while the condition of the track and field was such as to preclude the best showing of the men, the performances were quite creditable. A. Loesing won two of the three events and leads all competitors for the point trophies.

Summary:

150-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by A. Loesing, (scratch;) S. A. Van Cott, (8 yards,) second; T. Pawlowsky, (4 yards,) third. Time—0:18 1-5.

Pole Vault, Handicap.—Won by T. Powell, Jr., (scratch,) with an actual vault of 8 feet; S. Tombs, (scratch,) 7 feet 6 inches, second; T. Mugridge, (3 inches,) 7 feet 3 inches, third.

Standing High Jump, Handicap.—Won by A. Loesing, (3 inches,) with 3 feet 7 inches; T. Mugridge, (4 inches,) and S. Tombs, (4 inches,) tied for second.

Colorado Vacations become more popular year by year. Last year about 50,000 eastern people spent all or part of their vacations there.

Good reasons for it, of course. Here are some of them:

Climate always delightful.
Recreation in many forms.
Living accommodations to suit every purse and every taste.
Only one night on the road from Chicago and St. Louis by the Burlington's famous fast trains.
Ticket rates always low—but lower this summer than for years.

Ask me questions about Colorado vacations. They will be answered correctly, promptly, courteously.

(E) Trade Mark:

No. 31,330, registered March 8th, 1898. The trade-mark registered includes the letter A inclosed in a circle, as applied to cylindrical cotton bales.

(F) 1. All additional shares of the capital stock of the corporations named in subdivision (A) hereof and all shares of other corporations organized after April 1, 1902, acquired by American Cotton Company subsequent to said last-mentioned date.

2. All additional letters patent, applications for letters patent, designs and trade-marks, and all other property of every kind and description acquired by the American Cotton Company with the proceeds of the said debenture bonds.

3. All other chattels and personal property of said American Cotton Company appertaining to or forming a part of its business, excepting merchandise, accounts receivable and cash.

The said property will be sold as an entirety and in one lot or parcel, without covenant or warranty of any kind, nature, or description whatsoever.

All the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey is to be sold upon conditions as follows:

First: The sale and conveyance thereof are to be subject to all Government taxes and annuities which are now payable and which shall hereafter become payable upon said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey, or upon any of them.

Second: All notarial fees, Government taxes, and annuities and other expenses required to be paid for assigning and conveying all the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned Letters Patent of foreign countries to the purchaser or purchasers thereof shall be paid by the purchaser or purchasers thereof.

Third: If any of said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey shall have lapsed or become forfeited for non-payment of any taxes or annuity or by reason of failure to work the invention covered thereby, no deduction or abatement shall be allowed from the amount of the bid of the successful bidder for all the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to all of said Letters Patent of foreign countries.

No bid will be received from any person who shall not first deposit with the undersigned or the aforesaid auctioneers as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance the sum of $10,000 in cash or certified check on some incorporated bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or payable to the order of the Central Trust Company of New York. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be retained as part payment of the purchase price of the property so sold. On the acceptance of his bid the successful bidder shall forthwith enter into an agreement in writing in appropriate form, whereby he shall bind himself to pay the balance of his bid at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York City, No. 54 Wall Street, New York City, on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The successful bidder, upon payment in full of the purchase price bidden in the manner and within the period herein limited, shall be entitled to receive the certificates representing the shares of stock enumerated in subdivision (A) hereof, together with transfers thereof executed by the persons in whose names said certificates stand, and an instrument or instruments in writing executed by the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee aforesaid, transferring, or purporting to transfer such right, title, and interest as it may have as such trustee of, in, and to all the property herein described or intended so to be (other than that set forth in subdivision (A) hereof,) together with such documents as may be in the possession of the Trustee (other than the original deed of trust securing said debentures) evidencing its right, title, and interest to such property or to any part or portion thereof.

Intending bidders during business hours of any day (Sundays and legal holidays excepted) prior to the sale of said property pursuant to this notice, at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York, 54 Wall Street, New York City, and all documents in the possession of said Trust Company evidencing its right, title, and interest to the property to be sold or to any part or portion thereof.

In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said auctioneers, or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with the terms thereof, or shall fail to pay the balance of the purchase price, then the sum deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or represented by check, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure, and such bidder shall be held responsible for the payment of the expenses of the sale or of a resale, and for any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price at such re-sale.

So much of the purchase price as shall not be required by the undersigned Trustee to be paid in cash or later be paid in cash or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid in whole or in part by turning in to be canceled or credited the six per cent. gold debenture bonds and the coupons thereto appertaining of the American Cotton Company outstanding under said deed of trust dated April 1, 1902, and the purchaser will be credited on account of such bonds and coupons with such sums as would be payable in cash on account thereof out of the proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were paid in cash.

The right is reserved to re-sell the property upon such notice as the Central Trust Company of New York may determine as sufficient, or without notice in the event that the purchaser shall refuse or omit to make any payment on account of the unpaid balance of the purchase price on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The Central Trust Company of New York reserves the right to adjourn said sale from time to time, and to sell upon such adjourned day without further notice or upon such notice as it may in its discretion deem sufficient.

Dated March 1st, 1905.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee.

By J. N. WALLACE, Fourth Vice President.

JOLINE, LARKIN & RATHBONE, Attorneys for Trustee.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Further General Recovery in Last Week's Stock Business.

Sharp Declines for Specific Reasons More Than Offset by Advances—Union Pacific Leading the List.

Last week's business in the stock market began under the unfavorable influence of disturbed foreign markets reflecting the fear that the situation in the Far East might cause friction between nations other than those now at war. The cloud passed so far as our own market was concerned with only a slight depression in prices below the previous level, and this was quickly followed by substantial recovery. To what extent the market as a whole has improved since the culmination of the liquidation which three weeks ago brought distress to many previously flourishing speculators is indicated by the great preponderance of net gains over losses during the past week. Of the 99 stocks that moved a point or more, 77 made gains and only 22 showed losses. In the bond department the record was 25 advances to 11 declines. The excess of gains was even greater in the dozen most active issues, which included 9 that advanced and 1 that was unchanged for the week to 2 that showed net losses. Railway and industrial shares divided attention pretty evenly, more evenly than in any recent week, the dozen most active stocks in the list being half industrials and half railroad stocks.

Union Pacific, which along with the Hill stocks was the leader of the advance, was foremost in point of activity. Its total was over 600,000 shares out of 2,487,690 shares for the twelve leading issues and 3,887,760 shares in all issues.

Only two groups of stocks, the Northern Securities group and the local gas stocks, furnished net changes in excess of the average. The declines of 10 points in Brooklyn Union Gas and of 12¾ points in Consolidated Gas were the logical reflection of the decreases in the dividends declared on those stocks. It is somewhat curious that the recent record of these stocks, more particularly that of the Consolidated Company, shows several movements of equal range with far less incentive than that afforded by a reduction of the dividend from a 10 per cent. to an 8 per cent. basis. The Northern Securities group moved in the opposite direction. That stock itself showed a gain of 7⅝ points, while Northern Pacific rose 9 points and Great Northern preferred no less than 17½.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

Few Reports of Improvement—Cotton Trade Continues Active.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cables. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, May 14.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"There are few reports of improvement in trade during the past week, while in important directions quieter conditions have prevailed. On the whole the situation is barely as good as a week ago. The high prices of raw material in the woolen and iron industries tend to check business to some extent.

"The grain markets have shown more general strength, without material increase in the volume of business.

"The cotton trade has been active. Manchester reports further good sales of cloth, especially to Indian markets. In some finished goods business is hindered by the long delivery stipulated by the makers. Yarns have sold fairly at advancing prices. Egyptian spinners are still in a difficult situation. The raw material at Liverpool has advanced under American speculative influences.

"In wool active competition with American buyers is prominent, and a further advance in prices has been the feature of the colonial wool sales. In manufactured goods fair business is reported in medium and low grades, but in some quarters manufacturers decline to do business at the old prices.

"Still higher prices are reported for Cleveland pig iron under bull manipulation, and the demand for consumption is held in check thereby. The finished products are generally quiet, and in the absence of new business of adequate extent the tendency of prices is downward in a number of directions.

"The shipbuilding industry continues dull so far as new orders are concerned."

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS

A new life insurance company is being formed in Chicago, with a capital of $500,000, by Judge N. C. Sears of the law firm of Sears, Meagher & Whitney, to operate under the name of the American Mutual Life Insurance Company.

The Sun Insurance Office of London, which withdrew from the State of Virginia several years ago, has been reli-censed to transact a fire insurance business in that State. Chaplin & Claims have been appointed as its State agents.

Losses have been unusually high, according to The Insurance Press, in the West during the first week in May, some of the large companies claiming to have had more large losses than in any other week in their history. One Western department had six losses of over $5,000 each during the week, besides scores of smaller claims.

The prospects for the installation of a high-pressure system in Chicago are regarded as remote, the new city administration being disposed to use all the surplus funds to municipalize the street cars, electric light plants, and other public utilities. The Chicago Underwriting Association, hoping to secure action, has appointed a special committee to urge the need of the system upon the authorities. It is made up of Clarence S. Pellet, William S. Wyman, Charles Nelson Bishop, Cyrus Hardy, and George S. Haskell.

George S. Tompkins has been appointed New York State special agent of the Commercial Union Assurance Corporation and the Palatine Insurance Company of London.

The Spring Garden Insurance Company of Philadelphia has been licensed to write fire insurance in Montana.

Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts has vetoed the bill to charter a company organized with $200,000 capital under the name of the Massachusetts Casualty Company to write steam boiler and liability insurance risks.

Man Shot Dead in a Quarrel.

WATERLOO, N. Y., May 14.—Edward Marazza was shot and instantly killed in a quarrel last night by Joseph Delpapa, who conducts a boarding house in South Waterloo. Delpapa fled, and was arrested in Geneva and brought here. He admitted the shooting, and was locked up in the county jail charged with murder.

Burglar Gets Plunder Worth $600.
NEWARK, May 14.—In the absence of the family of Henry Stern from their home at 196 Broad Street last night, a sneak thief entered by using a skeleton key. When the family returned at midnight they found the house had been thoroughly ransacked from top to bottom. Bureaus had been broken open, beds overturned, and brushes used. Investigation showed that the thief had carted away jewelry and silverware to the value of $600.

Sixty years established speaks for itself. Honorable dealings during that time has made us a host of friends as well as clients. We want to know you; your patronage will follow. We have a man who thoroughly knows the building business, handling our sales department, and he is constantly on the lookout for good things. We do not hand these out promiscuously, but to a select few whom we care to favor. The entire time of our representative is given to our clients and he will call by appointment, or you can see him at our office. Courteously yours,

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—ABRAHAM HERSHFIELD, plaintiff, against FERDINAND S. M. BLUN and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of partition and sale, dated April 25th, 1905, duly made in the above-entitled action, and entered in the clerk's office of this court for the County of New York, I, the undersigned, referee in the said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the City and County of New York, on Friday, the 19th day of May, at 12 o'clock noon, by S. De Walltearss, auctioneer, the premises as directed by said judgment, and therein described as follows:

All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of the Bronx, City of New York, (formerly in the town of West Farms, in the County of Westchester,) on the easterly side of Jerome Avenue, (lately known as Central Avenue, formerly known as the new road leading from Macomb's Dam to Woodlawn Cemetery,) together described as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of the centre line of said Jerome Avenue with the centre line of the land as the northerly line of the village of Mount Eden, and extending easterly along said last-mentioned line to lands formerly owned by Townsend Poole; thence northerly and northwesterly to the centre of a brook; thence westerly along the centre of said brook to said Jerome Avenue, and thence southwesterly along said avenue to the place of beginning, and together more particularly described as follows in a certain deed thereof from John D. Poole and others to William L. Fisher, dated January 3d, 1866, and recorded in the Register's office of Westchester County on January 20th, 1866, in Liber 588 of Deeds, at Page 308, to wit: Beginning at a chestnut tree marked by land of Townsend Poole standing on the south bank of the brook; thence running south ninety-nine degrees and thirty minutes east along said Townsend Poole's land three chains and eighty-five links; thence south one degree and thirty minutes east along a stone fence by said Poole's land three chains and thirty-five links to the northerly line of the village of Mount Eden; thence south eighty degrees and fifteen minutes west along the northerly line of the village of Mount Eden eleven chains and sixty-five links to a point in the centre of the new road leading from Macomb's Dam to Woodlawn Cemetery; thence running north thirty-seven degrees and thirty minutes east along the centre of said new road nine chains and ninety-eight links to a brook crossing said new road; thence running north seventy degrees and thirty minutes east along said brook and other land of said John D. Poole one chain and seventy-five links; thence north eighty-two degrees east along said brook and said Poole's land one chain and sixty links to said chestnut tree marked, the point of beginning, containing five acres and thirty-nine-hundredths of an acre of land, be the same more or less.

Together with all the right, title, and interest of the in and to the streets and avenues through, contiguous to, or part of said premises;

Excepting and reserving therefrom, however, all that certain triangular parcel, consisting of one acre of land and the avenue opposite thereto, situate at the most westerly angle of said premises, beginning at the intersection of said centre line of Jerome (late Central) Avenue with what was formerly the northerly line of the village of Mount Eden, and extending thence northeasterly along said centre line of Jerome (late Central) Avenue three hundred and sixty-five feet, more or less; thence southeasterly on a line at right angles, with said avenue three hundred feet, more or less, to said northerly line of the village of Mount Eden; thence westerly along said last-mentioned line four hundred and sixty-five feet, more or less, to the centre of said avenue, at the place of beginning, heretofore conveyed by William L. Fisher to Joseph Conrad by deed, dated June 1st, 1887, and recorded in the Register's office of Westchester County on January 13th, 1888, in Liber 662 of Deeds, at Page 265.

Dated April 25, 1905.

SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY.—THOMAS FINLAND, Plaintiff, vs. PETER FINLAND et al., Defendants.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action on the 29th day of April, 1905, in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York, the City of New York, the undersigned, John E. Donnelly, the referee in said interlocutory judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Real Estate Exchange, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the City and County of New York, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises described by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows: All that certain plot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the County and State of New York, being part of the plot known and designated as No. 104 on a certain map entitled "Map of property situated near High Bridge in the Town of West Farms, County of Westchester, and State of New York," and which said plot is bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of Nelson Avenue forty (40) feet northeasterly from the corner of Nelson Avenue and 170th Street as monumented; running thence northeasterly along the westerly side of Nelson Avenue fifty-seven (57) feet; thence northwesterly and parallel with the northerly boundary line of said Plot No. 10 ninety-two (92) feet six (6) inches more or less to lands now or formerly of Mr. Lawrence; thence westerly along the line of said Plot No. 10 and being seventy-three (73) feet six (6) inches more or less to the most westerly corner of said Plot No. Ten, (10,) and thence southeasterly along the southerly boundary line of said Plot No. Ten (10) one hundred and fifty-six (156) feet more or less to the point or place of beginning. Being the same premises which were conveyed to Thomas Finland (spelled "Fenlon") by deed dated March 20, 1903, and recorded in the office of the County Register-Westchester in Liber 556 of Deeds, page 448, on March 22, 1903, at 10 A. M., less so much thereof as was acquired by the City of New York for the opening of Nelson Avenue.

Dated April 29, 1905.

HAWAIIAN A PRISONER AFTER BELTING GLOBE

Honolulu Sheriff Here with Man Wanted for $20,000 Theft.

TRACED TO CHINA AND JAPAN

Board and Champagne Bills Caused Arrest in London—Sheriff Traveled 25,000 Miles After Him.

Sheriff Henry C. Vidd of Honolulu arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning Henry K. Kapea, a young Hawaiian, who has led him a chase of 25,000 miles since robbing the trust company by whom he was employed of about $20,000 worth of United States bonds.

Kapea is a fine-looking young fellow, and appeared stylishly dressed. According to Sheriff Vidd, he has circled the globe since he fled from Honolulu. Agents of Scotland Yard arrested Kapea in London. It was owing to his inability to pay a board bill of $500 and a champagne account of $175 that his presence became known to the English sleuths.

Kapea's story, as narrated in the Jefferson Market Court, is that for four years prior to his flight from Honolulu, in the Autumn of last year, he held a responsible place in the head office of the Hawaiian Trust and Investment Company. For a long time he knew that the United States bonds were in the safe of the company. He took the bonds, negotiated them, and made his escape, going to Japan on one of the Pacific Mail liners. The Pinkerton agency was put on the case, and one of their agents traced the young man to Yokohama and then to Tokio. In the latter place he was traced by several big gambling games in which he participated. From Tokio Kapea went to Canton, China, where he is said to have had a very dull time. After a few days there he took a steamer for Bombay.

The Pinkertons had little difficulty in following Kapea, owing to his peculiar appearance, and soon after he left Bombay he was traced to Suez, then Malta, Marseilles, and finally Paris. After a few days in Paris he journeyed to London and went to a private boarding house in Eastern Road. He told the landlady that his father was a wealthy Hawaiian, and would settle his bills. When the bill got up to $500 and she heard of his champagne habits, the landlady became suspicious, and then it was that Scotland Yard was notified.

The Pinkertons had telegraphed a description of Kapea to the police of all the European cities, and as soon as the Scotland Yard agent, sent to investigate the boarding house case, saw the boarder, he recognized him as the man wanted in Honolulu. Scotland Yard notified the trust company in Honolulu, and a few days later Sheriff Vidd sailed for San Francisco en route to London. He was armed with the Hawaiian warrant, and on landing in San Francisco caught a train for Washington, where he got requisition papers from Secretary of State Hay. On March 21 last Sheriff Vidd sailed from New York on the White Star liner Teutonic. Yesterday he got back on the Cedric with his prisoner.

Kapea said he was glad he was going back home, but would say nothing about the charge against him. This is said to be the first case in which the Hawaiian authorities have invoked the aid of the State Department in extraditing a prisoner.

Magistrate Cornell committed Kapea on a short affidavit made by Sheriff Vidd. The Sheriff and Kapea will start on the last leg of their journey to Honolulu this morning. When they arrive in the Hawaiian capital Sheriff Vidd will have traveled over 30,000 miles to get Kapea.

FEARS PANAMA GERMS.

Member of Japanese Commission Against Sending Men There.

According to the opinion expressed yesterday by the commission appointed by the Japanese Government to investigate labor conditions in Panama, the germs of the canal zone were likened to the death-dealing qualities of the Russian bullets.

The committee appointed to investigate conditions in Panama with a view to importing Japanese laborers for the canal work consisted of K. Uyeno, Consul at San Francisco; the Vice Consul, and Daniel L. Richardson, Secretary for the Consulate. The party passed through New York yesterday on its way home after spending ten days on the Isthmus on a tour of inspection.

The possibility of danger from death for their people from disease in the Isthmus appeared to the commission in the light of comparison between the two destroying agencies, Russian powder or Panama Canal germs.

"The Consul will make a report of our investigations to the office of Foreign Affairs at Tokio, but just what recommendations the report will name I cannot say just at this time," said Mr. Richardson, "but my own private opinion would be that it would not be wise to send a big number of Japanese laborers into the Isthmus at this time, and I think it would be equally unwise for the Panama Commission to accept them, inasmuch as it seems to me, with the prevailing conditions in the canal zone, the men would become very much discontented.

"The sanitary conditions are still very bad. They are now piping a distance of some five miles north of Panama to furnish pure drinking water. But the work will not be finished until the middle of July. There were several cases of yellow fever while we were there, and the mosquitos are woefully obnoxious. The labor conditions appeared bad, the principal laborer being the native negro, and it would seem folly at this time to import labor that was not accustomed to climatic conditions under the present bad sanitary arrangements."

LAWYER TAKEN TO ALBANY.

Traver, Accused of Diamond Theft, Turned Over to Police of That City.

Byron Traver, the lawyer of 15 William Street, who was arrested Saturday night on a John Doe warrant issued by Judge John J. Brady, in Albany, alleging the theft of a bag of diamonds worth $5,000, from the New Kenmore Hotel in that city on April 25, was turned over to Detective Murphy of the Albany police force, in the Tombs Court yesterday. Traver was not examined by Magistrate Finn. The Albany detective took him away yesterday afternoon.

M. F. Savage, proprietor of the boarding house where Traver lives, at 17 West Twenty-first Street, declares that the lawyer is not guilty of the charge. He branded as untrue the statements in dispatches from Albany that Traver took a bag belonging to S. W. Clover, a traveling salesman, who was in the New Kenmore Hotel at the same time, by mistake, and that the owner has been unable to find the bag since. The bag is said to have contained $5,000 worth of diamonds. The Albany police say that when they tried to find Traver at his office, attachés there said he was out of the city.

Fire Routs Hotel Lodgers.

Fire in a picture frame shop in the basement of the Atlantic Hotel, at 63 New Bowery, early yesterday morning routed out 100 men occupying rooms in the hotel. The firemen confined the flames to the basement, with a loss of $500.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS WITHDRAW FROM PARADE

Thus Preventing Threatened Break in Brooklyn G. A. R. Ranks.

WOULD HAVE LIKED MARCHING

Southern Fighters Will, However, Take Part in the Grant Post Exercises at Tomb.

The threatened disruption of the Memorial Day parade of war veterans in Brooklyn because of the acceptance by the New York Camp of Confederate Veterans of an invitation to march with Grant Post has been avoided by the withdrawal of the camp from participation in the parade.

In inviting the Confederate Veterans to parade, Grant Post thought it was performing merely a friendly and courteous act, showing the amity now existing between the North and the South. Grant Post is to have a place near the head of the line, and if the Confederate Veterans had paraded with it most of the other Grand Army posts would have found themselves marching behind men who had fought them in the war. Some of them objected to this, and there was a controversy over the matter, several of the posts talking of withdrawing from the parade.

Harmony has been restored, however, by the receipt of a letter by the Memorial and Executive Committee of the Grand Army from the Confederate Veterans. Col. Owen, for the Confederate Veterans, wrote that, although they would be pleased to take part in the parade to show that the old war wounds were healing, if their presence in line was likely to cause any dissatisfaction they thought it best to withdraw. It is now announced that all of the Brooklyn posts will be in the parade.

Although they will not parade, the Confederate Veterans will take part with Grant Post in the latter's Memorial Day exercises at Grant's Tomb.

BOY BAND IN SEWARD PARK.

East Side Applauds Musicians from Hebrew Orphan Asylum.

Great crowds listened to a concert given by a boy band in Seward Park, Canal and Jefferson Streets, yesterday afternoon. The juvenile musicians are inmates of the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum. They range in age from eleven to fourteen years, and were the envy and the pride of the boys in the crowd, who cheered them lustily after every tune. They were particularly demonstrative when thirteen-year-old Morris Franzblau gave a cornet solo, "Alice, Where Art Thou?" It seemed to be the proudest moment of the soloist's life when he bowed over and over again to the applauding thousands.

The concert was the first of its kind. The plan was decided upon by the Executive Committee of the asylum, of which Judge Newburger is the Chairman, and who thought that it would be a good scheme to have the band of the institution give a series of concerts in the congested east side districts before the regular concerts provided by the city began. Another reason was that many of the boys in the band were born in those sections of the city and would be glad to play for their friends and to be listened to by them. Judge Newburger and several members of the Executive Committee were present to see how the plan worked. A cordon of fifty policemen under Capt. Shaw kept order.

The leader of the band is Philip Egner. The programme was as follows:

March, "America," Dunlap Commandery ..... Hall
Overture, "Lustspiel" ..... Keler-Bela
Cornet Solo, (Song,) "Alice, Where Art Thou?" ..... Ascher
Selection, "Woodland" ..... Suders
Waltz, "Sobre Las Olas" ..... Rosza
Fantasie, Hebrew Melodies ..... Egner
Serenade, "Moonlight" ..... Moret
Medley, Overture, (Latest Hits) ..... Remick
"The Star-Spangled Banner."

The next concert will be at Tompkins Square next Sunday, and the following one in Mount Morris Park.

DOUBLE JOB FOR PHYSICIAN.

Ambulance Surgeon Looks After Hurt Woman—Policeman Needs Him, Too.

Ludwista Gigtha of 485 Morris Avenue was crossing the avenue yesterday when she was struck by an automobile owned and driven by Jeremiah Miller, the Postmaster of Springdale, Conn. When Dr. Bundy of Lebanon Hospital responded he ordered the woman taken to the hospital, although she was not seriously hurt. While she was being lifted into the ambulance Policeman Skehan of the Alexander Avenue Station, who was in charge of the case, complained that he felt badly. Dr. Bundy looked him over and said:

"I think you have appendicitis, and you had better get to a hospital and have your case looked after as soon as possible."

Postmaster Miller took Skehan to the station and explained that the accident was unavoidable. As the woman was not badly hurt, he was not placed under arrest.

The policeman reported sick and left in a hurry to get medical attention.

WOMAN WASN'T DRUGGED.

Case of Person Found in Street Diagnosed as Alcoholism.

The blonde young woman who was found unconscious in a cab in front of 245 West Twenty-first Street late Saturday night recovered in the New York Hospital yesterday and identified herself as Miss Mary McKay, a saleswoman, of 281 West Twenty-first Street. Her case was diagnosed at the hospital as alcoholism.

When the woman was found by Policeman Scheedel of the West Twentieth Street Station, a man and a woman who had been with her left suddenly on the pretext of finding her relatives, who were said to live in the neighborhood, but did not return. Thinking that the woman's condition was due to drugs or some other foul play, Scheedel arrested the cab driver, Robert Thompson, of 213 West Thirty-eighth Street. He was discharged in the Jefferson Market court yesterday.

WIRELESS RELIEVED ANXIETY.

W. D. Haviland, on the Ocean, Heard Father Was Safe from Strikers.

Had it not been for wireless telegraphy William D. Haviland, a member of the famous family of porcelain manufacturers of Limoges, France, who got here yesterday morning on the American liner St. Louis, would have been a sorely worried man as he walked down the gangplank.

The St. Louis was many hundreds of miles from New York late Friday afternoon when a wireless message was received by the editor of the daily paper published on the liner to the effect that the home of Mr. Haviland's father in Limoges had been besieged by the striking porcelain workers, and that the situation at that time was so serious that gendarmes had been stationed in the house to protect the occupants.

When Mr. Haviland read the item he at once went to the Marconi cabin on the bridge deck and opened communication with the New York office of his firm. He told them what he had read and asked them to get the details by cable and send him the result by wireless. The New York office did as requested, and managed to find out that the elder Haviland was all right, thanks to the efficiency of the gendarmes.

Mr. Haviland comes to the United States to marry Miss Bancroft of Boston.

TO BEGIN FRESH-AIR WORK.

Institution at Rockaway Beach Will Open June 8—First Outing July 5.

The Board of Directors of the Fresh-Air Charity announces that its institution at Rockaway Park will open to the poor sick children of the city about June 8. The first all-day outing in the harbor will be held on Wednesday, July 5.

Owing to the overtaxing of the resources of the charity in past Summers, steps are now being taken toward the erection of additional buildings. Over 20,000 children were cared for last Summer. Financial assistance is asked from the public. Hesekiah Kohn of 356 Second Avenue is Treasurer of the charity.

The difference between OXZYN BALM and almost all other preparations with which you are invited to renew the charm of your deteriorated complexion is the difference between eradicating and merely covering up the cause of the evil.

If when your house needed painting or your walls needed papering you could procure something which would remove the soiled, weather-stained exterior and make a beautiful fresh covering appear in its place, you would call it magic.

Well, that's what OXZYN BALM actually does to the human skin. It isn't magic, either, just nature aided to assert herself. All other methods are merely covering dirt with fresh paint.

CONEY ISLAND IN GLOOM.

Much Fog and a Few Excise Arrests—Two Accidents.

Coney Island was one of the dreariest spots in Greater New York yesterday, due principally to overcast skies and the thick fog that prevailed the entire day. The police made several excise arrests, and also locked up as a precautionary measure a number of disreputable looking persons who were unofficially described as tramps.

There were several accidents reported during the day, one of them being that of Miss Margaret Keese, who lost her hat in shooting the chutes in Dreamland and hurt her head in attempting to get it. She was attended by doctors in Dreamland. Another accident befel George Koerninger of Twenty-ninth Street and Railroad Avenue. He tried to arbitrate a fight between two dogs, and was bitten on the hand.

The Ninety-first Canadian Highlanders, commanded by Lieut. D. C. McKeand, who took part in the Military Show at Madison Square Garden, went to Luna Park yesterday afternoon as the guests of Thompson & Dundy. They were the regulation kilts and made an extra show for the park. The bands all played Scotch airs, and the Highlanders reciprocated by patronizing every show in the inclosure. After three cheers for their hosts the soldiers went back to town. They left last night for Hamilton, Ontario.

YACHTS START TO-DAY IN KAISER'S CUP RACE

Eleven Competing Boats Finish Preparations for Contest.

BIG FLEET FOR SANDY HOOK

Six of the Racers at the Horseshoe, While the Others Will Tow Down Early This Morning.

A fresh westerly wind will prevail to-day off Sandy Hook and will give the yachts an ideal blow to begin their long race. This wind will probably last all of Wednesday, and the yachts may carry it to the Grand Banks.—United States Weather Bureau.

Most devoutly do New York yachtsmen wish for the verification of Local Weather Forecaster E. H. Emory's prediction as to the conditions which will prevail this afternoon when the international race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's Cup will be started off Sandy Hook, with eleven yachts contending for the coveted prize. If auspicious conditions were ever deserved for an aquatic event, the trans-atlantic ocean race certainly merits them. In its effect upon international good feeling the contest will be of much moment. To yachting interests its importance can scarcely be overrated.

It is safe to assume that behind the sporting spirit which prompted the proffer of the five-thousand-dollar gold cup by Emperor William, the political consideration was not lost sight of. That the friendly feeling among the three nations competing for the trophy will be advanced by the race is generally accepted. As a sporting event it will be watched with keenest interest.

There are contesting for the prize eight American yachts, two English, and one German. In the Atlantic and the Endymion the hopes of most American yachtsmen are centred, with the Hildegarde and Ailsa prominently regarded as possible winners. Neither of the English boats is very seriously considered, though the Valhalla, in heavy weather conditions, is certainly capable of outsailing any boat in the fleet. The single German entry, the Hamburg, is looked upon as one of the most formidable contestants. Wind and wave must determine between them. Conditions that may be encountered in a fortnight's trip across the Atlantic in a stretch of sea 300 miles wide, which furthermost northern and southern routes will encompass, are so various that it is impossible for the most expert mariner to truly forecast the outcome.

At the start off Sandy Hook will be gathered a flotilla of private yachts and craft worthy of an America's Cup race. There will be found enthusiastic yachtsmen without number, and many whose interest is principally aroused in the unique marine spectacle which eleven boats, starting in an international trans-atlantic race, will afford.

Six of the contending yachts are now anchored in the Horseshoe awaiting the starting gun. The other five will be towed to the line early this morning. Long before the appointed hour, 2:15 o'clock this afternoon, for the start all will be in position for the preparatory signal. This will be fired from the committee boat promptly at 2 o'clock. At the same time a blue peter will be hoisted. Ten minutes later a warning gun will be fired, and a red ball will displace the blue peter on the foremast. At 2:15 the red ball will drop as the start is signaled, and the eleven yachts will be off on their 3,000-mile journey.

The committee in charge of the start includes Commander H. G. Hebbinghaus, the Kaiser's personal representative. Commander Hebbinghaus is the Naval Attaché at the German Embassy in Washington. He has been identified with the American Committee on Arrangements, co-operating with Allison V. Armour and C. L. F. Robinson of the New York Yacht Club. Beside him to start the race there will be Commander H. H. Hosley, United States Navy; Oliver E. Cromwell, Newbury B. Lawton, H. De B. Parsons, and E. H. Wales.

The starting line will be a line from the committee boat to Sandy Hook Light. Time will be taken from the sounding of the starting gun until the signal at the Lizard Light is flashed by the winning boat. At the finish line will be anchored the German cruiser Pfeil to assist the yachts in locating the light in event of fog. On board her will be the English committee, the Earl of Lonsdale, Sir Edward Birbeck, and Capt. Coerper, Naval Attaché of the German Embassy at London.

No detail appears to have been overlooked to insure the success of the undertaking. To properly appreciate its remarkable character, it is only necessary to remember that on but three occasions before have ocean yacht races been contested under sail. In but one of these was other than the American Nation represented.

Last year there was some talk of an international ocean race following the visit of Sir Thomas Lipton in his effort to lift the America's Cup. The proffer of a trophy by Kaiser Wilhelm then was later withdrawn. When renewed, it was received with avidity by American yachtsmen. Until recently, however, incident probably to the arrival of the foreign yachts, Valhalla, Sunbeam, and Hamburg, in American waters, the importance of the contest was not fully realized.

It was expected that several of the yachts would take advantage of the favorable conditions of yesterday to stretch sail in at least a short spin. Not a few yachtsmen visited Sandy Hook in the LAW TO END SCHOOL STRIKE.

Threat to Arrest Chicago Parents—Gompers May End Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 15.—With the spread of the strike fever to four more public schools, making a total of 1,800 pupils out, the Board of Education decided this afternoon, after a conference lasting several hours, to use the compulsory education law as a weapon to compel the children to return to their books.

A large force of truant officers and special policemen was sent out by the compulsory education department. The law will be strictly and promptly enforced against parents for failure to send children to school and against the strikers themselves for failure to attend and obey the rules.

Parents who persist in keeping their children out of school will be arrested and tried in a Justice's court, with the hope that a fine will be imposed.

Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation of Labor, is expected here about Friday, and many high in labor councils believe that the teamsters' strike will be settled or called off.

Gompers has started from Washington, but it is likely that he will stop off at Indianapolis and confer with John Mitchell. It is believed that Mitchell will advise Gompers to discountenance the strike and withdraw support of the American Federation of Labor. Gompers to-day sent out an appeal for financial aid for the strikers.

The employers to-day operated 2,000 wagons with little interference, many of the deliveries in the residence portion of the city being made without police protection.

At the hearing in regard to an injunction by Master in Chancery Sherman this afternoon, G. B. Clark, a striking driver, formerly employed by the Scott Transfer Company, said he did not know why he was forced to strike.

"We had no grievance at all," declared the witness. "I would rather work for Scott than any man I know. Every man that is now out from the Scott barns would be tickled to death to get back.

"I heard one of the men say: 'If you take a wagon out of here you will never get anywhere.' So I went and put my horse up."

When a wagon loaded with coal went to the Hermann Raster Public School this afternoon 400 pupils left their books. The Principal of the school sent for the police, who scattered the crowds about the school. About 100 messenger boys employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company went on strike to-day because coal was delivered at the Western Union Building by non-union teamsters.

Mayor Dunne declared that a call for State troops would follow a spread of the strike accompanied by violence.

ROCKEFELLER GOODS UPSET.

Spilled in Runaway Which Made Trouble in Seventy-second Street.

Two big bay horses, green to the life of the city, set the neighborhood of East Seventy-second Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues, into a turmoil yesterday morning, scattered children and some of the furniture of Percy A. Rockefeller, son of the late William Rockefeller, and trampled upon their plucky driver so that he was sent to the Presbyterian Hospital suffering with serious injuries.

The horses are the property of Thomas Martin of Dobbs Ferry. His son Robert drove them without trouble to Mr. Rockefeller's home, 17 East Seventy-second Street, to haul away a load of furniture to the country. They had shown no amazement at city sights until a big green automobile roared down the street toward Fifth Avenue. The machine came from behind them with tooting horn, and the horses took after it, following the trail of gasoline as hounds do an anise-seed bag.

As they swung into the avenue they were confronted by a north-bound automobile as green and as fragrant as the one that had scared them. The chauffeur just managed to swing clear and turn down Seventy-second Street, when the frightened horses wheeled to follow him instead of the first machine.

As the wagon turned a trunk dropped out and was split open. There also fell a looking glass, that did not shatter, but, landing against a tree on a mattress, reflected the panorama of an East Seventy-second Street scare, with frightened persons, with napkins in hand, peering out to learn what might be the matter. Martin, who had pursued his team, caught the off horse by the bridle and hung on. He could not stop the pair. Policeman Thomas Mooney of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station started to his assistance, but turned to brush free of danger two nurse girls pushing occupied perambulators of the sort that cost almost as much as automobiles.

Near the corner of Madison Avenue the horses took to the pavement, narrowly missing a lamppost in front of the home of Louis C. Tiffany and spilling the butler of Hugh J. Grant into the areaway. Robert Martin, the driver of the horses, kept his hold on the bridle, although his legs hit the lamppost in passing. The horses made a leap over the railing of the home of Miss Laura V. Rhinelander, carrying their driver with them. The wheels of the truck struck the stone balustrade, ripping the little pillars and railing apart and making a breach of ten feet.

Martin fell under the horses, which had fallen a distance of three feet into the areaway. Policeman Mooney dragged him out and sent for the ambulance, which took the unconscious driver to the hospital. There it was reported that he would probably recover, although he had suffered internal injuries.

The horses were not hurt by their escapade. It took half an hour for the butlers and other servants in the neighborhood to restore to Mr. Rockefeller his scattered belongings.

STATE ATTACKS EXCHANGE.

Attorney Declares Philadelphia Consolidated a Betting Place.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Attorney General Hampton L. Carson, for the Commonwealth, to-day filed with the Common Pleas Court what is known as an information in equity in the proceedings incident to receivership of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of Philadelphia. Hearing in the case, which was fixed for to-day, was postponed until Friday.

The information sets forth that the Consolidated Stock Exchange is maintained "to enable members and the public to stake money and bet upon the fluctuations of the stock market."

NAN PATTERSON HELD PISTOL---JUSTICE DAVIS

Says He Believes Majority of People Hold That Opinion.

HIS THEORY OF THE CASE

Thinks She Exhibited Pistol and Young Was Killed When He Seized It.

Supreme Court Justice Vernon M. Davis, who presided over the first two trials of Nan Patterson for the murder of "Caesar" Young in a cab last June, was the guest of honor last night at the monthly dinner of the Phi Delta Phi Club, a club of city lawyers. Justice Davis said he believed that most of the people were convinced that she had held the revolver which ended Young's life. He said her story of the events of the morning of the murder was not consistent. He did this in making a defense of Assistant District Attorney Rand, who prosecuted the woman at her three trials.

After telling about the needs of the criminal bar of New York, Justice Davis spoke at length in defense of Assistant District Attorney Rand and the part which he had played in the prosecution of Nan Patterson. Of Mr. Rand he said:

"We have heard a great deal in the public press of late of severe criticism of Mr. Rand, and his conduct of the trial. I have been told that Mr. Rand's address on the occasion of the third trial was about the same as the one which he had delivered on the second trial. Rarely have I heard a more eloquent speech than on that occasion.

"With the exception of Col. John R. Fellows, I think Mr. Rand is the most eloquent prosecutor I have ever heard. The people of New York are very fortunate in having him for their representative. He has been criticised, to be sure.

"There have been those to point out the fact that he was unduly severe to Miss Patterson. Part of the public holds that a public prosecutor is not called upon to denounce the defendant. If such a practice obtained, oftentimes there would be serious miscarriage of justice. If a prosecutor did not do his whole duty as he saw it prosecution would become ineffective, resulting in the breaking down of our most serious cases."

Of Nan Patterson, Justice Davis said that she was young, and that it was natural that the public should sympathize with her.

In reviewing the evidence of the woman at the second trial he said he believed Nan Patterson lied in telling of the death of Caesar Young and the circumstances leading to it.

"To-day, in the light of the last disagreement," he continued, "I feel sure that most people are convinced, that a majority of the people believe, that the pistol that killed Caesar Young was held by Nan Patterson, was discharged by her, and was bought by J. Morgan Smith.

"I don't mean to say that she took the pistol from the reticule and shot him in the side, but I do believe that she had the pistol and showed it to Caesar Young. An argument followed, and he took hold of it. In the conversation and consequent struggle the pistol went off, and the man was killed.

"I believe, moreover, that had she told the story on the witness stand as it really happened, the second jury would have acquitted her."

Henry W. Jessup presided at the dinner. Among those present were Prof. Isaac Franklyn Russell, George W. Alger, James V. Simpson, and Hans von Briesen.

It was reported on good authority last night that final arrangements had been made for Nan Patterson's immediate return to the stage, and that her managers would be Hurtig & Seamon. Her first appearance, it is believed, will be next Monday at that firm's Harlem music hall.

When Mr. Hurtig was asked as to his plans concerning the actress, he said it was a matter that he could not discuss at the time.

"To-morrow," he said, "I shall make it all public."

FIVE PER CENT. BANK FAILS.

Co-operative Savings Society of Connecticut Under a Receiver.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 15.—Fifty or more conservative Stamford business and professional men were caught in the failure of the Co-operative Savings Society of Connecticut, founded in 1893, which has just gone into the hands of a receiver. It was said to-night that more than $50,000 in deposits had been made by Stamford men, and that some $25,000 of the society's bonds were held here. Charles W. Rohne, former President and Treasurer of the society, has been appointed receiver.

There are agencies throughout the State. Depositors were attracted by 5 per cent. interest, which was cut to 4½ per cent. some time ago.

WATERLOO, N. Y., May 15.—The State Bank of Ovid, one of the institutions which had connections with A. C. Wilcox & Co., was closed to-day by Bank Commissioner Leonard.

According to a recent statement the bank had a paid-up capital of $25,000 and deposits of approximately $40,000.

BEEF BOOKS BEFORE JURY.

Bank Expert Testifies as to Aetna Company's Methods.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The Federal Grand Jury investigating the beef-packing industries to-day learned of the manner in which the Aetna Trading Company kept its books. It was through this company that the Beef Trust is said to have transacted its secret business.

National Bank Examiner Stareck, who for nearly two months has been studying the books, found in the six trunks taken from the First National Bank Building safety vaults, has completed his task and was before the jury to-day. The presence of Mr. Stareck in the juryroom and the placing of Mrs. Irving A. Vant and Mrs. Richard V. Hoes, wives of the Swift Packing Company, under $10,000 bonds, gave rise to rumors that the Grand Jury is about to return a large number of indictments within a few days.

Wins $800 Suit Against Mr. Sage.

NYACK, N. Y., May 15.—Ezekiel C. M. Rand, for twenty years confidential agent of Russell Sage, to-day obtained a verdict against Mr. Sage in the Rockland County Supreme Court for $800, which he said Sage owed him. The jury decided in Rand's favor immediately.

WEARS FLAG TO STOP GAME.

Woman Walks on Diamond and Tries to Get Stars and Stripes Hit.

HUTCHINSON, Minn., May 15.—Mrs. Slaight, a temperance reformer, to-day announced that she would call the attention of Federal officers to what she termed a violation of the American flag.

With a large flag wrapped about her, Mrs. Slaight yesterday entered the Hutchinson baseball grounds, in which she had had placards posted bearing the words: "To attack the flag of the United States while it is being used in the enforcement of law is, according to the statutes, high treason."

When the umpire called "play ball" Mrs. Slaight walked on the diamond and took up a position between the pitcher's box and the home base. The pitcher attempted to curve the ball around her, but, failing in this, another battery was placed a little to one side. The pitchers began tossing the ball alternately while Mrs. Slaight went from one line of fire to the other, apparently trying to get the American flag hit.

Finally the spectators swarmed on the field and, good naturedly surrounding the woman, forced her off the field.

TO ROUT GOV. PENNYPACKER.

Cousin Pennypacker Urges the Friends to March on Harrisburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Charles H. Pennypacker, burgess of Westchester, a cousin of Gov. Pennypacker, proposes to corral a mighty host on July 4, descend on Harrisburg, drawing up a new Declaration of Independence, send his cousin out of the Governor's chair, and put to rout "that octopus which is sapping the life blood of the people," the Republican machine. Burgess Pennypacker rose at the evening session of the yearly meeting of the Friends and said:

"Thee cannot fight one organization until thee makes another just as big to fight it. What this meeting must do is to issue an address to all the people, Friends and others, too, regardless of religion. Form them into a strong organization.

"That's what thee should do, but thee won't," he cried.

"We will, we will; go it, Brother Charles," interjected a small voice from the rear bench.

"We must issue a call for a big convention. I myself will lead the people to Harrisburg and there form a new gospel of independence, liberty, and virtue, and drive out the hucksters and spoilsmen from the party, and over the Capitol we should place this placard: 'Cash paid for country produce.'"

"Hurray!" shouted the Friends.

After casually referring to Mayor John Weaver as a "fly bitten Baptist" Burgess Charles sat down.

CAUGHT ON BRIDGE RAIL.

Passengers Pursued Man Who Threw Away Crutches and Leaped Off Car.

Fred Palmer of 173 Cherry Street, hobbled aboard a trolley car with the aid of his crutches late yesterday afternoon on the Brooklyn side of the bridge. When the car was half across the bridge, Palmer threw his crutches away and leaped to the south roadway.

A street car Inspector saw Palmer jump. He jerked the emergency bell and pursued Palmer, followed by two passengers. The three saw the supposed cripple climbing upon the outer bridge railing as if he intended to throw himself into the water. The women passengers screamed while Palmer fought the three men.

Having been dragged to the police booth on the Manhattan side of the bridge, Palmer broke loose from his captors and raced down the roadway. He was recaptured and locked up in the Oak Street Station on a charge of disorderly conduct. He denied that he intended to commit suicide.

GIRL DEAD; LAWYER SOUGHT.

Police Looking for Man Who Employed Miss Baradel.

Eleanora Baradel, nineteen years old, died yesterday at the Metropolitan Hospital and Dispensary, 248 East Eighty-second Street, whither she was taken Saturday from the house of Mrs. Julia Fabre of 131 East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street.

Mrs. Fabre was arraigned before Coroner Scholer yesterday and later in the day before Magistrate McAvoy in the Harlem Court and held without bail.

Detectives from two precincts have been asked by Coroner Scholer to arrest a man said to be of standing at the New York bar, by whom Miss Baradel is said to have been employed as typewriter and stenographer.

Miss Baradel lived with her parents and four brothers and sisters at 828 Tinton Avenue in the Bronx.

PARK LAND FOR YALE.

Graduates to Buy a $500,000 Tract as Gift to the University.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 15.—The probable purchase for Yale University of the Hillhouse estate, on Prospect Street, was announced to-day. It has an area of about thirty acres, and is valued at about $750,000, that part of it going to the university costing about $500,000, and it will constitute the most important gift that has come to Yale in half a century. The property lies to the eastward and immediately adjacent to the Sheffield Scientific School buildings.

William M. Barnum of New York, Gifford Pinchot of Washington, D. C.; Lewis H. Welch of New Haven, and Secretary Stokes of the Yale Corporation, are preparing the purchase on behalf of the graduates, who will raise money to buy and present the property to the university. It will be used as a park, and in the future may become a botanical garden.

ENDS CHAMBERLAIN'S HOPES ?

Balfour, It Is Said, Will Try to Keep in Power Till Fall of 1906.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 16.—The Daily Chronicle says it has good authority to assert that the Government has decided to postpone the dissolution of Parliament until the Autumn of 1906, and that this decision means the deathblow to tariff reform.

It is rumored in Liberal quarters that Premier Balfour will refuse to accept Joseph Chamberlain's compromise proposals, and that the struggle will result in Austen Chamberlain resigning the Chancellorship of the Exchequer.

CARRIES TRUST FIGHT INTO CANAL CONTRACTS

Buy Ships and Supplies Anywhere, President's Order.

DEMANDS EXPORT PRICES

Foreigners Get Steel Cars 30 Per Cent. Cheaper, Commission Finds—Left Free by Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The President, determined to brook no interference and delay to canal work from the trusts, has authorized the Panama Commission to buy any and all materials for the canal in the markets of the world, wherever the price invites. This decision was formally agreed on to-day at a luncheon at the White House when all members of the commission were present as guests of the President.

The occasion of the action was an effort of the commission to buy two steamships to add to the line between New York and Colon, which is to be operated in connection with the Panama Railroad. The commission found that the vessels could not be built in less than eighteen months and at a cost not less than $1,400,000, nor could they be bought in this country to any advantage.

It was learned, however, that two steamships of the burden needed and of recent construction could be bought for $700,000. The commission, therefore, brought the matter to the consideration of the President at once.

It was urged that a like experience would be met in almost every line of supplies. Iron and steel could be bought abroad cheaper than in the United States, and even the best products of the steel foundries of this country could be had at lower figures after they had been shipped out of its borders.

The President consulted Secretary Taft and found that he agreed in the plan to buy where the best material at the lowest price could be had. This, it was held, was the duty of the Commissioners as faithful servants of the Government.

Steel dumping cars, of which thousands will be used in excavation on the canal, are made in Pittsburg for all parts of the world. The foreign buyer, it is found, has 30 to 40 per cent. the best of the home market.

It was decided that if the Pittsburg manufacturers of dump cars would sell the Government as cheaply as they are selling in Europe and South America the commission would buy of them, otherwise the cars will be bought abroad.

A member of the commission, discussing the action of the President and the commission, said:

"This may shock the public, but it is simply business. We must make our funds go as far as possible, and build the canal as cheaply as the country expects us to do.

"Secretary Taft and the President asked Congress last Winter to express itself on this point, and lay down a policy for the commission to be governed by, but Congress chose to say nothing, and we are as free to act as if we were private business men doing the wisest we could do for our business concern.

"We shall buy what we want wherever we can do the best. This does not mean that our home concerns will not have the bulk of the business. They can have it all if they want it, and at prices that we feel sure involve no loss, but, on the contrary, bring profit. If not, why are they sending goods abroad all the time at lower figures than they get at home?"

HARVARD MAN'S YALE GIFT.

Fund of $10,000 to Stimulate Good Feeling Between the Universities.

NEW HAVEN, May 15.—It was announced at the meeting of the Yale Corporation to-day that a gift of $10,000 had been received by Yale from a Harvard graduate—whose name was withheld—for the purpose of cementing the good feeling between the two universities. The use of the fund was left entirely to the Yale Corporation, which has voted to expend it for securing from time to time lecturers from Harvard to speak before the students of Yale.

President Eliot of Harvard has accepted the Corporation's invitation to be the first lecturer.

PRISON FOR EX-CONGRESSMAN

L. P. Ohliger of Ohio Gets Eight Years for Bank Swindling.

CLEVELAND, May 15.—L. P. Ohliger, ex-President of the Wooster National Bank, pleaded guilty before Judge Taylor in the United States District Court this afternoon to an indictment charging him with having issued a draft when there were no funds in the bank to meet it. He was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary.

Ohliger is an ex-Congressman, ex-County Treasurer, ex-Postmaster, and was Collector of Internal Revenue at Cleveland during Cleveland's second Administration.

CUBANS WANT NEW TREATY.

Liberal Convention Objects to Platt Amendment—J. M. Gomez in Favor.

HAVANA, May 15.—The National Liberal Convention, which opened here to-night, unanimously, though tentatively, adopted the declaration of principles reported by a committee representing all factions of the party.

The declaration most applauded during the reading was one asserting that the Platt amendment to the permanent treaty between the United States and Cuba constitutes a danger of weakening Cuban sovereignty and that the treaty should be revised when opportunity offers.

The majority of the delegates favor the nomination for the Presidency of Gen. José Miguel Gomez.

BOLT STRIKES WORSHIPPERS.

Eighteen Hurt by Lightning as Pastor Urges Faith During Storm.

RICHMOND, Va., May 15.—While the Rev. W. F. Dunaway was exhorting his congregation in Cool Spring Baptist Church at Lee, Va., to take the Almighty as their leader in times of storm, lightning struck the building and injured eighteen persons, several of them seriously.

The bolt tore a hole through one of the pews and caused a panic.

PRESIDENT KEEPS BEARSKINS.

Mr. Roosevelt Has Too Many Requests for Trophies of His Hunt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The President intends to keep all the bear skins he got out West. At least, he told Representative Babcock of Wisconsin so when that statesman called to-day to get a bear skin.

"I wanted one of those bear skins," said Mr. Babcock, "but the President said he could not give it to me. He said he had received two or three times as many requests as he had bear skins, and for fear of hurting some one's feelings he had decided to keep all of the trophies of his hunt."

FAST TRAIN WRECK; TWO DEAD

Coaches Thrown 100 Feet as Flier Went Through Open Switch.

LAFAYETTE Ind., May 15.—Two trainmen were killed and six passengers injured this afternoon in the wreck of a Big Four passenger train which ran into an open switch at Otterbein while running forty miles an hour.

The mail and baggage cars were wrecked and four passenger coaches were thrown from their trucks and dashed 100 feet ahead of the locomotive. The parlor car at the rear of the train did not leave the tracks.

The killed were Herbert G. Haller, the engineer, and Hugh S. Babb, the fireman. The injured were W. P. Peacock, Indianapolis; Walter Freeman, Chicago; Elmer Hockersmith, Westport, Ind.; J. W. Egbert, mail clerk, Hamilton, Ohio; Drayton Brown, mail clerk, Indianapolis, and Thomas O. Fowler, Lafayette.

CORNELIUS BLISS BUYS HOME.

To Move from Madison Avenue to East Thirty-seventh Street.

Cornelius N. Bliss has bought for his own occupancy the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 29 East Thirty-seventh Street, near Madison Avenue. Mr. Bliss's present residence is at 198 Madison Avenue.

The deal for the Thirty-seventh Street house was negotiated by Broker Herbert A. Sherman.

GEN. GOMEZ VERY ILL.

Suffering from Complication of Diseases—His Family Summoned.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, May 15.—Gen. Maximo Gomez is dangerously ill with a complication of heart and kidney diseases.

The General's extreme age and the results of the many wounds he received in his campaigns for the liberation of Cuba increase the gravity of his condition. He rallied from an operation for an abscess a week ago, but suffered a relapse. His family has been summoned and will arrive here to-morrow.

The doctors' bulletin to-night is slightly favorable.

Offer to Raise $200,000,000—Russia Gets $100,000,000 at Home.

FRANKFORT, Tuesday, May 16.—The Zeitung's St. Petersburg correspondent says that the syndicate of French bankers with which Russia last February began negotiations for a new loan has now declared its willingness to raise $200,000,000, provided one-quarter of the proceeds is spent for the building of war vessels at French yards.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—An imperial decree is published authorizing the issue of $100,000,000 of short-term bonds, $75,000,000 of which has already been placed.

MRS. STANFORD'S BEQUEST.

Her Jewels, Worth $1,000,000, to Buy Books for University.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 15.—The cornerstone of the $800,000 library at Leland Stanford, Jr., University was laid to-day. A hitherto unpublished address to the students by the late Mrs. Stanford was read. In it she makes an unexpected endowment to be raised by the sale of her private jewels, which are estimated to be worth $1,000,000.

The income from this fund will be sufficient to purchase about 30,000 volumes for the library each year.

St. John's Cathedral Beneficiary in Will of Mrs. Mary A. King.

NEWPORT, May 15.—The will of Mrs. Mary Augusta King, wife of Edward Leroy King, filed to-day, sets aside $100,000 for the erection of a chapel in connection with the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, in memory of her daughter, Mary Leroy King.

A further sum of $5,000 is left to the cathedral, and among other public bequests, amounting to $9,000, there is one of $2,000 to the London Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

SCORE INJURED IN RACE TRAIN WRECK

Cars Derailed by Open Switch at Woodhaven Junction.

ENGINEER STUCK TO HIS POST

Prevented Bad Disaster—Many Bound to Belmont Park Refused Names, Fearing Loss of Place.

An overcrowded race-track special, bound to Belmont Park on the Atlantic Avenue Division of the Long Island Railroad, was wrecked yesterday afternoon at Woodhaven Junction by running into an open switch.

More than a score were hurt; one of these may die. Many of the injured—apparently clerks and other employes of that class—declined to give their names to the police and said that they would not sue for damages, their reason being that publication of their names would result in their losing their places.

When the train ran into the switch the engine jumped off, ran along for a while, and fell over on its side. The tender was smashed. Two cars ran off the track and smashed against each other.

There was a hero in the wreck. He is George Valentine of Morris Park, the engineer of the train. He stuck to his post in the face of what seemed certain death, and put on the emergency brakes. He thus probably prevented many lives from being lost. Valentine luckily came out of his engine, which was overturned and smashed up, with no injuries worth mentioning.

The open switch that was at the bottom of the accident was left open, according to the police, by Signalman Henry Ralph of 161 McKibbin Street, Brooklyn. He was arrested by order of Inspector Cross, and will be arraigned in court to-day on a charge of criminal negligence.

THE INJURED.

The list of injured is as follows:

DE MILT, JAMES, of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., fireman on the wrecked train; compound fracture of the right arm and internal injuries; may die; taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica.

CONNEALLY, THOMAS, hatter, 244 Chauncey Street, Brooklyn; back injured and ankle crushed; St. Mary's Hospital.

GREENE, GEORGE J., theatrical man, 1,408 Broadway, Williamsburg; ankle crushed and shoulder injured; St. Mary's Hospital.

HILL, Mrs. EMILIE, 330 Liberty Avenue, East New York; hip hurt and wrist sprained; St. Mary's Hospital.

DUCAS, JAMES, bookmaker, 53 Ashland Place, Brooklyn; wrist broken and back injured.

GARFUNKEL, ISIDOR, jeweler, 20 One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, Manhattan; cut about back and limbs; taken to Jamaica Hospital.

POHLMAN, JOHN H., 31 Bond Street, Wellington, N. J.; nose fractured and shoulder hurt; sent home.

McMAHON, A., 614 Forty-seventh Street, Brooklyn; right eye hurt and back sprained; sent home.

FEHARDIEN, ALBERT, Elizabeth, N. J.; wrist and shoulder hurt; sent home.

CLAYTON, GEORGE, 113 Henry Street, Brooklyn; back hurt; sent home.

DAYO, WILLIAM H., Market Street, Newark, N. J.; knee injured and severe contusions; sent home.

ELLINGER, EDWARD, 337 St. Nicholas Avenue, Brooklyn; contusions about body; sent home.

HAMILTON, WILLIAM, 145 Cooper Street, Brooklyn; shock and contusions; sent home.

BATTERMAN, ROBERT, 240 Hart Street, Brooklyn; right knee hurt; sent home.

WHISTLER, FRANK, 247 Vermont Street, Brooklyn; contusions and shock; sent home.

BARR, Miss EMILIE, Manhattan; cut about hands and face.

The train left the Flatbush station at 12:40 yesterday afternoon. It was made up of engine, tender, and nine crowded passenger coaches. Sc many were aboard that many had to stand up in the aisles. Most of the passengers were Brooklynites, but a fair-sized contingent had come across from New Jersey. The first stop was made at Franklin Avenue, and the second at the East New York station. From there the train was supposed to have a clear track straight to the park.

Some 150 feet west of the Woodhaven junction there is a switch just opposite Napier Avenue, where a side track curves from the Atlantic Avenue division into the Rockaway Beach division. Until recently this switch was operated by the interlocking switch system from the tower at the junction, which is in charge of Peter T. Mackin during the daytime. But the carrying out of the work connected with the electrification of the road recently made it necessary to disconnect this system as far as the Rockaway Beach line was concerned. Signalman Henry Ralph was then put in charge of the switch. He opened it at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon to let a train pass from one line to another. Instead of closing it at once, as was his duty, he returned to the tower, leaving it open. Mackin, who was unaware of this fact, had already set the signal for "go ahead" when the race track train was heard coming along at a speed of fully thirty miles an hour.

TRIED TO CLOSE SWITCH.

Just then Mackin happened to glance out through the tower window in the direction of the approaching train and discovered to his horror that the switch was open. Without losing a moment he rushed down stairs, hoping to be able to reach the lever of the switch—about 100 feet off—in time. But he was too late and nearly lost his life in his effort to forestall the catastrophe. He came within a couple of feet of being caught under the overturned engine.

The engine was of the old-fashioned "camel back" type, with the cab in the middle. De Milt, the fireman, was sitting on the toolbox by the side of the boiler. Valentine was at the throttle. The first he knew of the open switch was the jar the engine received when it struck the flange and began to topple over. Valentine might have jumped. Instead he stayed in the cab and did much good work that when the final crash came he had turned off the steam, reversed the power, and turned on the emergency brakes. That the reduction of speed thus achieved helped considerably to lessen the force of the crash is certain. Good fortune in the midst of misfortune helped also to reduce the extent of the disaster. After sliding along the roadbed some hundred feet, tearing up rails and ties as it plowed along, the top-heavy engine rolled over and landed on its side. As it went over the boiler and the cab were torn from the trucks. Valentine was still inside the cab, surrounded by escaping steam. De Mift was thrown fully thirty feet away, landing on the Rockaway track, where he was picked up unconscious.

The tender broke loose from the engine and went straight on, running full tilt against the wall of the switch tower. But when it got that far the force of its progress was spent, and it stopped without doing any harm to the frame structure.

WRECK SPREAD LIKE A FAN.

By some lucky chance, the first passenger coach, instead of following the tender, turned off to the left across the west-bound track. After tearing down a signal pole, it landed against another pole on the other side of both tracks, with its platforms crushed, its windows broken, and its bottom partly ripped open. Thus the wreck was spread out like a fan. The second coach went also off the track, bumping into the first one, but not with sufficient force to telescope it. Most of the injured were in the first two cars, and some of them were at the time riding on the front platform. That they escaped death seemed a miracle to those who witnessed the accident.

One of those on the platform was Robert Batterman. As the coach brought up against the second pole he was thrown forward with terrible force, but sustained only a comparatively slight injury of the knee. Thomas Conneally was sitting in one of the cross-seats. He was thrown clear out through the window, losing consciousness. When he came to he was being attended to on the station platform by a surgeon. He is among the most seriously hurt.

As soon as the wreck had occurred, Ralph ran to the nearest telephone and notified the Queens Police Headquarters at Jamaica of what had happened. The neighboring hospitals were notified at once, and inside of ten minutes two ambulances from St. Mary's Hospital and two from the Jamaica Hospital had arrived, and Doctors Rorke, Mitchell, Morsch, and Gaines were attending to the wounded. Squads of police were also hurried to the wreck.

A majority of those hurt were injured by falling glass. They were all taken into the Woodhaven station, which became transformed into an emergency hospital. Many physicians from the neighborhood helped the ambulance surgeons.

The work of rescuing and assisting the injured had hardly started when those who had suffered no hurts, or only slight ones, began to clamor for a chance to reach the track in spite of all. Several of those who were pretty badly cut up were not less eager. A well-dressed and handsome young woman was among these. Two of her left fingers were badly lacerated and she had several cuts on her face. But she barely submitted to having her wounds dressed.

"Hurry up, doctor," she cried excitedly, "I have a dead sure tip on the third race, and I am going to get there if I lose a leg on the way."

She said that she was Miss Emilie Barr and that she was engaged as a chorus girl in one of the Manhattan theatres. She, and many others with her, managed to reach the track by using the Jamaica Avenue trolley line, which runs about five blocks from the railroad.

The traffic on the Atlantic Avenue division of the Long Island Road was badly crippled, although a wrecking crew was at work within thirty minutes after the smashup. Two more specials were stalled behind the wrecked one. The west-bound track was cleared in about two hours, but the east-bound one, on which the accident occurred, could not be used before nightfall.

SAY HE'S A JEKYLL AND HYDE.

This to be Defense of George Wood, on Trial for Watchung Murder.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., May 15.—It is said that the defense of George H. Wood, on trial here for the murder of George Williams, a Watchung grocer, will be that he is a double personality, as much as were the fanciful Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde of Robert Louis Stevenson. The contention will be made, according to report, that while Wood is in one state or the other he has but the faintest recollection of things done by his other self.

The old Court House was filled to the doors when the prisoner was brought in for the trial this morning. He manifested little interest in the proceedings, not even consulting S. S. Swackhamer, his counsel, when the jury was being selected.

The jury was quickly completed, and half a dozen witnesses told how George Williams had, on Feb. 2 last, engaged Wood to drive him across the Watchung Mountains, and that several hours later Williams's body was found in the sleigh with a bullet hole in the back.

Prosecutor Reger declared that he would show positively that robbery was the motive for the murder.

Magistrate Discharges Prisoners in Electric Poolroom Case.

Five prisoners arrested last Saturday in a raid made by Acting Captain Bourke of the Mercer Street Station on a poolroom equipped with an elaborate system of electrical defenses were discharged from custody in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday by Magistrate Cornell. William Bredin, a stenographer, living at the St. Paul Hotel, was the chief witness for the prosecution.

The defense produced a letter, which Bredin acknowledged having written on Thursday of last week, in which the witness said that he wished to borrow $50 from the managers of the poolroom in West Third Street, in return for which he agreed to supply the proprietors of the place with "valuable information."

The defense showed that earlier on the same day Bredin had told the police about the poolroom, and had also visited the District Attorney's office.

Magistrate Cornell said he had no confidence in anything the witness should thereafter testify to, and said that the only course left open to him was to discharge the prisoners.

IS IN DOUBT ABOUT ADAM.

The Rev. Mr. Dushaw Posed by Theological Queries.

The Rev. Amos Isaac Dushaw, pastor of South Park Chapel, Newark, was examined yesterday for entrance to the New York Presbytery at Presbytery meeting in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street.

Mr. Dushaw passed in Hebrew, Latin, and Greek, but failed to pass in theology. When asked if he believed in the literal fall of Adam, he was non-committal. When asked if he believed in the historical value of Genesis, particularly of the first three chapters, he said he thought Genesis might be somewhat allegorical, but he was not prepared to answer the question finally.

A committee, of which the Rev. Dr. Jesse Forbes of the Adams Presbyterian Chapel was made Chairman, was appointed to examine Mr. Dushaw before the meeting of the Presbytery in June.

The Presbytery negatived the proposition to be voted upon by the General Assembly at its meeting which begins on Thursday at Winona Lake, Ind., providing for a judicial commission to comprise a final board of review.

HIGGINS'S HOPE IN UNIONS.

Governor Sees Solution of Labor Question in These Organizations.

BUFFALO, May 15.—Gov. Frank W. Higgins addressed an open meeting of the delegates to the National Convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen to-night. The convention hall was crowded to the doors. Gov. Higgins said in part:

"The State of New York looks to you to curb on the one hand the reckless and discontented employe and on the other the selfishness of the employer. Long study of the labor problem leads me to the conclusion that the outrages which have at times disgraced our industrial wars, in the first place are to be condemned—but no more than the injustice of the short-sighted capitalist—and in the second place are abuses of a beneficial system. To a perfection and understanding of your organizations I look for a solution of the labor question."

BID FROM NEW YORK FOR PHILADELPHIA GAS

Offer to Pay City $20,000,000 and Take Up Lease.

RENTAL OF $1,250,000 A YEAR

City to Get Percentage of the Profits and Have Representation in Management.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—The Finance Committee of City Councils to-day received bids for the lease of the city gas works. The only bidder, E. B. Smith & Co., bankers, representing New York capitalists, proposed:

To pay to the city not to exceed $20,000,000 in 1907 to take up the lease now held by the United Gas Improvement Company; to pay the city an annual rental of $1,250,000 during the life of the lease, the city to participate in the net annual profits, 33 1-3 per cent. during the first ten years and 50 per cent. thenceforth until expiration. At any time within five years after execution and delivery of the lease the lessee to pay to the city, if so required, a sum not to exceed $25,000,000, retaining annual rental to reimburse the lessee. The city to have one-third representation in management of the company.

The bid was referred to a sub-committee.

The following was sent out from Boston over the signature of Thomas W. Lawson last night:

"The story that I bought Philadelphia Gas is false. I am not behind the purchase. I would like to have been, and at one time thought it possible, but found there was about the same chance of any one outside the 'system' breaking into the Pennsylvania preserves of the 'system,' even at $20,000,000 cash, as there is for a human to navigate hell on a wax wafer.

"In my opinion, Philadelphia must, like New York, remain aspyxiated for a while longer, but if I guess the signs of the times aright it won't be much longer."

POLICE CLEAR RESORTS.

Proprietors Must Bar Disorderly Charters, Flood Says.

Capt. Flood of the West Forty-seventh Street Station decided yesterday upon a new plan to drive disorderly persons from his precinct. He sent letters to the managers and proprietors of saloons and resorts, which these persons frequent, telling them that it is against the law to allow persons known to the police as suspicious and disorderly characters to congregate at their places.

The Captain told them that he had assigned several detectives to watch and notify them if disorderly characters frequented their places.

Just before midnight Capt. Flood sent out his detectives, and there was great excitement in the various resorts. Persons were ordered into the street by the detectives, and the proprietors were warned not to allow them to enter again. The news soon spread throughout the new Tenderloin.

In Seventh Avenue and about Times Square hundreds of men and women were put out into the rain. Detectives took those whom they knew to the various proprietors and warned them, and then drove the persons out. At 12:30 o'clock the resorts usually filled with women and men were practically empty.

BICYCLIST LEFT HIS VICTIM.

Old Woman Knocked Down and May Die—Policeman Chased Rider.

Mrs. Richard Kilday, sixty-two years old, of 704 Lorimer Street, Williamsburg, was fatally injured yesterday at Leonard and Frost Streets by being knocked down by a bicycle ridden by Lingora Allia of 21 Richardson Street.

Allia was riding along the asphalt pavement at a rapid pace. Mrs. Kilday was crossing the street when the wheel ran her down. She fell on her head and was rendered unconscious. Instead of going to the aid of the woman, Allia remounted his wheel and rode off. Bicycle Policeman Riley set out to capture him. He pursued Allia for nearly a mile before he got him.

Meanwhile Mrs. Kilday had been carried into a store and several doctors were summoned. She had sustained concussion of the brain and internal injuries. The bicycle rider is held pending her condition.

YEAR FOR STEPHEN O'BRIEN.

Policy Man to Make No Effort to Escape Serving Term.

Stephen O'Brien, reputed to be one of the "men higher up" in policy circles in Brooklyn, was yesterday sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment in the penitentiary by Judge Crane, in the Kings County Court. It was expected that O'Brien's counsel, Luke D. Stapleton, would apply for a certificate of reasonable doubt, pending an appeal, but the lawyer said his client would accept the situation and serve out his term.

O'Brien was convicted last week by a jury on a charge of maintaining a house in High Street where policy was played.

POSTUM.

"THE OLD DELIGHT"

Before Coffee Did Its Work.

When you get from food that power which keeps the heart beating high, full and regularly, and the nerves firm and steady, you may say with Monte Cristo, "The World is mine!"

All things that may be attained by human endeavor are possible to you.

But if you fill the stomach with drugs instead of food, you get only an unnatural stimulation which leaves you in worse condition than you were before. Coffee is a drug. In time that sort of thing wears on you and wrecks the whole nervous system. Sure, sure, sure! A lady of Mamaroneck, N. Y., tells how she became a nervous wreck through the use of coffee:

"I had been a sufferer," she says, "from nervous indigestion for a number of years and doctored for the same without result. I was in part to blame, for although the physician forbade me the coffee, and limited me to a small allowance of tea, I failed to obey him, and continued to use coffee until I became a nervous wreck. My digestion got to be so poor that I was unable to eat scarcely anything. I became very much depressed and discouraged over my condition, for I had no hope of relief, until a little more than a year ago a friend recommended Postum Food Coffee.

"I was greatly surprised to find that the new beverage acted almost immediately and most favorably upon my nerves. It certainly is a nerve builder, at least it has been in my case. In an incredibly short time my nervous indigestion disappeared entirely, and with it has gone the depression and 'blues' that follow in its train.

"I am careful to boil Postum Coffee from 20 to 30 minutes—then, using either boiled or condensed milk, or cream, the latter preferred, I have as delicious a beverage as the old coffee at its best, and never feel anything but pleasant effects from its use and the old delight of being well." YACHTS START TO-DAY IN KAISER'S CUP RACE hope that they would see two or three of the cup boats under sail. Except for the Endymion, which joined the Atlantic early in the morning at anchor inside the Horseshoe, none of the fleet left its station. Capt. Loesch took tow from Bay Ridge at 8 o'clock, and at 10 was berthed off the Hook. He lay slightly astern of the Atlantic, where visitors might readily compare the rig and points of the two favorites in the public mind. Both boats were idle all day save for odd tasks of splicing or stretching.

Capt. Barr went ashore early in the morning, and at a late hour had not yet returned, although Wilson Marshall and his guests reached the yacht shortly after 5 o'clock, coming down the bay on a tug from the New York Yacht Club station at Twenty-third Street. A few visitors boarded her with Mr. Marshall, and had a last look over the trim craft before she begins her long momentous trip across the ocean.

Commodore Lauder and his six guests arrived aboard the Endymion at 6 o'clock, and found Capt. Loesch waiting on the deck to welcome them. The confidence aboard the Indian Harbor boat should prove an important factor in deciding her chances in the contest. All are eager, and with a driver like Capt. Jim aboard it is not unlikely that with favorable conditions her old record of thirteen days and twenty hours will be considerably bettered.

The third craft to join the two at the Hook was the diminutive Fleur de Lys. All morning she lay off Tompkinsville with the Thistle and Hamburg, awaiting the arrival of Dr. Stimson and his guests. At 3 o'clock J. B. Connolly, Dr. Stimson, Elliott Tuckerman, and Miss Stimson went aboard. Capt. Tom Bohlin immediately hoisted sail, and the little schooner began her trip to the Horseshoe. No attempt was made to speed. She leisurely made her way to an anchorage aft the Endymion. Less than half hour later the three were joined by the huge Valhalla.

The next boat to seek the Hook was the Utowana, which left the New York Yacht Club station off Twenty-third Street, East River, in tow shortly before 6 o'clock. About 5 Allison V. Armour, her owner, went aboard, and ten minutes afterward he was joined by Jordan L. Mott and William Williams, who will be his guests on the trip across. The Utowana made a good impression on those who watched her drop her anchor, and the select following which anticipates that she may figure more largely than is expected by most yachtsmen in the contest felt highly gratified with the expressions of admiration which she called forth.

At 8 o'clock the Hildegarde, long mysteriously absent from New York, and daily expected to appear, sought a berth beside the other five and settled for a quiet night. On board her with Edward R. Coleman was Dr. Robert Lecomte, Frank Platt, and A. E. Barker, who will accompany the Philadelphian in the race.

At the New York Yacht Club station lay the Sunbeam and Ailsa taking on supplies. Tugs have been ordered for 8:30 o'clock this morning to take them down the bay. Late in the afternoon the Apache left her position in the North River and joined the pair at the Twenty-third Street station. At 11 o'clock last night Mr. Randolph and his friends went aboard her ready to be towed to the Hook at 6:30 this morning.

The Thistle and Hamburg continue to occupy their station at Tompkinsville. Commodore Tod went aboard in the evening, but his guests will arrive on the tug Unique when she goes down to tow the trim Atlantic Yacht Club boat to the starting line at 9 o'clock this morning. The Hamburg expects her tow to pick her up at 7 and to proceed leisurely to the Horseshoe.

Those who think it worth while to make an early start and go down the bay to watch sails set on the eleven craft prior to their moving toward the lightship should be well repaid.

MANY PLAN TO SEE START.

Large Fleet of Private Boats—While Public May Take Cepheus.

Given suitable weather there is every indication that there will be at Sandy Hook to see the start of the ocean race a flotilla of boats in gala array, pennants flying, and bunting bedecked that would be worthy of an America's Cup event. This fleet of private yachts which will attend will carry many parties, some of them having peculiar interest by reason of the fact that they include relatives and close personal friends of the New York owners of the contending boats.

Alfred Marshall's splendid new 131-foot steam cruiser Levanter, which was launched less than three weeks ago and on which rush work has bene done to fit it for this occasion, will carry Wilson Marshall's family and friends to bid him Godspeed on the favorite Atlantic.

J. Kennedy Tod will have a tug with Mrs. Robert E. Tod aboard and a number of friends of the ex-Commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club, whose popularity is deservedly greater, probably, than that of any other New York yachtsman, and to whom, more than to any other man, the ocean yacht race is due. They will give Commodore Tod a send-off worthy of his prominence in the Kaiser Cup race that will be supplemented by a rousing reception from the special boat engaged by the Atlantic Yacht Club.

The Sea Gate yachtsmen will go down the Bay on the Iron Steamboat Company's Sirius, which will leave Pier 1, North River, stopping on the way at the Crescent Athletic Club pier at Bay Ridge and at Sea Gate to complete its quota of guests. They have courteously arranged to take aboard, in addition to their own party, a large representation of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, anxious to send off Commodore George Lauder, who, on the Endymion, is thought to have an especially good chance to carry off the cup.

The New York Yacht Club will have probably the largest turn out of the lot. It has engaged the Iron Steamboat Company's boat Cygnus, which will leave the pier at Twenty-second Street, North River. There have been over 400 more applications for places aboard than can be accommodated. An effort is now being made to arrange for a second boat if possible. The Atlantic, Apache, Ailsa, Lleur de Lys and Utowana will fly the New York Yacht Club pennant.

Evans R. Dick will have as his guests on the Elsa II. Capt. Reeder of the United States battleship Alabama and a large party from the Racquet and Tennis Club, including McGee Ellsworth, Edward Livingston, Jr., Harry S. Day, George E. Wood, Arthur P. Sturges, Frank C. Bishop, John Irving, Philip T. Brown, H. K. Vingut, E. La Montagne, E. A. Thompson, and Louis La Roque.

The Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club has arranged for the tug Mutual, which will leave Pier A, North River, to take the members to the Hook. The Harlem Democrate Club has engaged the tug E. M. Trimmins, and will leave Pier 1, North River, at 10:30 o'clock. The lighter America will carry the members of the Produce Exchange from Pier 1, North River, at 10:30 o'clock. Nor will the public, which is not fortunate to find places in the flotilla of private boats, lack representation. For those who desire to go down the Bay early in order to see the boats set sail before towing to the line, the tug Taurus will leave Twenty-first Street, East River, at 7:30 o'clock, touching at Pier 1, North River, at 8:20. The Iron Steamboat Company's Cepheus will leave from Twenty-second Street Pier, North River, promptly at 10:45, stopping at the Battery a half hour later to complete its allotment.

PREVIOUS OCEAN RACES.

Early Transatlantic Contests and Some Notable Trips.

The Kaiser Cup race is the fourth time sailing yachts have essayed the trip across the Atlantic. In the first three American racers met. The second was international, between England and America, in which the Britisher won. The third was between two American rivals.

The first was decided in 1866. It was contested by the Vesta, the Henrietta, and the Fleetwing. They sailed from Sandy Hook to the Lizard, and the Henrietta won in 13 days, 21 hours, and 55 minutes.

The race grew out of a rivalry between Franklin Osgood and James Gordon Bennett, resulting from a match race from Sandy Hook to Cape May and back, in which Osgood's Fleetwing beat Bennett's Henrietta. Bennett offered to wager $10,000 that the Henrietta could show her stern to the Fleetwing all the way in another race if they went the width of the Atlantic. A match was arranged, and later Pierre Lorillard entered the Vesta in it. The stakes were $10,000 a side. Though the Vesta sailed faster than either of the other two, a mistake of her skipper cost him the race.

The Dauntless sailed the second transatlantic race in 1870 against the English Cambria, owned by J. G. Asbury. It was started from Cork on July 4, and ended at Sandy Hook 23 days later, the Cambria winning by 1 hour and 43 minutes. The Dauntless also sailed the third, against the Coronet, from Bay Ridge to Queenstown, in 1887, for $10,000 a side, the Coronet winning in 14 days, 20 hours, and 30 minutes, 29 hours ahead of her rival.

From this time on there was little done in ocean racing, even for the Cape May and Brenton Reef Cups. A revival followed the Atlantic cruise in 1899, when Katrina, Coronet, Ramona, and Sachem sailed from Shelter Harbor to Seagate outside, and finished within 5 minutes of each other, with Tod's Katrina one second ahead of the Coronet at the finish line. He built the Thistle in 1901, and she was one of ten yachts, including the Hildegarde, Endymion, and Fleur de Lys, which contested four outside races in the following year.

Last year the Atlantic and the Endymion contested for both the Brenton Reef and Cape May Cups, the Atlantic winning both. She finished ahead in the Brenton Reef race, with light weather all the way. The Resolute also contested the race. In the Cape May event the Vergemere was a third competitor. Though Endymion was the first to turn the lightship at the Cape, the Atlantic was first home.

The brig Cleopatra's Barge of Salem showed the way across the Atlantic for American yachtsmen in 1817. She left Salem in March, touched at the Azores, Madeira, and Gibraltar, and toured the Mediterranean, returning in October. She was feted everywhere.

In 1851 the America made her memorable trip across that resulted in the capture of the cup that's borne her name and been the object of international competition ever since. She went over under small rig, and made the trip to Havre in 21 days and 8 hours.

The next notable passage was made by the Silvie in 16 days, 12 hours from New York to Havre. She was a centreboard racing sloop of 105 tons' burden. This was in 1855.

The forty-eight-foot sloop Alice created a sensation at the Isle of Wight in 1868 by making the passage across in 19 days from Nahant to the Needles. British yachtsmen were amazed at the intrepid daring of Capt. Clark in taking so small a craft over under racing rig. She received an ovation everywhere as she toured British waters.

The Endymion's record trip was the other notable occurrence when she made it in 13 days, 20 hours, and 36 minutes, averaging ten knots.

Suppose the expense in one department of your business is $50 a week higher than it should be.

Suppose you discover this fact ten months later when you make up your annual statement.

Loss, $2,000.

A very simple L. B. Card system would have pointed out the leak the first week.

ALEXANDER COUTTS DEAD.

Report at Home of Girl Whom Rich London Merchant Married.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, May 15.—News was received here to-day announcing the death in London of Alexander Coutts, said to be one of the richest men in the English metropolis. Mr. Coutts married Miss Ella Willoughby, the daughter of the late Francis Willoughy, an employe of the Singer Manufacturing Company. The widow wrote to T. M. Kelly, a local lawyer, confirming the news of her husband's death, and requesting him and his sister to visit her in London.

Mrs. Coutts was born of poor parents. She was adopted by a wealthy New York woman whom she chanced to meet on a railroad train. The girl was treated as a member of the family, and when the foster mother went to reside in London she obtained a social position. She was married to a Hongkong tea merchant of the name of Efner, who died, leaving her his entire estate. She then embarked in the hotel business in Hongkong, and subsequently met Mr. Coutts, who was a son of a tea merchant in Shanghai.

SHUBERTS THANK THE PUBLIC.

Received Thousands of Letters of Sympathy on S. S. Shubert's Death.

On behalf of the theatrical firm of Shubert Brothers, J. J. Shubert, Lee Shubert, and J. W. Jacobs yesterday issued the following statement:

"The sudden death of Mr. Sam S. Shubert has elicited so universal an expression of sorrow, taking form in thousands of letters and telegrams, that we have found ourselves unable to reply individually to every one who has reached out a hand of sympathy to us in our bereavement. We take this means, therefore, of voicing our heartfelt thanks to our employes, to our personal friends, to the newspapers, to the members of the theatrical profession all over the world, and to the general public for words of comfort and encouragement. There is so little that can be said at this time to show how fully we appreciate those words that we must ask their senders to take for granted the sincerity and depth of our gratitude."

PATENT MEDICINE HER FAD.

Wife Had 300 Bottles, Husband Said, and Withheld His Dowry Besides.

When Mrs. Louis Zucker, who is forty-five years old, and lives at 159 Fourteenth Street, Hoboken, appeared yesterday in Recorder Stanton's court against her husband, whom she charged with assault and battery, the defendant, who is a tailor, set up a remarkable defense. He told the Recorder that when he married the complainant, four and a half years ago, she represented that she had $800, and it was understood that he was to have whatever was left of this sum after the wedding expenses had been paid.

He said that his first wife was penniless, and he would never have thought of marrying a second time without the expectation that his wife would bring him a dowry. The wedding cost $300, Zucker said, and, according to the alleged agreement, he should have received $500, but, as he informed the court, he had received only $140, and there was still $360 owing him. His wife, he declared, read all the patent medicine advertisements in the newspapers, and whenever she came across a new one she would say that it was just what her system required, and would buy a bottle. There were now, Zucker alleged, some 300 bottles of patent medicines at his home. The Recorder told the couple to go home and settle their differences.

Letter Carriers' Night at Fair.

It was Letter-Carriers' Night at the church fair at Palm Garden, on Fifty-eighth Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues, last night. The fair, which began May 8, and will end May 22, is being held by the parishioners of St. Ambrose's Church, the rector of which is Father John P. Chidwick, who was the Chaplain on board the battleship Maine. The poor of the parish will benefit. There are four voting contests.

So Many Persons

in New York are directly or indirectly interested in the clothing business that no firm can mislead the public for long and not be found out. Misstatements in clothing advertising are boomerangs.

The values we're giving in this great suit sale now in progress seem scarcely believable, but investigation will prove them actual.

On sale this morning are about six hundred men's suits in four grades as follows:

Grade I.	$15	suits at $9.50
Grade II.	$18	suits at $11.50
Grade III.	$20	suits at $13.50
Grade IV.	$25	suits at $15.50

These garments are of all-wool materials, both foreign fabrics and domestic, in patterns and colorings that are in many instances exclusive. Every garment is hand tailored, every coat has unbreakable shoulders. The styles are 1905's best. The sizes range from "youths'" 15 to men's 46 inches chest. Here's your chance for a spring or summer suit at a third saving. Will you take it?

Redfern Whalebone Corsets

The closest scrutiny reveals only exact work in the Redfern Models, which results in making figure beauty. We shall never sell a corset for the sake of making a sale. It must prove its fitness. Therefore we prefer that you have your corsets fitted by our special corsetiere, who is trained by the designer of Redfern Models and will see that you are properly corseted in the "new fashion."

Why Syrup of Figs is the best family laxative

It is pure.
It is gentle.
It is pleasant.
It is efficacious.
It is not expensive.
It is good for children.
It is excellent for ladies.
It is convenient for business men.
It is perfectly safe under all circumstances.
It is used by millions of families the world over.
It stands highest, as a laxative, with physicians.
If you use it you have the best laxative the world produces.

Because

Its component parts are all wholesome.
It acts gently without unpleasant after-effects.
It is wholly free from objectionable substances.

It contains the laxative principles of plants.
It contains the carminative principles of plants.
It contains wholesome aromatic liquids which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste.

All are pure.
All are delicately blended.
All are skillfully and scientifically compounded.

Its value is due to our method of manufacture and to the originality and simplicity of the combination.

To get its beneficial effects—buy the genuine.

Simpson Crawford Co—Daily Bulletin

ESTABLISHED 1879. 6TH AVE.—18TH TO 20TH ST.

To those going to Europe this Summer, remember our Paris Office, No. 1 Cite Tunis, is conveniently located. Make it your headquarters.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, MAY 16, 1905.

Convenient—Restful—Delightful. Our Eighth Floor Restaurant is popular with shoppers and business men. It is a pleasing place to luncheon.

MAY 16 1905

Here are more of those extraordinary waist values.

RIGHT at the turn of the season when every smart dresser's confronted with the necessity of selecting a supply of these sheer, cool Summer waists comes this great sale of fashionable and beautiful creations—the result of the largest purchase we have made in a year or more.

Second Floor.

Some of them are as low as half price, and in every instance the saving is large enough to appeal to every woman as strongly as the smart styles themselves.

Very fine white waists made of lawn and dotted Swiss and handsomely trimmed with dainty lace insertion and embroidery—some with round yoke and square yoke effect, others trimmed with embroidery insertions and fine tucks and the new deep trimmed cuff—we've divided this great purchase in four distinct lots to facilitate choosing.

1.00 for 1.95 white lawn waists.
1.95 for 2.50 white lawn waists.
2.98 for 3.95 dotted Swiss waists.
3.95 for 7.95 sheer lawn waists.

3.95 for 7.50 silk waists—those dressy, smart creations—not a waist in the lot worth less than $6—made of crepe de Chine and plain silks—all prettily trimmed—think they're the season's best values.

95c. Jap kimonos at 59c.

NEEDLESS to say, it required a very great purchase to enable us to offer the new styles and effects other stores are showing at 95c. at the extremely low price of 59c. The designs are simply stunning—the colored lawn border effects and the fine dotted lawns, with square collar and sleeves and sacque finished with shell stitch, instantly make them the most popular house garments for Summer..... 59c

Second Floor.

$1.23 for women's figured lawn kimono gowns.
$2.95 for dotted Swiss negligees—with soft belt.

Did you hear of the enthusiasm $45 tailored costumes at $25 created?

WE'VE a hundred more for to-day; and if they sell as rapidly as they did yesterday, we'll not have one left by to-night. They're likely to sell even faster, as the charming creations so many smart dressers selected yesterday will be a fine advertisement for them. If every woman could see what wonderful bargains they are, we wouldn't have half enough to supply the demand.

$45 Tailored Costumes (like cut) $25

Here's the story of their acquirement:—New York's recognized premier maker of high grade, high cost, fashionable costumes desired to use up his odd ends—one or two dress lengths of imported fabrics at a decided reduction from the regular price if we'd take the entire products—told him we would if he'd duplicate one of our new and most fashionable short sleeve models—they are here for you to-day—you'll go in ecstasies over each creation.

Third Floor.

$25 for $45 new model made special for this sale—strictly fine tailored costumes, with short demi-fitted jacket a little above waist line and very full plaited skirt. This very attractive garment comes in a variety of materials—one or two of a kind—mixed suitings, plain and fancy brilliantines—also soft outing materials—new short full sleeves with fine lace edging—coat daintily trimmed with Persian trimming of corresponding colors—narrow silk braid, fancy buttons and fashioned with silk ornaments.

$22.50 FOR $35 SUITS—a collection that has been culled from the regular stock, where we are short of sizes and have a few models that have been nearly twice the price—scarcely two in the same model or material—but a collection large enough to give a variety of materials and models to suit the purchaser—in light weight broadcloth, fancy high colored Panamas, serges and mixtures—also a few voiles and silks—all the different models shown this season.

$14.75 for up to $29.75 suits—comprising a special lot in a big range of materials—Panama cloth, serges, plain and herringbone effects—also pin checks and hairline stripes, invisible plaits and fancy mixtures—in the smart Eton jacket, the surplice blouse style, the short, jaunty, tight fitting coats and various other models. A very attractive showing.

English eyelet robes the $12.50 quality at $7.50

THE material, workmanship and style put into these robes does not permit them to be sold for less than $12.50, but here's a rare instance wherein we secured the entire surplus production from the manufacturer in St. Gall, Switzerland.

It is always necessary to clear out such stock at this time regardless of the cost, as the room they occupy is needed for creations now being made up for the Fall and Winter season. You know the maker works fully six months ahead.

Main Floor.

These robes make a complete and fashionable Summer frock with just a little work. They are to-day the swellest and most sought after materials for Summer suits, and at the prices we offer them to-day they'll go before night.

Just received from St. Gall a large shipment of those English eyelet embroidered robes that everybody wants now—that are so scarce. We are fortunately able to offer to our customers to-day 300 of them in the kinds that are mostly desired—those beautiful flounce effects of English eyelet embroidery—correct Paris model shapes—beautiful every one of them—it's the opportunity of the season to secure them at this sale—you will want several when you see them—among them are several other styles of white embroidered robes for people who do not favor the English eyelet effects.

$7.50 for 12.50 values.
$12.50 for 20.00 values.
$14.50 for 25.00 values.
$16.50 for 30.00 values.

Annual May sale of hosiery for men and women. A great new lot of 50c and 75c hosiery at 29c

FOR years our annual sale prices have made the month of May the time of thousands of men and women to purchase a Summer supply of fine hosiery, but the values have never been so extraordinary as they are in the sale that started Monday and continues through to-day. That fact is evidenced by the increase in business yesterday. We sold more than double the amount of hosiery ever disposed of on the first day of any previous sale. Inspection will prove to you the reason for this sale's popularity.

Main Floor.

Every pair of hose in this great exposition of new Summer designs and sheer beautiful effects is bought either direct from the manufacturer in Europe, where the world's famed hosiery is made, or at first cost price from importers who desire to dispose of their surplus importations—all are imported, embodying the latest and cleverest effects created abroad.

Pyrography.

Our Fourth Floor display.

BURNT wood in all the effectiveness of its lights and shadows, also stained in artistic colors.

There is a certain contrast about burnt wood pieces that makes them doubly attractive to the eye—and again they are distinctively new, and just now the demand for pyrographic pieces proves their popularity for Summer home furnishers.

Artistically burnt Christy drawings, photo frames, etc., are inexpensive and acceptable prizes for Summer card parties.

This interesting art may be easily learned in a few lessons, and in conjunction with the finished pieces we are selling plain stamped wood or pattern pieces.

Everything priced to popularize this fast growing department—priced below what you would expect to pay. Our expert will instruct without charge.

Panels, round, oblong, oval and square shapes stamped with Christy drawing—Dutch, Indian and hunting designs—10c. to $1.00.

Photo frames, single and double—also three and four openings—very popular—prices 15c. to $1.50.

HANDKERCHIEF, glove and work boxes—cigar and chip boxes—whisk broom holders and pin trays—clocks, thermometers—inkstands, pipe racks and numerous other novelties with new designs. Prices ranging from 25c. to $1.00.

COMPLETE LINE OF COLOR PAINTS AND OTHER SUNDRIES.

Burning outfits complete, $1.25.

$19.75 for $35 brass beds, bonafide values, too.

THANKS to the manufacturer we're able to get the price down so low that town, country and Summer home furnishers are buying these handsome brass beds for Summer instead of iron beds. They're more economical, more beautiful and more serviceable, as in the Fall they can be transferred to the city home. Come and select one while the manufacturer is selling his entire over production to Simpson Crawford Co. at about half price.

Fifth Floor.

$19.75 These beds are like the picture—massive, artistic, indestructible, and there's nothing they'll not harmonize with. They have two inch posts and the best French lacquer.

They are for those who come to-day—we've had experience with $35 beds at $19.75, and know they will sell in a day.

CITIZENS' UNION TELLS ITS STAND IN CAMPAIGN

Says Fusion Can Be Only on Non-Partisan Basis.

WILL MAKE GAS AN ISSUE

Insists on Jerome for District Attorney —Mayoralty Candidate Must Be Corporation Proof.

In a declaration of principles adopted by the City Committee of the Citizens' Union last night as those upon which the organization proposes to enter the coming municipal campaign, three points stand out conspicuously. They are: That the gas issue is to be pushed to the front, and the record made upon it by both the Republican and Democratic organizations attacked; that the only basis upon which the Nominating Committee appointed by the union will negotiate with other organizations for fusion will be on the basis of positively defined non-partisanship, and that no candidate will be acceptable to the union who may be thought susceptible to influence exercised by public service corporations.

Mayor McClellan's name was not mentioned in the two hours that the committee conducted an animated discussion upon the declaration. No motion was made to take up the resolution introduced at a former meeting by John Brooks Leavitt looking toward the indorsement of Mayor McClellan's candidacy by the Citizens' Union Convention. The fact that this resolution was not called up, together with some of the statements made created the impression that the movement to indorse Mr. McClellan has received a decided set-back in the Union. The following is the Committee on Nominations appointed by the City Committee, with instructions to report their conclusions to a meeting of the City Committee to be held early in September:

Francis C. Huntington, Chairman; Edwin S. Kassing, Benjamin Reich, Frank Moss, William G. Ver Planck, John Davis, Frederick S. Lamb, Charles B. Meyer, John W. Weed, Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Edward J. Wheeler, Abner S. Haight, Robert Van Iderstine, Frederick W. Hinrichs, Hamilton Holt, Walter B. Kelby, and R. Felton Cutting.

The declaration of principles is in part as follows:

"At the coming election the voters of New York will choose three general officers who in their respective positions will administer our local affairs. There are no State or National issues that even remotely affect their official duty and responsibility to their fellow-citizens. The Presidential election is three years distant, and a campaign appeal to partisan prejudice on this account will be as irrelevant as it is opposed to common sense. The Union cannot discover anything in logic, politics, or morals to indicate that our local officers should necessarily be members of either the Democratic or Republican Party. Partisan administration of city government means the appointment of officials as a reward for party service, regardless of specific qualifications. This principle has always been characterized by inefficiency of administration and generally by dishonesty. Until the city determines its local business affairs shall be conducted upon social and economic and not upon political principles, we shall never reap the benefit of the Constitutional provisions intended to secure this end.

"The events of the past year have emphasized the necessity of maintaining this position, as the attitude of both the Democratic and Republican Parties upon the question of gas supply has pressed to the front an issue that is purely non-political.

"It is manifest that the next Mayor, Controller, and President of the Board of Aldermen must be men who will exhaust every justifiable resource to protect the city from the abuse of franchise privileges by public service corporations, and to safeguard its interests in the case of all future grants. The Union, however, pledges itself to nominate no candidates for any office who can be suspected of willingness to sacrifice the interests of the city to public service corporations or to political partisanship.

"In the effort to accomplish its purposes the Union will welcome the co-operation of any organization which will render effective service. It appreciates the importance of having one ticket in the field upon which all may unite who favor the separation of municipal from State and National politics, and a civic administration without spoils, favoritism, or political tyranny.

"At a former meeting the City Committee of the Union made it a condition precedent to fusion of the Union with any other organization that the organization desiring to enter into an alliance with the Union should testify its willingness to nominate Mr. Jerome for District Attorney.

"When President Cutting was asked what prospect there was of the Union's indorsing Mayor McClelan, he said:

"I do not think Mr. McClellan would be willing to stand on the platform which we will adopt."

"Do you regard the present administration as a partisan administration?" was asked.

"Most emphatically we do," was the reply.

"Can your Nominating Committee confer with the General Committee of Tammany Hall to ascertain if Tammany will entertain a proposition for fusion?"

"It can. But I do not think the basis which it would offer for fusion would meet with a very kind reception from Tammany."

Mr. Cutting denied that District Attorney Addington of Albany had called upon him yesterday to ascertain what evidence the Citizens' Union had of the bribery of Senators in connection with the defeat of the Eighty-cent Gas bill. Mr. Cutting said that the Citizens' Union had not made a proffer of any information on that subject to Mr. Addington.

MR. CONRIED SAILS TO-DAY.

May Have More Room When Next Opera Season Begins.

Heinrich Conried, President and Director of the Conried Metropolitan Opera House Company and lessee of the Irving Place Theatre, sails to-day for Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

"I will," he said yesterday, "tell all my plans when I return from Europe in September. Just now I am working to try to open the opera season next Fall."

Changes that may be made at the Opera House come into the sphere of operations of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, of which G. G. Haven is President, and which handles the business of the Opera House realty, which includes the storage warehouse in West Fortieth Street.

One important matter appears to have been decided on. The northeast corner of the Metropolitan Opera House, The Broadway, which on the ground floor is a restaurant and above suites of apartments, is let to a real estate firm which sublets. The lease expires Nov. 1 next; and unless negotiations which are regarded as completed fail Mr. Conried will have the lease on this portion of the Metropolitan real estate property. Mr. Conried has always been anxious to extend the utilities of the rear of the Opera House stage, and has chafed under the want of storage room in Thirty-ninth Street and the rear of the stage for costumes and scenery. If projects under discussion come to realization, Mr. Conried's offices will be transferred to The Broadway from Thirty-ninth Street, thus giving available space for dressing rooms and the storage of a supply of scenery and costumes for not less than a week, and perhaps a fortnight.

A question debated, so far without result, has been improved box-office arrangements and discharging facilities. It is not unlikely that arrangements may be made for emptying the house promptly by the summoning of three, instead of two, carriages at a time. If the Opera House Real Estate Corporation undertakes these improvements they will be done on the specifications of Carrère & Hastings.

Mr. Conried received word last night that it is the intention of Harvard University to confer upon him the degree of LL. D. The ceremony will take place when Mr. Conried returns from Europe.

SECOND EMPIRE'S FIRST RUN.

Central's New Train Keeps Schedule—Attains Speed of 76 Miles.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, May 15.—When the second Empire of the New York Central pulled into Buffalo at 11:30 o'clock to-night, its first trip had been completed exactly on schedule and the officers on board expressed satisfaction with the journey. The best time was made between Albany and Utica, where a speed of seventy-six miles an hour was steadily maintained without discomfort to the occupants of the luxurious cars which made up the train.

The second Empire and the Wolverine Limited were put in commission to-day, the former to leave New York at 2:30 P. M. and arrive in Buffalo nine hours later, and the Wolverine to leave Buffalo at 9:55 P. M. and reach New York at 8 A. M.

"These two trains are for the benefit of New York and Buffalo, because of the greatly increased business," said George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, to-night. Tickets are sold only to the stations at which these trains stop, but it will soon be possible for passengers to local points to buy tickets to the nearest station with attached coupons to their own stations."

The average time made by the second Empire is forty-nine miles an hour. It stops at Albany, Utica, Syracuse, and Rochester, and had some of the coaches exhibited at the St. Louis Fair. It had to-day five coaches, including the observation car of General Manager Smith.

DARING LEAP FOR RUNAWAY.

Electrician Jumps from Car to Wagon and Stops Frightened Horse.

Ernest I. Hultgren, an electrician at the Third Avenue Bridge and a member of the Volunteer Life-Saving Corps, leaped from the platform of an eastbound car at Madison Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street yesterday to a delivery wagon tearing down the street behind a runaway horse. Hultgren climbed out on the shafts and held on for ten blocks before he managed to check the animal by partially strangling it with a harness strap.

About this time Detective Mahoney of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station seized the animal. One of the wagon wheels passed over his right ankle and his hands and wrists were badly cut.

The wagon belonged to a laundry in East Seventy-second Street. William Riordan, the driver, removed the bridle to feed the horse at Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street. The animal bolted at a passing street car.

Since stationed at the bridge Hultgren, who stopped the horse, has saved eighteen persons from drowning. He received a medal for rescuing passengers of the Gen. Slocum.

PERISHABLE DOG IS SOLD.

Board Bill Will Be Paid Out of Proceeds.

A small white dog that arrived at this port recently on the Atlantic transport liner Michigan was sold yesterday as "unclaimed, perishable merchandise," at the Seizure Room of the Public Stores. The first bid was $2, and the dog was sold at $2.50 to Simon Hess, President of the American Transfer Company. The dog has been boarded at a livery stable for some time, and the liveryman will receive $2.37, the amount which will be left after the auctioneer's fee of 13 cents has been deducted.

DONG FONG SENT TO PRISON.

Must Go to Sing Sing for February Shooting in Chinatown.

Dong Fong, Chinese laundryman, of 36 Jackson Street, reputed to have precipitated the series of shooting affrays which continued for days a few months ago in Chinatown, was yesterday sentenced to Sing Sing Prison for not less than a year and a quarter and not more than five years. He was convicted of assaulting Lee Yu of 18 Mott Street, who received three bullets from Fong's revolver.

The shooting was in February. His attack upon Lee Yu, cousin of Tom Lee, "Mayor of Chinatown," served to cause the enmity between the On Leong Tong Society and the Hip Sing Tong to break out afresh, and for a time there was a general "shooting up" of the Chinese quarter.

Policeman Among New Lawyers.

Sixty-six law students were sworn in as members of the bar yesterday at the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Presiding Justice Van Brunt told them they had been admitted to become members of the most influential profession in the country and that it would probably be the last class which he would have the honor to address. Among the men sworn in was William E. Murphy, a policeman who is now detailed on the Traffic Squad.

New York Central Orders Steel Cars.

The New York Central Railroad has ordered from the American Car and Foundry Company, whose chief plant is at Berwick, Penn., 150 all-steel passenger cars. These are to be used chiefly on suburban lines. Similar cars are now in use in the Subway.

NEW NIAGARA COMPANY; RUSH TO INCORPORATE

Eight Concerns in a Day Seek Power Rights All Over State.

LEGGETT LEADS PROCESSION

"Ready to Take Advantage of Anything," Says a Promoter—Look to Lighting Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., May 15.—The incorporation at Albany to-day of the International Power and Transmission Company is understood here to mean that the movement is to escape the provisions of the Public Service Commission bill, which, it is expected, will become a law in a few days.

One of the Directors to-night said:

"We have nothing to say except that we are getting ready to take advantage of any thing that may come along. It is said that we desire to incorporate before the public service commission law goes into effect, and I guess that's about right."

Fred J. Brown, one of the incorporators, is a law partner of Assemblyman Leggett, while Clarence Tower is his brother-in-law. John F. Lynch is related by marriage to P. F. King of the same law firm—King, Leggett & Brown. James Simons is a real estate man, as is also H. H. Findlay.

ALBANY, May 15.—Assemblyman John H. Leggett of Niagara, who during the last session of the Legislature introduced a bill which would give the Niagara, Lockport, and Ontario Power Company the right of condemnation, brought to the city to-day papers incorporating the International Power and Transmission Company. Its capital is $2,000,000.

The papers say that the company is to operate in every county, city, and town of the State, except Greater New York and Long Island. The Directors are: S. P. Franchot, James S. Simmons, Fred J. Brown, Clarence Tower, John S. Lynch, and Henry H. Findley of Niagara Falls.

Eight light and power companies were incorporated at the office of the Secretary of State to-day, making nineteen such incorporations since the passage of the bill to create a State Commission of Gas and Electricity. When the bill becomes a law a new lighting or power transmission company must procure a certificate of necessity from the commission before it can be incorporated.

With the idea in mind that Gov. Higgins will sign the Commission bill there has been a big rush to incorporate gas and electric light and power companies so that they may complete organization before the executive's signature is attached. The procedure after the new law goes into effect will be the same as is now required under the State Railroad Commission before a railroad is incorporated.

The names of the other companies follow:

Western Counties Transmission Company of Buffalo; duration, fifty years; capital, $2,000,000. Directors—Robert W. Pomeroy, Joseph G. Dudley, Harry T. Ramsdell, Harold G. Meadows, Charles L. Gurney, Robert W. Chapin, Louis B. Hart. This company is to cover the Counties of Erie, Niagara, Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Genesee, Orleans, Wyoming, Allegany, Monroe, Livingston, Ontario, Wayne, Yates, Schuyler, Chemung, Cayuga, Tompkins, Tioga, Oswego, Seneca, Onondaga, Cortland, Broome, Oneida, Madison, Chenango, and Herkimer.

Hopsick Falls Illuminating Company of Hoosick Falls; capital, $150,000.

Lindenwald Light, Heat and Power Company of Chatham, Columbia County; capital, $25,000,000; to cover Columbia County and the City of Hudson.)

Empire Transmission Company, Albany.

Central New York Power Company, Utica; capital, $1,000,000.

Blasdell Electric Company, Blasdell, Erie County; capital, $50,000.

Cazenovia Electric Company, Cazenovia, Madison County; capital, $30,000.

PALLAS DEFENDS MOLD.

Says Quality is Better Than Under Other Administrations.

Park Commissioner John J. Pallas yesterday sent a communication to Controller Grout in regard to the report of Mr. Grout's engineers as to the garden mold being used in Central Park to restore the lawns. There has been severe criticism of the quality of the mold furnished, one allegation being that some of it had been dug out of an excavation for a cellar.

Commissioner Pallas writes that from information he has received the mold being delivered is of better quality than that procured under similar contract by prior administrations.

Commissioner Pallas also made public a letter from James T. Scott, a landscape gardener of Tarrytown on the Hudson, in which Mr. Scott declares that the mold delivered for use in Central Park is, in his opinion, of the very best quality.

To the Insuring Public

The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia

On the 7th day of December, 1904, by its Board of Trustees, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"BE IT RESOLVED by the Trustees of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pa., in order that its policy-holders may have full and exact knowledge of its business management and of the security and character of its investments, that the President of the Company request the Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania, together with the Insurance Commissioners of Massachusetts and Wisconsin, either in person or by deputies, to make a full and complete examination of the affairs and investments of the Company, as provided for by law, said examination to be made as early as can be arranged after the closing of the accounts of the Company for the current year."

The request of the Trustees was granted, and on the 1st day of February, 1905, the examination was begun, and concluded on the 24th day of April. The official representatives of the three departments, with their assistants and appraisers, in all some fifty persons, covered every detail of the business management and the character and security of the Company's assets. The complete and detailed report of the examiners is too voluminous for publication in the press, but has been printed in pamphlet form and will be furnished on application to the Home Office of the Company in Philadelphia, or to any of its authorized agents in the United States.

The condensed findings of the examiners are included in the following:

Comments of the Commissioners

"THERE WERE PREPARED and submitted to the officers of The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company such questions as were deemed necessary for them to answer. Attached hereto the same may be found as a part of this report."

"AS CALLED FOR in the resolution adopted by the Board of Trustees of the Company, a FULL AND COMPLETE examination of the Company was made, and its affairs subjected to the CLOSEST POSSIBLE SCRUTINY."

"THE FINDINGS SUBMITTED by the examiners show that the net surplus of the Company, as of December 31st, 1904, should be $4,490,498.66 instead of $4,231,261.22, MAKING A SURPLUS LARGER by $259,237.44 THAN CLAIMED in the annual statement of the Company. All of the Company's assets have been appraised by competent experts employed in this examination, and the increased surplus shown arises from the CONSERVATIVE VALUATION of assets by the management."

"THE CHARTER OF THE COMPANY, granted February 24th, 1847, provides fully for its operation on a purely mutual basis, and it HAS NO CAPITAL STOCK. The trustees are elected directly by the body of policy holders, NO PROXY VOTING being permitted; and the officers are, in turn, elected by the Trustees, no one of whom is eligible to official position."

"THE OFFICERS AND TRUSTEES exercise CONSTANT, INTELLIGENT and FAITHFUL supervision over all features of the company's business."

"THE REAL ESTATE HOLDINGS were examined by competent appraisers selected in the various localities with the result that the valuations obtained are $387,699.76 IN EXCESS of those claimed by the company."

"THE MORTGAGE and LOAN DEPARTMENTS are well organized and administer their respective duties with commendable caution and skill."

"THE LOANS ON COLLATERAL are amply margined. The stocks and bonds owned were carefully counted, and the market value ascertained through bond experts, with the result shown that the values claimed by the company are conservative."

"IN ADDITION TO THE LEGAL REQUIREMENTS the company has voluntarily set aside $1,062,679 in order to meet any possible contingencies in the way of lower interest rates on excessive mortality."

"THE EXPENSE OF OBTAINING NEW BUSINESS has been kept at a normal figure, and no disposition has been found to unduly develop the writing of insurance upon Deferred Dividend Plans. On these the dividends are apportioned annually, and the interests of the policy-holders are fully guarded by the terms of the contracts and the practice of the company."

"THE AGENCY BRANCH, looking at the annual product of new business, has been conducted with due economy, and with fidelity to the interests of policy-holders."

"THE SELECTION OF RISKS is in competent hands, as the very excellent mortality experience of the company indicated. The company is operating in practically all the states and territories of the United States, and on December 31, 1904, has upon the "paid for" basis 140,798 policies outstanding, insuring $332,016,287."

"Although an examination of this kind naturally interferes with the routine work of the office, the officers and employes of the company rendered every assistance within their power to the examiners, and cheerfully complied with all requests."

Signed { ISRAEL W. DURHAM, Insurance Commissioner, Pennsylvania.
FRED'K L. CUTTING, Insurance Commissioner, Massachusetts.
ZENO M. HOST, Insurance Commissioner, Wisconsin.

It is with pleasure and satisfaction that the Trustees and Officers have received and now publish the report of the Commissioners. In the future, as in the past, they will strive to fulfil the mission of A PURELY MUTUAL COMPANY, confining their efforts to transacting its business within the lines laid down in its Charter and By-Laws and in strict compliance therewith.

Remarkable News About WOMEN'S COSTUMES

This announcement concerns every Spring costume in our stocks, between the prices of $32 and $80. These dresses were selected with greatest care, both as to the materials used and the models after which they were made. Again and again the collection has been pronounced the handsomest in New York City. Today we are ready to clean up our stocks while the season is still ahead, and the purchase will be desirable to the women securing the dresses.

There are about one hundred and fifty costumes in the collection, divided into two groups, as follows:

$32 to $50 Dresses at $25.

In a wide variety of styles and materials, including crepe de Chine, China silk and Louisine; handsomely made and all silk-lined.

$55 to $80 Dresses at $40

A handsome collection of beautifully made costumes of Rajah and taffeta silks, figured and spangled nets, crepe de Chine and other appropriate fabrics. Beautifully made, in the very handsomest styles of the season.

The occasion presents one of the most decisive economy-times that have occurred this Spring.

Summer Coats For Women

The heavy, or even light-weight Coats of Spring must be laid aside. The dainty garments for Summer are here in superb array, insignificant as to their weight and warmth, and yet sufficiently protective, while adding distinguished beauty to the costume.

The group of Pongee Coats is very interesting, beginning with a pretty coat at $10, ranging in price up to a very handsome foreign-made pongee coat at $57.

The Linen Coats are also in very wide variety. Some have beautiful applique, and eyelet and English embroidered designs. Prices range from $10.50 to $27.50.

And some new Linen Coats from Paris, exquisitely hand-embroidered, are priced at $50.

Imported Lace Net and Applique Coats, in beautiful and exclusive models, for Summer wear, $25 to $160.

Sale of New Shirt-Waist Suits

At $2.25 to $3.75 Each

This is a fine, large collection of spic-span-new Shirt-Waist Suits, of white lawn, tissue chambray and mercerized batiste. The materials are of unusually fine, soft quality. The Shirt-Waist Suits are made up in a careful manner, neatly finished, and distinctly different from the ordinary suits selling at low prices. While they are just made up new, and the season is just beginning, we have arranged to sell them in the Basement Store at 50c to $1 below their value, as follows:

Shirt-Waist Suits at $2.25—Of fine, sheer lawn, with waist plaited and trimmed with embroidery; gored skirt, trimmed with embroidery. Fully worth a half-dollar more.

Shirt-Waist Suits at $2.50—Of tissue chambray, in linen-color and navy blue, in tailor-made style, nicely plaited. Fully worth fifty cents more.

Shirt-Waist Suits at $2.75—Of white lawn with black dots, or black grounds with white dots; trimmed with stitched plaits or embroidery; full plaited skirt. Suits well worth $3.50.

Shirt-Waist Suits at $3.75—Of fine white mercerized batiste; waist plaited and trimmed with Valenciennes lace insertion and buttons; full skirt with shaped gathered flounce; trimmed with Valenciennes lace. Worth $1 more.

ANGER TOWARD FRANCE IS RENEWED IN JAPAN

Rojestvensky Was Lying Quietly in Hon-Kohe Bay May 12.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT SILENT

Secures Postponement of Debate on Question in Chamber — Russia Expects a Naval Battle Soon.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cables. Copyright, 1905.

TOKIO, May 15.—Trustworthy information received in Tokio shows that although the Russian Baltic fleet left Hon-Kohe Bay on May 9, it subsequently returned and was lying there quietly on May 12.

Admiral Rojestvensky is thus repeating his performance at Kamranh Bay, which he left on April 22 in deference to the French request, but whither he returned on April 24, remaining until April 26.

Evidently such doings invest with a farcical character alike France's professions and her methods of giving effect to them.

The consequence is that Japanese indignation, which was softened by the French Government's latest declaration, is now stronger than ever.

PARIS, May 15.—The significance of a big majority given in the Chamber today for the adjournment sine die of the debate on interpellations regarding French neutrality in the Far East is that the bulk of the Chamber recognizes the futility of beginning such a debate before the Government feels at liberty to disclose certain facts which will give the neutrality question a different complexion from that which it bears to-day.

That such facts exist need not be doubted, but the Government is of the opinion that it would be inconsistent with the interests of the country to divulge them prematurely. They will probably suffice to convince the skeptical that more has been done by the French authorities to enforce neutrality than is generally supposed.

By The Associated Press.

SAIGON, May 15.—The Russian fleet, which reappeared off Hon-Kohe Bay, sailed northward early yesterday morning. No warship has since been sighted there.

Admiral de Jonquières, the French naval commander at Saigon, telegraphs from Nha-trang, Annam, that he has visited all the bays as far north as Turan, and has found no Russian vessels.

PARIS, May 15.—In regard to the press dispatches saying the Russian fleet returned to Hon-Kohe Bay, the officials here maintain that the fact that the fleet was off Hon-Kohe Bay did not constitute a breach of neutrality as long as the ships remained on the high seas. They add that French surveillance assures the Russian fleet remaining beyond the French three-mile limit.

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Vaillant, Socialist, and others presented interpellations of the Government upon the observance of neutrality in the Far East.

M. Vaillant asserted amid uproar that the Government's orders to observe neutrality were not executed. He added:

"Neither does the Russian fleet respect our neutrality, and it is necessary to make it do so. It is necessary to show our impartial neutrality by acts instead of words."

The Government's motion for an indefinite postponement of the interpellations prevailed by 499 to 84 votes.

TOKIO, May 15.—The Government has prohibited the exportation of coal to Saigon.

The embargo is to continue as long as the Russian fleet is in Indo-Chinese waters.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—A naval action within a few days is regarded as likely in well-informed naval circles.

It is learned that Admirals Rojestvensky and Nebogatoff joined forces on May 10. There is reason to believe that the united fleet will proceed northward immediately. No delay was necessary for the purpose of coaling or cleaning Nebogatoff's ships, as his division made a stop for those purposes before entering the Straits of Malacca.

Upon the strength of an untraceable rumor an evening paper here to-day issued an extra asserting that a naval battle had commenced, but the Admiralty has no confirmation of the report, and discredits it.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 16.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tokio says that during the past month the Russian Baltic fleet consumed 120,000 tons of coal. Where it was obtained is a mystery.

The correspondent further says it has been ascertained that the Russian fleet established a wireless station in French territory and communicated with St. Petersburg by way of Saigon.

A Norwegian steamer, the correspondent adds, reports that she heard cannonading from 8 till 11 o'clock on the morning of May 11 in 33.45 north longitude and 129.20 east latitude, and that a Japanese torpedo boat was seen running in that direction.

MINE SINKS A TRANSPORT.

Japanese Vessel Goes to the Bottom in the Gulf of Pe-chi-Li.

NIU-CHWANG, May 15.—A steamer which arrived here to-day reports the sinking of a Japanese transport in the Gulf of Pe-chi-Li by a mine.

This was almost coincident with the sinking of the Japanese transport Sheyutsu which struck a mine on May 4 near the Miao Islands (at the entrance of the Gulf of Pe-chi-Li) and was last reported in a sinking condition, but refusing the assistance of a Chinese merchant ship.

The details of the sinking of the British steamer Sobralense off Port Arthur on May 12, beyond the facts that she struck a mine and sank in two minutes, and that sixty-seven of her passengers and crew were landed at Port Arthur, have not been obtained.

GENERAL STRIKE AT LIBAU.

All Stores Forced to Close—Employes of Newski Shipyard Walk Out.

LIBAU, May 15.—A complete strike was inaugurated to-day in this port and the factories here.

The strikers forced all the stores to close.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—There was a disturbance this afternoon at the Newski shipyard. The men employed there walked out in a body, carrying red flags and singing revolutionary songs.

The Chevalier Guards were sent to the shipyard, but their presence was unnecessary and they returned to their barracks, a detachment of Cossacks having broken up the demonstration and dispersed the workmen without difficulty.

OYAMA PUZZLING RUSSIANS.

They Do Not Know Whence to Expect a Blow—Rain Spoils Roads.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—Marshal Oyama's present tactics, as in the preliminary stages of the battle of Mukden, fail to give the slightest indication whence the blow will be delivered.

According to the information of the General Staff the Russian reconnoitring columns northwest of Tie-Pass are gradually falling back before the advance of strong forces of the enemy. On the other hand large bodies of Chunchuses are reported on the west flank, and are believed to be screening the movements of the Japanese forces in that direction.

The duststorm has been followed by a deluge of rain, which has spoiled the roads.

A private telegram reports that the foreign attachés have gone north of Harbin fishing and shooting. This does not promise an immediate battle.

An officer of the General Staff has expressed the opinion that a battle may be deferred another month.

Japan Confiscates the Sylviana.

SEEKS GATTEL JEWELS.

Mrs. Gattel, Diamond Expert, Testifies in Bankruptcy Trustee's Suit.

The details of the Hyman Gattel jewelry failure were told yesterday in the Supreme Court, where the trustee in bankruptcy brought an action against Herman Levy to recover property which, it is alleged, was removed from the safe in Gattel's office after Gattel had disappeared. Levy occupied offices in the same building, at 65 Nassau Street.

The testimony was to the effect that after Gattel disappeared Levy went to a man named Masterson, brother-in-law of Gattel, and got permission to remove some of the jewelry from the safe. When the trustee in bankruptcy began his investigation, it is alleged, he found that the safe, which had contained property valued at $50,000, was empty. About $4,000 worth of this jewelry has been recovered.

Mrs. Gattel, wife of the bankrupt, who was called as a witness, qualified as a diamond expert. She said she had traveled on the road selling diamonds, and gave a description of the jewelry which she said was in her husband's safe at the time of his failure.

TWO POLICEMEN INJURED.

Severely Hurt in Stopping Runaway Pair of Horses.

Mounted Policeman Conrad Kammerer and Policeman John C. Cunningham, on foot, both of the Traffic Squad, grabbed the bridles of a pair of runaway horses attached to a heavy delivery wagon as they dashed across Times Square yesterday morning, and held on till they dropped beneath the hoofs as the horses fell at the curb at Seventh Avenue and Forty-fifth Street.

Kammerer and Cunningham struggled with the kicking animals until Policeman Kane of the West Forty-seventh Street Station lent his aid.

It was then found that Cunningham had a compound fracture of the left knee which may cripple him for life, while Kammerer had a compound fracture of the right forearm.

In crossing Times Square the runaway grazed two cabs and a south-bound Seventh Avenue car. The horses were frightened by an automobile. The team is owned by the Fussell Ice Cream Company.

HERBERT CROKER'S BODY ON THE WAY HOME

Richard Says His Brother Was Not Robbed or Murdered.

DENIES ENGAGEMENT TO WED

Family Never Heard of Miss Horton, He Says—No Further Investigation in the Case.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, May 15.—Richard Croker, Jr., arrived here to-day on the way to New York City with the body of his brother, Herbert V. Croker, who was found dead on a Santa Fé train near Newton, Kan., last Friday.

It was said here to-day that J. Rugge had sent a dispatch to friends in New York saying that Herbert Croker had been robbed and murdered. Rugge came in on the train with Richard Croker, Jr., and registered at the Blossom House. When seen by reporters he refused to say anything other than that Mr. Croker would make a statement which would cover his views of the case.

"I have nothing to say about Herbert's death," said Mr. Croker, "except that I am sure he was not murdered. I regret very much on my mother's account that so much notoriety and publicity has been given to the affair. The shock to my mother has been very great. I am satisfied with what the police have done, and there will be no further investigation."

"I wish to deny the story that Herbert was to marry some one while at the Oklahoma ranch. I don't remember the name; I never heard of her; we never heard of her. The name is entirely unknown to our household."

Mr. Croker was referring to Miss Jeanette Neal Horton of New York, who asserted she was to be married to Herbert Croker in about two weeks.

J. Rugge accompanied Mr. Croker on his journey East to-night, and they left at 6:40 o'clock.

PLANS FOR CRONK FUNERAL.

Veteran's Body Will Lie in State at City Hall.

Final arrangements for the funeral of the late Hiram Cronk, the last veteran of the war of 1812, who died last week, were completed yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Aldermanic committee having charge of the affair. Chairman Wirth to-day will ask the board to appropriate $3,000 for the expenses of the ceremonies and for the burial in Cypress Hills Cemetery.

Cronk's body will reach New York by New York Central train to-morrow morning at 7:30 o'clock. At 10 o'clock the Aldermanic committee will take charge of the body, and, with a military escort of two companies of infantry assigned by Brig. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, will take the body to City Hall where the Veteran Company of Artillery, S. N. Y., of which Asa Bird Gardiner is Colonel, will supply the guard of honor to watch the body while it lies in State in the Governor's Room. U. S. Grant Post of the G. A. R. will escort the body from Rome to this city.

The funeral will be held Thursday, with regular troops and militia commands in line. The line of march will be announced this afternoon. Col. Kline of the Fourteenth Regiment of Brooklyn will be in command of the funeral parade, with Squadron C, the Continental Guards, and other military and patriotic organizations participating. A firing squad from Governor's Island will fire a salute as the body is placed in the grave.

Will Speak on City's Problem.

"The Problem of the City" will be the text of a number of addresses to be delivered to-night in Carnegie Hall at a meeting presided over by Bishop Greer. Stereopticon views, an advance notice of the meeting says, will reveal unknown and unsuspected conditions. The Rev. F. B. Meyer of London will make the principal address, and there will be others by the Rev. Dr. Walter Laidlaw, Secretary of the Federation of Churches; the Rev. Dr. A. F. Schauffler, President of the City Mission; J. B. Ely of Philadelphia, the Rev. Dr. J. D Burrell, the Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North, the Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting, and the Rev. Dr. W. Merle Smith.

Distinctive

Raincoats for Men

Special at $15.00

When a clothing man tells you that a garment is a "genuine Cravenette," with the inference that you need know nothing more about the coat, wink at him. He knows better—he knows that the rankest shoddy that ever was woven may be converted into a "genuine cravenette." He knows that the process promises nothing beyond the proofing—that it does not improve the character of the cloth nor influence the tailoring even in the slightest degree. Our label does. It insures fabrics of the very highest character, perfectly cravenetted. To demonstrate this to you, we have elected to offer a series of raincoats in the fifty-two inch box model, fashioned of cravenetted worsteds, in four new gray mixtures. The coats are tailored with all the character, distinctiveness and exclusive knacks which identify the Saks' garments. By every standard the garments are worth Twenty Dollars. Special at $15.00

R. L. CORNELL'S BODY FOUND IN EAST RIVER

Young Man Disappeared March 31 After Attending Dinner.

LAST SEEN IN BROADWAY

Father Believes Son's Companion Can, If He Chooses, Aid in Solving Mystery.

The body of R. Lester Cornell, the young Brooklyn man who disappeared on March 31, was found floating in the East River off Thirty-sixth Street. The discovery of Cornell's body does not, however, clear the mystery of his disappearance. The father of the young man, Reuben L. Cornell, who lives at 510 Kosciusko Street, Brooklyn, believes that a friend who was with his son on the night of March 31 knows more than he has told.

The circumstances surrounding the disappearance were extremely strange. Young Cornell, who was drum major of the Fourteenth Regiment, and also was a member of the Naval Reserves, went to a dinner at Muschenheim's Arena restaurant, in West Thirty-first Street, Manhattan, on the night when he was last seen. He left there about midnight with three companions. At Thirty-first Street and Broadway the four separated. Two walked up Broadway, and Cornell and the other stood on the corner.

What happened after this Reuben L. Cornell does not know.

"I don't believe for a minute that Lester's companion harmed him," Mr. Cornell said yesterday, "but I think he can help us to arrive at the truth.

"According to his account he and Lester walked down Broadway a block, and then Lester said he believed he would turn back and go on up Broadway with the other two men. They, however, say they never saw Lester after they left him at the corner of Thirty-first Street. Lester's companion was at our house the day after the disappearance, and was hysterical. He said he didn't even know whether he had come home by the Twenty-third Street Ferry or by the Brooklyn Bridge.

"'I was drunk,' he told us, 'but Lester was not. He left me, saying he was going to join the others, and I don't know what happened after that.' Though he told me this story that day, I saw him three days later and he told me he knew exactly how he got home, that he had taken the Sixth Avenue Elevated, alighted at Park Place and crossed the bridge. When I asked him why he hadn't known this before he said it was because he had been drunk."

That Cornell was the victim of thieves seems doubtful. In his pockets, when he was found yesterday, was $29.55. But an expensive gold watch was gone, and Mr. Cornell suspects that his son got into some trouble and that the watch was snatched from him, though his assailant could not get to the money. Besides the cash these articles were found on the body:

A diamond ring, a bunch of keys, a diamond stick pin, a memorandum book, knife and fork, with the name "Muschenheim's" on each; a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western pass, and a letter. When Coroner Goldenkranz first saw the letter he thought perhaps it would furnish a clue. It was from a woman, a Brooklyn school teacher, who wrote that she could not go to an entertainment with Cornell. Mr. Cornell said yesterday that this letter could not have had anything to do with his son's death.

"This young woman and my son were only good friends," he said; "the was not in love with her."

Mrs. Cornell was almost prostrated at the news of the discovery of her son's body. Ever since he disappeared she had kept hoping against hope that he would return. On April 12 Mr. Cornell decided to wait no longer. He went to the police, and on that day a general alarm was sent out.

Lester Cornell was an only child, and was strongly attached to his parents. The watch that is missing was a present to him on his twenty-first birthday from his father and mother. He was so afraid he might lose it that he bought extra clasps with which to fasten it to his waistcoat.

Mr. Cornell offered a reward of $500 for any information as to his son, and to this $100 was added by the First Battalion of the Naval Reserves. Once the father suspected that his son was being held captive in some Tenderloin resort; he sought the aid of the police, and this theory was exploded.

Mr. Cornell does not believe, he says, that Lester could have drowned even if he fell into the river. He was an expert swimmer. Neither does Mr. Cornell put any faith in the suggestion that his son started toward the training ship, Granite State, that was moored in the East River at the foot of East Twenty-fourth Street.

Coroner's Physician Schultze, who examined the body, said the young man must have drowned, as the lungs were filled with water. An autopsy is not considered necessary.

The body will be taken to Mr. Cornell's Brooklyn home to-day, and will be buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery to-morrow.

PLAYED WAY INTO AMERICA.

Boy Band Serenaded Ellis Island to Prove They Were Artists.

On the Cunarder Slavonia, in yesterday from Trieste, Austria, arrived thirty-five Hungarian boys, ranging in age from ten to fifteen years, members of the Royal Hungarian Boys' Band of Janosfoeld, Hungary. Under the laws it was impossible to admit the gayly uniformed youngsters unless they could prove to the satisfaction of the immigration authorities at Ellis Island their right to the title of artist. A concert in the rooms of the Board of Special Inquiry was the result.

After the third selection the board by a unanimous vote permitted the band to land. Landing at the Barge Office, the crowd persuaded them to give another concert.

The snare drummer is the youngest member of the band, and is said to be the finest performer on that instrument in Austria-Hungary.

Hauptner Wins Divorce Suit.

WHITE PLAINS, May 15.—Justice Gaynor to-day granted to Oscar Hauptner a New York haberdasher, a divorce from his wife, Alice K. Hauptner. The action was undefended.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

W. A. Brady's production of "Trilby" at the New Amsterdam has been so well received that the engagement has been extended for one week. The last performance will take place on Saturday evening, May 27.

Photographs of Adele Ritchie will be distributed this week at the matinées to the women patrons of the Victoria as souvenirs of her début in vaudeville.

The New York Lodge of Mystic Shriners will attend the performance of "Fantana" at the Lyric Theatre on Friday night, June 2. The party will be given in compliment to Jefferson De Angelis, who is a Mystic Shriner.

Hammerstein's Paradise Roof Garden will open the season on June 5 with an entire change of policy. European and American vaudeville acts will be offered with a weekly change of bill. Heretofore it has been Mr. Hammerstein's custom to continue most of the big specialties throughout the roof garden season. Another innovation will be the continuance of the performance until midnight. Another feature will be a daily matinée. The seating capacity of the roof has been increased and the garden entirely reno-

WROTE TO HIM TWICE A DAY.

Mrs. Menendez's Correspondence Figures in Setrnberger Divorce Suit.

Many men well known in the banking district and a large number of fashionably dressed women were in Part II. of the Supreme Court yesterday when Justice Clarke called the suit for divorce of Sternberger against Sternberger for trial. The plaintiff, Mrs. Birdie Sternberger, inherited a fortune from her father, Solomon Stern, a New York merchant, who died a few years ago. She was married to Louis Sternberger in 1888. The Sternbergers separated about nine years ago, when Mrs. Sternberger went home to her parents. Then Sternberger, who was a member of the New York Stock Exchange, brought an action against her father, asking for $50,000 damages for alienating his wife's affections.

Jennie Curtiss, a colored woman, who had been employed by Mrs. Lillian Menendez, since dead, was the first witness called yesterday. She said that while Mrs. Menendez resided in Sixty-eighth Street, and while her husband was in Cuba, Mr. Sternberger frequently called at the house and went driving with Mrs. Menendez.

Mrs. Minnie E. Bogart, owner of a boarding house at Saranac Lake, where Mrs. Menendez was in 1903, said that she wrote to Sternberger twice a day, and that in return she received letters from him.

"Did you ever see her put a lock of hair in a letter?" asked De Lancey Nicoll for the plaintiff.

"No; I have seen her put a lock of hair under the stamp on a letter."

The trial will be continued to-day.

NEWSBOYS BURY MATE.

Save "Dutch" Johnson from Potter's Field—To Decorate Grave.

"Dutch" Johnson has had his last wish gratified. He was buried in Linden Hill Cemetery, on Long Island, instead of in an unmarked grave in Potter's Field, and his fellow "newsies" are happy over the fact that they have been able to contribute to this result.

For three years "Dutch" had lived at the Newsboys' Lodging House. One night last week he was taken to Bellevue with pneumonia, and the physicians soon saw that the end was not far off. Superintendent Heig of the lodging house told Johnson.

"I ain't goin' to weaken about cashin' in," said the lad. "But I ain't stuck on bein' planted in Potter's Garden."

Mr. Heig told the boy not to worry, and he closed his eyes in peace. As soon as the "newsies" heard about it there was a scramble to get into the fund that was being raised, with "Happy" Charlie Duffy, "Jack" Kelly, "Gimp" Hodgins, and "Dusty" Gilmartin as a Committee of Arrangements, and yesterday morning when "Brownie" Seamon, a negro newsboy, rushed into the lodging house, for fear he would be too late, and gave 4 cents to Superintendent Heig, the fund to bury "Dutch" amounted to $53.40. With that Mr. Heig bought a plot big enough to hold three in Linden Hill. "Dutch" was buried there yesterday.

On Sunday a party of newsboys will go out to the grave with potted plants, the quantity of which will depend upon the paper sales in the meantime.

PHYSICIAN PAYS $75 FINE.

Certified Death of Infant He Had Not Attended.

Dr. J. W. Perilli of 65 Sullivan Street paid a fine of $75 in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday for having wrongfully signed a death certificate. The physician admitted he had made out the paper certifying to the death of a child five days old, although he never had seen the infant. He tried to justify his act by saying that the practice was common in the tenement sections of the city.

"You fail to understand," said Presiding Justice Hinsdale, "that the law was framed to prevent unprincipled men from doing just what you have admitted doing. Suppose the child had been murdered? Your act would have served to have covered up a crime."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Walker said that the practice by physicians of certifying to deaths of infants they never had seen was alarmingly common.

THE YIDDISH SHYLOCK OF JACOB P. ADLER

East Side Favorite Appears with Fawcett Company.

TREADS PATHWAY OF ROSES

Not the Jew That Shakespeare Drew, but an Interesting Stage Figure—Miss Haswell as Portia.

There is something almost grotesque about the Shylock of Jacob P. Adler, and, though it is reasonably certain that the Jew as he reveals him is not the Jew of whom Pope wrote the famous couplet, he is an interesting figure for all that, and one that will probably continue to win the favor of many discriminating theatregoers both in and out of the zone where Yiddish alone is spoken.

Mr. Adler's Shylock was first made familiar to uptown playgoers two years ago at the American Theatre, and he again appeared at that house last night, as the chief figure in a cast headed by Percy Haswell of the Fawcett Stock Company and containing a number of excellent actors recruited from various organizations that have recently closed their seasons in and around New York.

Not all of the players gave evidence of familiarity with Shakespeare and the reading of blank verse, but their achievements were generally creditable, especially when one remembers the difficulties always encountered by actors in these polyglot performances. But view this performance as one may, its popularity with the packed house that saw it last evening is undeniable.

The Merchant's defeat was as painful as ever, but for once he made his entrance into the streets of Venice treading upon a path of roses. It is thus that an east side favorite makes his transit, for as Mr. Adler walked on in the first act there was a shower of rose leaves from an upper box which literally covered the stage. At the same moment what seemed to be the best trained claque that New York has yet known made itself heard from all parts of the house.

But this is not necessarily a reflection upon the effect of Mr. Adler's acting, for before the evening was over the measured applause of the few had given way to the tumult of a sincerely enthusiastic multitude. And when the final curtain had fallen Mr. Adler was obliged to appear without make-up in answer to a most enthusiastic demonstration. There were many calls for a speech, but the actor here gave way to Miss Haswell, who expressed in a more familiar tongue than his own, his thanks and the company's for the warmth of the greeting.

Of Mr. Adler's Shylock little remains to be said at the present time. It has a distinct leaning toward that conception of the rôle which makes of it a symbol of sentiment on the one hand and dignity in the face of persecution on the other. It is never a poetical Shylock, the colloquial patois robbing the lines of all semblance to blank verse, though enabling the actor to color his playing with many realistic touches that are highly effective if not too closely analyzed and studied in connection with the original text.

A master of all the mechanics of his art, Mr. Adler has also abundant temperamental force, much magnetism, and a fine sense of dramatic values, all of which he employs with good effect to make a striking figure of this famous Jew of Venice.

Miss Haswell's Portia is a pleasing figure, her worst fault being an affectation in reading lines which robs the spoken text of much of its beauty. Dodson Mitchell, Frank Gilmore, Frank Westerton, and Charles Hammond also contribute creditable performances.

NEW ALHAMBRA OPENS.

Percy Williams Adds Harlem Theatre to His Vaudeville Chain.

Percy Williams added another link to his chain of vaudeville houses last evening by the opening of the new Alhambra Theatre at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue. Outside of the excellent opening programme, the house itself was of more than passing interest to the audience.

The walls of the auditorium are done in a strawberry color, with a panel effect, bordered with buff and trimmings of cream. The drop curtain and the portieres are in green, and the seats are covered with green leather. On the programme were the Milmo Trio, Mayme Remington and her "Buster Brownies," Dida, the aquatic wonder; George Evans, Henry Miller in "Frederic Le Maitre," Albert Chevalier, the Grand Opera Trio, Empire City Quartet, the Imperial Japanese Guards, and the vitagraph.

RAT FLED THE ELEPHANTS.

Unrolled from Carpet at Hippodrome, Dashed Away from Big Animals.

The stage hands at the Hippodrome were unrolling the big carpet used in the used in the circus ring at last night's performance when a rat jumped out of the big roll and pattered across the stage.

Over at one side was the group of big elephants stolidly awaiting their "turn." Instead of running toward the elephants, the rat dashed directly away from them and sped out past the wings on the other side of the big stage.

At last one man in the audience remembered the often-told story of the fear of elephants for mice, and expressed gratitude that the rat had kept away from the big performers.

Music Hall Audience Grows Impatient at Long Delay.

FETTERS CALLED UNFAIR

Man Who Lent Them Climbs Upon Stage, Is Thrust Back, and Fight and Arrest Follow.

Hoots, hisses, and howls of disgust greeted one of the performers at Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, last night. His name is Gunning, and he advertises to get himself out of anything in the way of handcuffs ever invented. After seven handcuffs had been put on him last night he entered a steel cage. The crowd waited expectantly for him to emerge unfettered. But the time drew out into an hour and fifteen minutes. Then there were yells from the front of the house.

"Don't believe he's under that curtain!" was shouted. "Drag him out!" The commotion became more violent as the minutes passed, and the curtain remained down. Women joined men in hissing the performer, but he showed no sign of having heard them.

When Gunning first came on the stage he invited any one in the audience to come up and handcuff him.

"Bring your handcuffs," he said.

Seven men with handcuffs accepted the invitation. One of them was a man who, Gunning says, is the brother-in-law of a rival performer. This man, according to Gunning, had a pair of handcuffs which "weren't fair." However that may be, Gunning objected to them and did not put them on until the audience became clamorous.

He rolled up his sleeves and the seven pairs of handcuffs were put on. Then the wait began. Those in the front row thought they heard groans from behind the curtain. Evidently a great struggle was going on. When Gunning emerged one arm was free. He started to walk off the stage.

"I want back my handcuffs!" shouted the man who Gunning says is the brother-in-law of his rival. But Gunning did not stop, and the big drop curtain began to fall. The man who wanted the cuffs tried to jump under the curtain. The audience rose on its feet with excitement as they saw a stagehand push the man back. When the curtain hit the floor he was still outside.

But the stranger ran around the end and got on the stage. He was thrust out and removed to the lobby. Men and women shouted encouragement, and occasionally gave more substantial aid in the way of umbrella punches for his adversaries.

In the lobby Detective Sergt. Frank Price and Patrolman Zimmermann arrested him and took him to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station. He said he was William G. Weiss of 278 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, that he had borrowed his handcuffs and wanted them, and that Gunning did not get them off fairly but used a file. But Weiss was locked up. Meanwhile the crowd stayed around the theatre discussing the affair. At 1 o'clock this morning they were still on hand.

AT THE THEATRES YESTERDAY.

E. S. Willard opened a week's engagement at the Harlem Opera House last night in "The Middleman."

The bill at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre yesterday was headed by Cecelia Loftus in imitations. Others were Bert Coote, who appeared in "A Lamb in Wall Street"; Foy and Clark, Three Dumonts, Charles Semon, and Mme. Emmy.

"The Black Mask," an English melodrama, opened at the Windsor yesterday for the week.

Scenes of life in foreign countries and the movements of Japanese and Russian troops in Manchuria are shown on the Cinematograph at the Eden Musee. An interesting group in the World of Wax is the reproduction of an explosion in a Pennsylvania mine.

Master Gabriel and George All received a hearty welcome as "Buster" and "Tige" at the Metropolis last evening.

Robertson's comedy, "Caste," was revived yesterday at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. Henry Woodruff played the role of the Hon. George D'Alroy and Grace Reals that of Esther Eccles.

"East Lynne" was revived last night at the New Star. Leah Lessi appearing in the role of Lady Isabel.

Abbot Parker, the man with a cross on his back, said to be the result of a lightning stroke, is still the main feature at Huber's Museum.

Rose Coghlan was the star attraction at Hurtig & Seamon's yesterday, where she appeared in "A Modern Lady Godiva." Cunning, the jail-breaker, was the second feature on the bill, which also included, among others, the La Velle Trio, Hickman Brothers, Barr and Evans, and Alice Lyndon Doll.

Williams and Walker opened a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House last evening, presenting their success "In Dahomy."

The chief entertainers yesterday at the Colonial were Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," Dorothy Russell, The Globe of Death, and Clayton White and Marie Stuart. Others on the programme were Ye Colonial Septette, Stuart Barnes, and Gillett's Musical Dogs.

Eugenie Blair began the second week of her engagement at the West End last evening, reviving "Camille," which she will play throughout the week, except Thursday night, when "East Lynne" will again be the bill.

An unusual attraction opened at Keith's yesterday. It is in the form of an electric novelty, which gives a representation of the shelling of Golden Hill and Tiger's Tails Forts by the Japanese. Murphy, Nichols and Company appeared in their funny sketch, "From Zaza to Uncle Tom," while other acts were given by Carleton Macy and Maude Hall and the Quigley Brothers.

Maurice Freeman made his first appearance last evening with the Yorkville Theatre Stock Company. The play for this week is "East Lynne," in which Anne Sutherland plays the dual role of Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine.

The three leading entertainers on yesterday's bill at Hammerstein's Victoria were Adele Ritchie, Mrs. Annie Yeamans and Jenie Yeamans, and Edwin Stevens. Others were John Ford and Mayme Gerhue, Willy Zimmerman, and Haines and Vidocq.

At Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre the version of "Old Heidelberg" used by Richard Mansfield was presented by the stock company. James Durkin heads the cast.

Lottie Williams made her appearance last evening at the Fourteenth Street Theatre in a musical play called "My Tomboy Girl." The attraction remains throughout the week.

"The Christian" was revived by Proctor's One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre Stock Company yesterday, with Beatrice Morgan as Glory Quayle and William Kelly as John Storm.

The plays that remain are Marie Tempest in "The Freedom of Suzanne" at the Empire, David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou, "The Heir to the Hoorah" at the Hudson, Wilton Lackaye and Virginia Harned in "Trilby" at the New Amsterdam and "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Academy.

The musical attractions that remain are Jeff De Angelis in "Fantana" at the Lyric, Sam Bernard in "The Rollicking Girl" at the Herald Square, George M. Cohan in "Little Johnny Jones" at the New York, and Frank Daniels in "Sergeant Brue" at

MAY LOCK OUT EXCAVATORS.

Employers Will Drop Entire 26,000 Men if More Strikes Are Called.

The Contractors' Protective Association, it was announced last evening, is prepared to order a general lock-out of the 26,000 rockmen and excavators employed throughout the city in case the union continues ordering strikes. At a meeting of the association a motion to order a general lock-out at once was defeated by a narrow margin. After an excited discussion it was decided to hold the lock-out order in abeyance until the union orders more strikes.

The Strike Committee of the Union has a list of new strikes to be ordered this week, but took no action yesterday, and the association will wait to see if the union carries out its programme before declaring the lock-out. Secretary Eugene P. Clark of the Contractors' Protective Association said yesterday:

"In case of a general strike or lock-out we are prepared to put men at work on all our contracts without delay."

Mr. Clark said that the association had established agencies in all the large cities to hire men.

TOBACCO WITNESS FREE.

Hale Gets Out on Bail as Result of Habeas Corpus Writ.

The writ of habeas corpus obtained by the attorneys for Edwin F. Hale, Secretary of the McAndrews & Forbes Company, in the matter of the investigation of the affairs of the American Tobacco Company by the Government, was yesterday served on Marshal Henkel. The writ was signed by Judge William J. Wallace of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and directed that Mr. Hale be admitted to $1,000 bail. It was made returnable on May 24.

Mr. Hale was paroled on May 11 in the custody of his counsel, Nicoll, Anable & Lindsay, until 11 o'clock yesterday morning on the charge of contempt, upon which he was committed by Judge Lacombe of the United States Circuit Court, when he refused to answer questions pertaining to the Tobacco Trust.

IN THIS ISSUE is presented as a fitting companion feature to Mrs. Berkeley-Loyd's "Fashions in New York" no less an authority than Edouard La Fontaine, who will furnish us with the text and illustrations each month for our Paris Letter.

M. La Fontaine is without peer on the European continent as a dress critic and a writer on all topics pertaining to fashions. Besides this, he is an artist of great individuality, as is shown by his sketches which are reproduced in his Paris Letter. They have a style and an atmosphere about them distinctly Parisian. Known personally to all the famous dress creators in the various fashion centres of Europe, he has free access to their establishments and "private views" of their latest productions long before they are seen in public. Under the arrangement just concluded, M. La Fontaine will contribute to THE DELINEATOR exclusively in America.

ANNA BURNHAM WESTERMANN, whose charming drawings have appeared for some time in THE DELINEATOR, illustrating the styles described in the "Fashions in New York," is well known as a creator of figures of living grace, which, without lessening in any way their value as fashion drawings, lifts them far beyond the plane of the usual fashion plate. Mrs. Westermann's women are sweet and womanly and, better than all for your purpose, they know how to wear their dresses. They are always well groomed, and their appearance each month in THE DELINEATOR will surely be welcomed by all of its readers. Hereafter Mrs. Westermann's fashion drawings will appear only in THE DELINEATOR.

BEAUTIFUL FASHION ILLUSTRATIONS IN COLORS

ROMANCES OF SUMMER RESORTS," by Weymer Jay Mills, begins in this number. No series of tales published for some time promises so much of general interest as these charmingly reminiscent tales. Their delightful telling and the quaint old pictures which accompany them assure enjoyment to every reader.

A TRAVEL SKETCH that is brimful of interest is F. Berkeley Smith's description of "A CORNER IN NORMANDY." It is interesting as a story and gives you more than a passing glance at one of the most curious nooks in the old world.

THE third installment of Albert Bigelow Paine's "THE LUCKY-PIECE," and another of the "SON RILEY RABBIT" tales by Grace MacGowan Cooke, together with the many regular departments, make this issue a remarkable one. "THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF A WEDDING," in the Home Department, discusses fully the problem of bringing the wedding festivities within a reasonable expenditure.

New Yorks Again Shut Out Chicago in a Light Batting Contest.

The Chicagos suffered another shut-out at the hands of the National League champions at the Polo Grounds yesterday, because they were as deficient at the bat as in the first game on Saturday. McGinnity was in his best pitching mood, only four outfield hits and one to the infield being made off his delivery, while but one runner got as far as third base and that was in the ninth inning, and only another man reached second. The destructiveness of the "Iron Man's" pitching began in the first inning, when he quickly disposed of the first two batsmen on strikes, and he wound up his day's performance by causing Tinker to strike out.

Brown of the visiting team shared the honors with McGinnity for five innings, Devlin's stroke between right and centre fields being the only hit charged against him. In the sixth inning, however, a combination of base hits, two of them of the luckiest kind, aided by a base on balls and the only sacrifice hit of the game, made by Devlin, resulted in four runs. Both pitchers were well supported, the fielding of the champions being flawless, while Tinker's fumble of a ground hit ball was the only error committed by the Chicagos.

Umpire Klein's first effort in New York produced a favorable impression, and his schooling in the American Association last year with the knowledge that he has obtained in the National League this season has evidently made him fully competent to officiate in major league circles. The new-comer has a good voice, is prompt in his decisions, and he displayed excellent judgment yesterday in calling balls and strikes.

BROOKLYN, 4; PITTSBURG, 1.

The Brooklyns fairly earned their second victory over the Pittsburgs at Washington Park yesterday, because they outbatted the ex-champions by more than two to one. Robertaille was hit freely in three innings, while Scanlon put the Pittsburgs out for four hits. Scanlon was compelled to retire in the eighth owing to an injury to his leg, caused by Wagner falling on it in the previous inning. Sheckard's playing at left field was of the highest order of excellence, while Batch carried off the honors at the bat with three hits out of four trials, including a home run and a three-base hit. BOSTON, 2; CINCINNATI, 1.

BOSTON, May 15.—Cincinnati outbatted Boston to-day by nine hits to four, but lost the game by 2 to 1. Harper's one bad inning, the fifth, in which he passed two men and was batted safely twice, lost the game for the visitors. Young was batted hard in the first inning but after that kept the hits well scattered. Score:

Chicagos Get Hang of Orth's Pitching and Wins in Eighth Inning.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 15.—In a brilliantly-played game at the South Side Grounds to-day Comiskey's Chicago team defeated the Greater New Yorks in the closing game of the series by a score of 10 to 4. The score does not begin to indicate how really close the game was, neither does it show how, time and again, brilliant stops and catches killed off runs which it seemed could not be prevented from counting.

With the local team it was a case of an uphill chase after the second inning, when Walsh gave the visitors enough runs to win a good many games, in the third inning Orth, who was pitching for Griffith's men, received a sufficient bumping to allow the Chicagos to draw to even terms. Then the visitors pulled ahead again in the fourth, and it was not until the sixth that the locals closed the gap. After that until the eighth it was a close fight, with the Chicagos maintaining a one-run lead, which looked not too big at any stage of the contest.

In their half of the eighth inning, however, the local men simply murdered the bunch of curves and benders which Orth had been serving up to them with more or less success. Every man in the team faced Orth in that last round, and five of them scored. The score:

BOSTON, 6; DETROIT, 2.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15.—Pitcher Mullin was very wild and ineffective in the last game of the series with Boston to-day, and the champions won by 6 to 2. Dineen pitched finely in tight places, and received excellent support. Parent made sensational catches, and Dineen's fielding was a feature. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, 4; ST. LOUIS, 0.

ST. LOUIS, May 15.—Philadelphia won the odd game of the series to-day defeating St. Louis by 4 to 0, owing principally to the poor fielding of Moran at third base. The score:

Kissinger's Pitching Puzzling to the Newarks and Buffalo Won.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 15.—"Rube" Kissinger pitched the champions to victory to-day in a game with the Newarks, the score being 4 to 2. Skopec permitted a bunching of hits in the sixth inning, which gave the game to the local team. The fielding was sharp upon the part of both teams, the visitors' exhibition being almost perfect.

TANYA WAS BEATEN IN FIRST RACE OF SEASON

Great Filly, After Being Jostled, Was Third to Pasadena.

ROSEBEN TOOK CLAREMONT

Belmont Park Results Produced Usual Average of Two Successful Post Favorites.

The interest of racegoers at Belmont Park yesterday centred in the first appearance this season of Tanya, twin star with Artful in the Whitney-Duryea stable of 1904, and winner of $55,000 in five races.

Tanya, who has been in retirement since the late Summer of last year, was named among the eleven entries for the opening race of the Belmont Park programme, and to her presence was credited the fact that six of the horses named on the card were withdrawn, reports of Tanya's fast work being sufficient to satisfy many of the owners that their horses had no business in a race against her. From first to last in the betting Tanya, with 110 pounds up, and ridden by the stable jockey Hildebrand, was the favorite, in spite of a tremendous tip on the Western-owned horse Big Ben, formerly of James R. Keene's stable.

Last away of the field, to the lead of Voladay, Tanya without the appearance of an effort moved up to second place in the first furlong of the six and a half furlongs race, and, once having taken a position, permitted Voladay to go on in front, while Big Ben went on into second place. In the run around the turn into the stretch, with Voladay still leading, Pasadena moved up, Big Ben and Tanya going on after Voladay at about the same time and on the outside. Tanya there was carried wide, and in the struggle for positions was ridden for a few strides, showing first just as the run down the straight was begun, but dropping back again as Pasadena and Big Ben went on after Voladay. From that moment Tanya seemed to tire, and a full quarter of a mile from the end Hildebrand gave up the race, and simply let the filly gallop on to the end, Pasadena drawing out at the end and winning handily from Voladay, who swerved over on Big Ben near the winning post, and jostled him back enough to let Tanya gallop in third, a head before Big Ben.

The stake feature of the Monday card was the race for the Claremont Handicap, at six and a half furlongs, for which eight horses, including two added starters, ran, ten of the sixteen entries named on the programme being withdrawn. The added starters were Jacquin and Preen, Jacquin being put in to strengthen the chance of D. C. Johnson, who thus had two starters, Jacquin and Roseben, which, coupled, started favorite for the race. The result was in line with results which have come to the plunging owner of the coupled horses at Belmont Park, for after Preen, first away, had made the pace to the last turn, Roseben, ridden by Burns, went on from third place, and whipped through the stretch, won by two lengths and a half from Race King, who was second nearly all the distance.

THE CHINESE BOYCOTT.

In declaring a boycott against commodities imported from the United States as a means of compelling us to amend our Chinese Exclusion act the merchants and commercial bodies of China have taken a not very sensible means of dealing with a very real and substantial grievance. Americans of liberal and intelligent minds hold substantially one opinion about the Chinese Exclusion act now in force. It is a barbarous measure, brutally enforced. It ought to be amended, and so long as we refuse to amend it the Government and people of China have just cause to complain of us. It may as well be admitted at the outset that we do not want to encourage or permit a large immigration of Chinese coolies. The flood of highly undesirable immigrants that is now coming to us from Europe is about all we can stand. It is going to give us a great deal of trouble in the future, and to the serious social and political problems which the coming of these Europeans present to us we do not wish to add a Chinese problem.

Nevertheless, while we have our reasons for excluding "Chinese cheap labor," it is indecent for us to maintain the ban of exclusion against educated and highly intelligent Chinese gentlemen who would gladly visit us for purposes of travel, study, and observation. The excuse so often heard that if any class of Chinamen is admitted deceptions will be easily practiced and the law evaded, is of course no excuse at all. As a civilized and enlightened Nation we ought to treat the civilized and enlightened subjects of the Chinese Empire who visit us as students and travelers precisely as we would treat educated Englishmen, Germans, or Frenchmen. To that extent the Exclusion act ought to be modified.

But when Chambers of Commerce in Chinese cities who desire to force an amendment of the act circulate petitions and endeavor to pledge all accessible Chinamen to refuse to buy goods of American origin, they have, it seems to us, chosen a weapon somewhat ill-suited to their purpose. A protest from our Government to the Peking Government would probably result in the issuing of orders that would at once modify the zeal of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce and other agitators for this boycott. Moreover, a refusal to buy our goods is not the best way to put us in a mood to amend the Exclusion act. We send to China something over $12,000,000 a year of exports. Previous to Russia's war with Japan we used to send in cotton goods alone nearly that value to Manchuria. With the coming peace and the natural growth of our trade in the East we should hope to sell to China many times her present taking of our commodities. Undoubtedly a general boycott would seriously affect our trade with China, but the Chinese Government, we may be sure, will hardly wish to provoke retaliatory action on our part. The Chinese will be wise if they abandon the boycott and resort to less objectionable means to attain the end they desire. A candid presentation of the matter by intelligent Chinamen to intelligent Americans might result in an effective movement for a modification of the Exclusion act.

THE SOLDIERS OF THE SOUTH.

On the 10th of May there was dedicated at Chester, S. C., a monument to the Confederate dead, and the address of dedication was delivered by a one-armed veteran of the Confederate Army who is now a Judge a United States Court. That simple statement is very significant of the things that have happened and of those that have not happened in the forty-four years since Judge BRAWLEY, with six fellow-college graduates, marched from the town of Chester to join the Confederate ranks.

The address of Judge BRAWLEY was a calm, thoughtful, clear statement of what he considers to have been the temper and character of the war movement in the South. It is remarkable from the fact that he puts aside, as not controlling, many of the motives that have been assigned to the Southern people. He believes in substance that the difference between the South and the North was one of radical sentiment on the two questions, more or less merged into one, of State rights and of slavery, and he holds that the settlement of these questions by the arbitrament of arms was, so far as can be known, inevitable. Of the unity of feeling in the South he bears unqualified testimony. He himself came from a region, and from a class long known as "Union," opposed to nullification in 1832 and separate State action in 1852, but when the State Convention of South Carolina was called in 1860 there was no dissension from the general movement. And to-day, holding the commission of the United States and profoundly loyal to the Nation and to the Government, he is as profoundly convinced that the South was completely sincere in its belief that its cause and its action were right. On that belief the Southerners staked their fortunes and their lives. The decision as to the future was against them, and for all the future they accept it as sincerely as they contended for their early convictions. He says:

> They commit an immense error who hold that what was once right is always right. That is true in the domain of morals, where the great primal obligations change not, but in institutions and government the fluxion of time and events necessitates successive readaptations to changes in environment.
> The "readaptations" have been wonderfully rapid and substantial. A curious coincidence illustrates this fact. In The Charleston News and Courier, containing the address of Judge BRAWLEY, there is a letter from a negro of Virginia on the occasion of the death of Gen. LEE. After a touching tribute to Gen. LEE, the writer says:
>
> I was born a slave. I know all the hardships that slavery entailed upon my race. I am no apologist for slavery. Thank GOD that that bondage that wronged and enfeebled both master and slave is gone, never to return, but deep down in my heart I thank the white man for my contact with him, for the Christian civilization that slavery brought to my race. The hand of GOD can be seen in it all.
>
> He must be a pessimist indeed who can read such utterances from such representative men and "doubt of the Republic."

THE OCEAN YACHT RACE.

As a sporting event, nothing could be more absurd and more fated to be inconclusive than the ocean yacht race instigated by the German Emperor which begins this afternoon. Even between vessels of the same class and size there is nothing proved by a race across the Atlantic. The elements are altogether too many, the chapter of accidents or of chances altogether too copious. In the first and most famous of these races, the Winter race eastward between the Henrietta, Vesta, and Fleetwing, a generation and more ago, it was commonly considered that the slowest boat won, facilitated by pluck and luck, the pluck being that of the surviving veteran, Capt. SAMUELS, who sailed her and who carried canvas with a boldness which the other skippers did not venture to emulate. When the Cambria and Dauntless raced across to the westward, and, as it was expressed at the time, "ASBURY got into Parliament by an hour and a quarter," it was by no means agreed that it was because he had the faster boat. In fact, the Dauntless lost something like the time by which she was beaten by heaving-to in midocean in the hope of rescuing a man who had fallen overboard. Neither were the later races accepted as conclusive or indeed as illuminating, upon the respective merits of the inanimate contestants.

If this be true as to those fair and equal races, how can anything conclusive be expected from a race in which the entries range from a schooner of 86 tons and a yawl of 116 to a full-rigged ship of 647, and comprise four "auxiliaries" with their screws taken inboard, by rig a ship, a barkentine, a three-masted topsail schooner, and a three-masted fore-and-after respectively, in addition to the seven which provide for no other impulsion than that of wind?

Evidently the affair as a yacht race is the height of absurdity. In heavy weather, with not too much windward work, the ship ought to win by days unless, even in this case, that veteran sportsman Lord BRASSEY with his veteran craft should manage to lead at the finish, which would be a very popular victory on both sides of the water. In light breezes from the eastward, which are not at all to be expected, the fore-and-afters would stand a better chance, especially the big Atlantic, of which the prowess has already been proved, as indeed has that of more than one of her competitors. If the navigators lay out their courses on their judgment of the chances of wind and weather as if each of them were alone, and without attempting to "psychologize" the other skippers, it is likely that they will choose widely different courses, and that a considerable variety of weather will be available on the North Atlantic at the same time. If the race be not considered as a race, but only as an outing, everybody concerned may be expected to derive pleasure and benefit from it. Everybody, that is to say, except the hands before the mast, who are evidently destined to a fortnight or so of very hard and, except in the case of the winner, of very thankless work.

CITY DEBT AND ASSETS.

In discussing municipal ownership the other day before the People's Institute Club Mr. BIRD S. COLER very emphatically declared that to own righteously the public utilities we must buy out the acquired private interests in them, and to do that we must have a radical change in the limit of the public debt for the city.

It is clearly fortunate that this view of the obligations of the city should be taken by an advocate of municipal ownership and operation. There are so many that think the city can in some way take over what is by law and equity private property duly granted and long enjoyed, without compensation, that the wholesome doctrine of Mr. COLER is needed, and needed from a man who agrees to the end, if not to the means, approved by his associates. Our own judgment is totally opposed to the extension of municipal operation of so-called public utilities, which we believe to be fraught with serious evils that will tend to increase, but we are glad to see a man of Mr. COLER's standing take the sober and fair position he assumes on the question of the duty of the city in case municipal operation is entered on.

Quite independently of the question of ownership and operation, however, is the contention of Mr. COLER that there should be a revision of the limitation of the city debt. It is not a practical or a sensible arrangement that debt contracted for public works which yield a revenue, which provide for the sure extinction of the debt, and which have an actual market value far in excess of the amount of the debt should be treated as the same sort of burden and risk on the community as a debt incurred for works unproductive in an economic sense. Our public buildings, for Government offices and schools, for instance, have only the value of real estate, and though that could be realized were they to be sold, they will not be sold. If debt is incurred for them it must be paid by taxation. This is practically true also of debt incurred for streets and sewers, though the taxation in these cases is in part limited to property supposed to be benefited. But debt contracted for docks, for waterworks, for transportation facilities, like the subways, is not paid by taxation but by the revenue of the works themselves. There is no appreciable danger to the credit of the city from such investments, if they are made with any degree of care.

The limitation imposed by the Constitution was intended to guard against extravagant indebtedness which should unduly press on the resources of the city, check advance, and impose too heavy a load on the taxpayers. No such ills can flow from the debt we have described. Mr. COLER is quite right in protesting that increase in the actual, substantial assets of the city should not operate to diminish its borrowing power under the law.

PIG IRON.

The fact that there may be at the moment an accumulation of pig iron in first hands which somewhat exceeds the immediate requirements of the market does not necessarily mean that the iron market is on the verge of relapse into stagnation and depression. As a matter of fact, in this instance it means quite the reverse.

The rapid development of the iron industry has found somewhat striking expression in the change in blast furnace design and practice. The new furnaces are large, perfectly equipped, and make more iron in a day than a representative furnace of twenty years ago was expected to make in a week. As the result a furnace which is not rebuilt every five or eight years is likely to become obsolete, unable to compete with newer and better furnaces when prices are low, but capable of being profitably blown in for longer or shorter runs, as may be, when prices are relatively high. On this border line between usefulness and the scrap heap there are always to be found a large number of furnaces whose owners do not care to wreck them, and which lack the advantages of location, ore supply, nearness to market, or local use for product which would warrant the large investment required to modernize them.

Since the large demand for pig iron at $15 per ton has existed—a condition indicating a very prosperous state of the trades consuming pig iron—a great many of these furnaces have been run on such ores and coke supplies as they could arrange for. They are classed as merchant furnaces, having no consuming connections and depending upon the enterprise of their agents to find them customers among the mills and foundries which are without furnaces of their own. Meanwhile, and for a number of years past, all the great consuming interests, like the Steel Corporation and the several smaller mergers, have been hard at work to render themselves independent of furnaces not owned and operated by themselves. This was necessary to protect their trade against the disadvantage of sharp and often extreme fluctuations in pig iron brought about in some instances by suddenly developed scarcity, and in others by speculation. This condition of independence is now practically attained. The United States Steel Corporation is now making about 40,000 tons of pig iron per day, and reports only about four days' supply on hand.

The present accumulation of pig iron on the banks of the so-called merchant furnaces is less than 20,000 tons. Probably it does not exceed 18,000. Instead of representing an accumulation which marks the near approach of stagnation, the surplus should be from 50,000 to 100,000 tons at all times to steady the market and give stability to prices. If production were interrupted it would not supply the market for a week; if anything should occur to give a slightly increased stimulus to business activity it would all be snapped up speculatively and pig iron prices would advance so rapidly as to disturb all calculations. Very likely some of the merchant furnaces will blow out within the next few weeks. They do not make the grades of iron needed in either the acid or the basic processes of conversion into steel, and the demand for mill irons is not what it once was. What accumulation exists is mostly of low grade pig, of which it is easily possible to produce more than current consumption will absorb.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Chicago as Seen from London.

Newspapers tired of condemning the brutalities of the autocracy in Russia have the kind permission of The London Saturday Review to turn their attention to the brutalities of democracy as illustrated in Chicago. By some queer accident The Review's information from the United States is nearly enough up to date to include as many facts about the doings of the Chicago strikers to enable it to say genially that the city is "at present a little more of a hell on earth than, according to several noted admirers of the great Republic of the West, it is ordinarily." This is a statement of the situation that will be thoroughly enjoyed in St. Louis and will cause something different from profound grief in two or three other parts of the country, but The Review is not really at its best until it begins to make up entirely out of its own head an ingenious explanation of why it is that rioting is in progress in Chicago. Just listen to this: "White men and negroes are taking advantage of a big strike there to indulge their racial hatreds. That seems to be the real reason of the terrific animosity with which gangs of negroes and whites are attacking and wounding and killing each other. The negroes have made themselves specially hated by enrolling themselves as strike breakers, a job no doubt agreeable to them as a means of paying off old grudges for lynchings and other amenities of the whites toward them." Not content with a triumph of exposition, The Saturday Review gayly turns prophet and says: "The authorities as yet seem to have let things take their course. When they begin their duty of keeping order we shall not be surprised if they shoot down the mob quite as determinedly as it is being done in Warsaw. Chicago has done that before, as the Socialists know. And no one here expressed any horror." Thus calmly to parallel Chicago's treatment of the Haymarket Anarchists and the methods of the Russian autocracy in maintaining its position was a task that required the ignoring of so many facts that The Saturday Review, which has large ambitions in that direction, may well be proud of its achievement.

Indeed a Tactical Mistake.

It will have to be granted, we think, that the outcome of the unpleasant little squabble over in Brooklyn concerning the Memorial Day parade can be viewed with greater satisfaction by the Confederate veterans than by their old-time antagonists. Presumably, when the Southerners received their unasked invitation to march in the parade, they had their doubts as to the tactfulness of calling special attention to themselves on such an occasion and in such company. They had, however, the best of rights to leave the responsibility for that to the inviting post, and, the invitation once received, the courteous thing for them to do was to accept it. That is what they did. Then came the squabble, with its threats of withdrawal from the parade if ex-Confederates appeared in it, and now the latter have declared for peace and made it certain by saying that they have no desire to be where they are not wanted, and will not trouble anybody with their presence. The protesting posts have, and it is to be hoped that they will utilize, a fine opportunity to reflect upon the assorted consequences of their refusal to remember that from 1865 to 1905 is full forty years, that in that time incalculable quantities of water have passed under innumerable bridges, and that good manners are not at all incompatible with patriotism. Theirs is a victory of a kind nobody can afford to win often, while the repulse of the Southerners is considerably better than merely harmless.

GIVES $100,000 MORE TO BIG CHURCH CLUB

Joseph Milbank Increases Fund for Jersey City Work.

TO TURN BUILDING OVER

Dr. Scudder Will Receive Big People's Palace on Saturday—Monster Swimming Pool to be Built.

On Saturday afternoon next the People's Palace, in Jersey City, the largest institution of its kind in the country connected with a church, will be formally turned over to the Trustees of the First Congregational Church, of which the Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder is pastor, by Joseph Milbank of this city, through whose gifts of $200,000 to Dr. Scudder the enormous clubhouse was made possible.

Mr. Milbank will also announce at the same time that he has given $100,000 more for the uses of the People's Palace, and so the dreams and ambitions of Dr. Scudder for the club will be realized. With this money Dr. Scudder will build one of the largest swimming pools in this part of the country. It will be 75 by 22 feet, or 3 feet wider than the pool in the New York Athletic Club. This will be in a separate building.

The building, which now has a width of 63 feet, will be added to until it has a frontage of 100 feet. In this addition there will be placed sixteen pool and billiard tables, and the number of bowling alleys will be increased from seven to ten.

In giving the $100,000 to Dr. Scudder Mr. Milbank said he did so because the pastor of the church had not alone carried out all of his early promises, but had exceeded them. He said that the People's Palace was one of the few philanthropies he had known that was not continually begging. It is, in fact, self-supporting, and has been able to turn some money into a surplus fund. Of it Dr. Scudder said yesterday:

"We have succeeded in keeping the young men out of the saloons and dives, and that is what we started out to do. Our billiard and pool tables are used all the time, and so are the bowling alleys, the baths, gymnasium, and the dozen other attractions we have provided. We are in competition with the devil, and if there is anything of his machinations in billiards and pool we are beating him at his own game, for if the young man will play—and why should he not?—he is surrounded by the best influences instead of swearing, drinking, and gambling companions."

NO JONES CEREMONY JULY 4.

Body Will Not Be Embarked That Day Because of National Celebration.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Acting Secretary Loomis has suggested that the body of John Paul Jones be embarked on Admiral Sigsbee's squadron on some other day than July 4. This change was made because the Fourth always is celebrated in the navy with all the bunting at the mastheads, and is generally a day of jollification. Admiral Converse has promised to have Admiral Sigsbee's squadron in French waters by July 1 if needed. The ships will require some overhauling at New York after their West Indian cruise, from which they are now returning.

It is the intention to have the body of John Paul Jones finally deposited beneath the memorial chapel at Annapolis.

RESENTS EXCLUSION ACT.

Chinese Miller Criticised for Circular Sent to His Countrymen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Sir Chentung Liang, the Chinese Minister, has been criticised in official circles because of phrases in a circular he recently sent out to his countrymen in the United States in regard to the Exclusion act. The circular was printed in Chinese and has reached every part of the country. A copy reached Secretary Metcalf from San Francisco, where it had been translated by a Government employe.

It is said that Sir Chentung Liang has openly suggested to the Chinese in this country the idea of retaliation by China for the policy of keeping Chinamen out of the United States. The tone of the circular is regarded as objectionable and undiplomatic.

The whole matter with the text of the circular has been laid before Secretary Taft.

Appointed to Board of Education.

Mayor McClellan announced yesterday that he had appointed Joseph E. Cosgrove of 304 Humboldt Street, Brooklyn, to be a member of the Board of Education, to succeed Theodore C. Eppig, who resigned two weeks ago. Senator McCarren recommended Cosgrove for the appointment. Mr. Eppig was named on the recommendation of Bishop McDonnell.

Subway Sign Compromise Suggested.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Contrary to the wishes of the public, the Subway signs seem doomed to remain a permanent fixture of the underground stations. If this be the case, why not compromise with the Interborough people by requiring the removal of the present flimsy galvanized-iron signs and the substitution of ornamental cast-iron frames conforming to the general architecture of the stations, to be set into the walls at proper intervals, and to contain a removable panel on which would be pasted the advertisement?

It might be well to include in the compromise a rule barring the hideous large-type "ads" and restricting the use of the frames to the eye-pleasing "poster" or other decorative designs.

LYNNE L. LEVEGOOD.

New York, May 5, 1905.

A Big Job for the Bench.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the question whether the legislative, executive, and judicial functions of the Government are to be kept in separate hands might it not be well to intrust all three to a body composed of the entire judiciary? The Judges would probably find it easier to agree as to the meaning of the laws if made by themselves, and might be as likely as any other official body to give them faithful execution.

JOHN SHERWIN CROSBY.

New York, May 6, 1905.

The Distribution of Libraries.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that all of the Carnegie Libraries are being built in the wealthier sections of the cities instead of among the tenement section? Can you tell why? In the vicinity of this neighborhood there is none that is like the Carnegie, and the city supports them I understand.

The Limit.

From The Chicago News.

"Did you ever hear anything so idiotic as that talk of Mrs. Softer's when she is addressing her baby?" queried one woman of another on the street car.

"Yes, I think I have," was the reply.

"For heaven's sake, what was it?"

"I once heard a fat man talking to his canary bird."

DUC DECAZES SAVED.

His Auto Boat Was Abandoned, but a Destroyer Rescued the Crew.

PARIS, May 15.—The Ministry of Marine to-day received dispatches announcing that the torpedo boat destroyer Arbalète had arrived at Cagliari, Sardinia, with the Duc Decazes and the other members of the crew of the autoboat Quand-Même on board.

The Quand-Même led the autoboat racers from Port Mahon, Minorca, until about fifty miles from Toulon, when the storm blew her back over the same course she had taken.

Ultimately the Quand-Même was abandoned. The commander of the Arbalète telegraphs that he took all the members of the crew on board the destroyer, but that he was unable to bring the Quand-Même into port, as heavy seas swept over the autoboat last night, repeatedly snapping the tow line and making it impossible to tow her.

The Duc Decazes has telegraphed to his family from Cagliari as follows:

"Landed safe and sound this morning from the Arbalète."

The rescue of the Quand-Même closes the contest without loss of life, but with only two of the seven autoboats afloat.

TOULON, May 15.—The receipt to-day of a telegram from the Duc Decazes reporting the safety of himself and the crew of his autoboat Quand-Même and ordering that his yacht Velléda be prepared for a cruise has afforded great relief to the anxious population of Toulon and the rescued competitors in the autoboat race.

Further narratives of participants in that perilous affair show that the dangers through which they passed during the hurricane were even more terrifying than at first reported. Congratulations on the fortunate escape of owners and crews are being offered from all quarters, while banquets are being organized in honor of the racers.

Mme. du Gast in particular is being lionized for her heroic struggle. She is a unique figure as the commander of an autoboat, and her perilous adventure recalls the fact that she was the only woman who steered a motor car in the fatal Paris-Madrid race.

KAISER'S BOMB UNEXPLODED.

A Speech Containing Allusions to France Was Not Delivered.

METZ, May 15.—Chancellor von Bülow and Minister of War von Einem, who arrived here to-day, having been summoned by Emperor William, had long conferences with his Majesty. The object of the consultations puzzles observers, but the impression prevails that they concerned the defenses of the empire.

The Emperor's speech at Strassburg, sensational as it was reported to be, was much less so than one containing allusions to France which had been prepared by his Majesty, who, however, accepting the advice of members of his entourage did not deliver it.

BERLIN, May 15.—The Tageblatt to-day says:

"The surprising news comes to us from Paris that the French Government has decided to send a special envoy to attend the wedding of the Crown Prince.

"This has been determined upon in principle by the French Cabinet, and will be further discussed at another sitting, at which the personnel of the legation will be considered—whether it shall be of civil officials, of military, or of both civil and military officials."

UPHOLDS PRIVATE CAR LINES.

President Robbins of Armour's Says Agitation Tends to Confiscation.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—William E. Ripley, Professor of Economics at Harvard University, was before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce to-day. He favored the pooling of competitive lines and giving the Commission power to fix rates. He said:

"Granting power effectively to remedy abuses would be far easier if the right to pool were granted. The complaints could easily be remedied by combined action of the railroads, which is now impossible, owing to the presence of obstinate competitors. Many railroad consolidations to-day would never have occurred if the railways could have acted unitedly under a pool.

George B. Robbins, President of the Armour Car Line Company; asserted that the refrigerator car lines were not engaged in interstate commerce. The agitation, tending toward the confiscation of private cars, he declared, had deterred his company from increasing its facilities.

Mr. Robbins was very severe in criticising a witness who had exposed the code of the Armour Company. He said the man, who was a former employe, had done this because of a fancied wrong. He denied any "community of interest" between the railroads and the Armour car lines.

OUSTS PRESIDENT'S FRIEND.

Mr. Roosevelt Comes to Rescue of Man Mr. Fairbanks Removes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Vice President Fairbanks has decided to remove William Jeffers, the chief operator in the telegraph room of the Senate, and give the place to one of his political supporters. President Roosevelt regards Jeffers as a worthy man, and was about to make him Postmaster at Hackensack, N. J., when politicians from that place came forward in support of T. C. Cumming for the Postmastership.

Jeffers has been in the Senate's service many years, and the President says he will provide a place for him.

PASTOR PREVENTED WEDDING

Told Early Morning Visitors to Hotel They Had Better Wait.

A neatly dressed young couple went to the Bartholdi Hotel, Broadway and Twenty-third Street, early yesterday morning and told the night clerk they wanted to be married right away. They said they were Le Roy Clark of 351 West One Hundred and Fourteenth Street and Miss Sarah Brown of 100 West Eighteenth Street. They said they had arrived in New York late, owing to a delayed train. The clerk called the Rev. Henry M. Warren, the "hotel pastor," on the telephone, and he hurried to the Bartholdi.

The would-be bride told the preacher that a little while before another man had proposed to her, but she preferred the man seated with her on the sofa. The accepted one smiled. The rejected one was nervously walking up and down the corridor outside. The young woman said that he had been kind enough to promise to stay and act as best man.

It was then nearly 1 o'clock in the morning. The Rev. Mr. Warren took the young couple aside, talked to them on the sacredness of marriage, and told them he thought they had better wait awhile. It was 2 o'clock before the preacher got through, but the couple still thought they ought to be married. Then the cab driver who had brought them to the hotel appeared. He took sides with the minister, saying to the young woman that she had better think it over for a day or two. The cabman was eloquent. He offered to drive her home safely without charge if she would take his cab. The rejected one refused to give advice. The girl thought it over, and then said she guessed it would do no harm to wait. The cabman drove the young woman home and another cab bore away the minister and the rivals.

Inquiry at the address given by Mr. Clark yesterday elicited the information that he was not at home. Later it was said that he did not live there. The address given by the supposed Miss Brown is that of a big shoe store.

SEEKS PRINCIPALSHIP IN SPITE OF MAXWELL

Magnus Gross Applies to Have Name Placed on List.

BOARD TO DECIDE MAY 24

City Superintendent Said He Could Not Be Nominated Under Any Conditions Whatever.

Disregarding City Superintendent Maxwell, who recently said that he could not be nominated as a Principal "under any conditions whatever," Magnus Gross, the President of the New York City Teachers' Organization, and now acting "Principal" in Public School No. 6, Madison Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, has applied to have his name placed upon the Principals' eligible list. If his application is granted by the Board of Education, the power of the City Superintendent to establish tests of scholarship for a Principal's position will be shattered, and any teacher who is a college graduate and has eight years or more teaching experience will be eligible for a principalship.

Commissioner Alrich A. Man said last night that the charter had been misconstrued by the Board of Examiners and the Board of Superintendents, both of which were presided over by City Superintendent Maxwell.

"There is nothing in this statute," (section 1,089 of the charter,) he said, "which gives the Board of Examiners power to establish tests of scholarship."

Speaking of the case of Mr. Gross, who is a graduate of the College of the City of New York, and who has had twenty years' experience as a teacher, Commissioner Man said:

"The Board of Education has designated the qualifications for Principal as graduation from a recognized college and at least eight years of successful service. When a Principal dies or retires, the person next in the order of promotion in the school has, if qualified under the by-laws, a strong moral claim to the first consideration at the hands of the Board of Education. The moment that any course is adopted by the Board of Education other than the one above outlined, the strongest incentive to teachers throughout the entire system to do their duty regularly, faithfully and efficiently, and to prepare themselves to take higher positions, is removed.

"In the present instance, a teacher of twenty years' experience, whose character, ability, and efficiency are widely known through the fact that he has been for many years President of the City Teachers' Association, is morally entitled to consideration for the place. Five years ago he applied for a Principal's license, being then eligible under the by-laws for such a license. His right to have his name upon the eligible list has apparently been continuous until the present date."

The Board of Education will act upon the case of Mr. Gross at its next meeting, May 24.

PREACHERS AFTER ST. REGIS.

Baptists Ask Governor Not to Sign Bill Exempting Hotel's Bar.

The Rev. Hervey Wood of the National Temperance Society proposed a resolution yesterday at the Baptist Ministers' conference at the Twenty-third Street Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association asking Gov. Higgins not to sign the bill which would legalize the liquor tax certificate of the Hotel St. Regis in Fifth Avenue.

The bill exempts hotels having over 200 rooms from the prohibition of a license to sell liquor within 200 feet of a church. If the bill is signed the St. Regis would have no more trouble on that score. In order to obviate this provision of the law it was necessary for the St. Regis to build an addition to the hotel to get an entrance over 200 feet from the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The resolution was opposed by the Rev. Joseph Sullivan, the pastor of the Fourth Baptist Church of Paterson, N. J. He declared that members of the conference living in other States, although in the vicinity of New York, had no right to interfere with home rule. Several others spoke, but they all favored the resolution and it was passed.

NOTABLES GO ABROAD TO-DAY.

Vanderbilts, Lady Brassey, Miss Barrymore, and Fritzi Scheff to Sail.

The Cunarder Caronia and the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. will sail for Europe to-day with every cabin taken. Among the passengers on the Caronia will be Miss Ethel Barrymore, Lady Brassey, who it was thought would accompany Lord Brassey on the Sunbeam in the race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's Cup; Sir James and Lady Hane, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. H. A. Pakenham, whose husband will be with Lord Brassey on the Sunbeam, and Lieut. Col. H. A. Yorke of the Royal Engineers.

Booked on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. are Mrs. Vanderbilt and Miss Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Danforth, Baroness von Bardeleben, (Miss Fritzi Scheff,) Arnold Daly, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Guggenheim, Baron and Baroness de Fersen, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Untermyer, Bishop Leopold Ruiz of Mexico, and Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch and Miss Busch.

BOWEN ORDERED TO REPLY.

Minister Must Answer at Once Countercharges Made by Loomis.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The formal trial of the issues between Acting Secretary Loomis and Minister Bowen began to-day, when Mr. Bowen visited the President at the White House. The President referred him to Secretary Taft.

At the War Department Secretary Taft turned over to Mr. Bowen both Loomis's answer to the charges transmitted by the Minister, with the accompanying documents and Loomis's counter-charges against Mr. Bowen. The counter-charges accuse Mr. Bowen of instigating the circulation of untounded reports against his superior officer, involving malfeasance in office. Secretary Taft advised Mr. Bowen to prepare at once his answer, and in order to facilitate his task, tendered him the services of one of the War Department stenographers. Mr. Bowen returned to his hotel and began the work.

WAHLE MAGISTRATES HEAD.

McAvoy Will Investigate Conditions in Harlem Court.

At a full meeting of the Board of City Magistrates yesterday afternoon, Charles G. F. Wahle, lately appointed by Mayor McClellan, was elected President of the board, and James McCabe, Chief Clerk of the Fifty-fourth Street Court, was elected Secretary.

Magistrate McAvoy announced that he would thoroughly investigate conditions in the Harlem Court, where he is now sitting. Last week a lawyer said that a policeman connected with the court had attempted to "steer" a prisoner to another lawyer, when he wished to retain the one who complained. Magistrate McAvoy said that he had set aside Thursday afternoon next in which to give the lawyer or any other person who had charges to make a chance to present them.

CRIMMINS COMMITTEE TO QUIT, REPORT SAYS

Members Said to be Dissatisfied with Crimmins-Platt Fight.

KNOWLES ATTACKS TARBELL

Says There Has Been Extravagance in Rebate System and Management of Equitable Agencies.

The Frick committee of Equitable investigators, beginning to-day, will hold daily sessions for the taking of oral testimony until the ground is covered for the report to the Directors on May 31. Superintendent Hendricks of the State Insurance Department is expected back here to-day for the continuance of his sessions of testimony taking, so that the two investigations are likely to run side by side for a time.

There was talk in Wall Street yesterday that a new policy holders' committee might be formed, but nobody appeared to father the idea, and Samuel Untermyer, counsel for James H. Hyde, denied that any such movement was on foot at his direction as had been suggested in Alexander quarters.

It was predicted by some yesterday that the days of the Crimmins policy holders' committee are numbered, for its counsel, Frank H. Platt, and its Chairman, John D. Crimmins, are in open hostility to each other, and certain of its members are inclined to the belief that the object for which they supposed they were being gathered together has been lost sight of in the alliance of certain interests in the committee with the partisans in the controversy within the Equitable Society. Henry Morgenthau declared yesterday that he thought the committee had better get together within a few days and find out just where it stood and what it stood for.

Harry H. Knowles, formerly the Agency Supervisor of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, last night gave out an interview on the Equitable situation in which he said:

"There seems to be a continued and well-defined effort upon the part of the Alexander-Tarbell faction in the Equitable to mislead the press, policy holders, and the general public with the old familiar cry of 'Stop thief!' by the attempt to draw the attention to 'syndicate profits' and to that old chestnut regarding surplus which has been used for over forty years by the Equitable's competitors and enemies in competition, 'as to whom the surplus belongs.' This question is fully answered in the charter of the company, also by every document issued over the signature of the executive officers of the company for years on this subject, and still further answered by the practice of the company in paying out from this surplus yearly large amounts in cash dividends to its policy holders, this amount last year alone being $3,682,295.

"Now let us for a moment look at the management of the Equitable agency forces under the Alexander-Tarbell régime, for it is truly stated that the management is the 'keystone of the arch.' The agency forces of the society have been deliberately and intentionally kept away from the Vice President, Mr. James H. Hyde, by the Alexander-Tarbell faction for reasons that are now obvious, and Mr. Hyde, having perfect confidence in his father's protégé and friend, he also being his trustee, Mr. James W. Alexander, gave to him and Tarbell all the power and confidence that the Vice President had in these matters, without interference. So even they can in no way charge to Mr. Hyde any of the ruinous mistakes of agency management.

"Since the death of the founder of the society, Henry B. Hyde, Tarbell has been given the free rein in the management of the agency affairs, and his acts have received the indorsement of President Alexander. Now what has been done in this branch of the company's affairs? Owing to the extravagant waste countenanced and allowed by Tarbell in the shape of rebates, the agency balances of the Equitable Life, since the death of Henry B. Hyde, in 1899, have increased from $643,128 to $1,514,639.90 in 1904. This large sum is directly chargeable to Tarbell as officer in chacrge of the agency force of the society, as he recommends and makes these advances, with the approval of President Alexander. And even this large amount does not by any means represent the full waste of the policy holders' funds.

"The tremendous lapse of business since the death of Henry B. Hyde in 1899 of $399,311,063 adds largely to the waste of policy holders' funds, for all this large amount of rebated straw business was written at a large cost for medical examiners' fees, postage and office expenses, and in addition the losses that occur the first year on this rebated business add to the cost and burden of the persistent policy holders, who paid 100 cents on the dollar for their insurance. It is not alone the cost of securing this worthless business which the company is put to for the glorification of the Alexander-Tarbell régime, but furthermore insurers who have taken policies in this way, expecting to drop them at the end of the year, if their health becomes impaired in the meantime, will continue the insurance in force, while those in good health drop their policies, having only paid a small proportion of the first year's premium at Tarbell's insurance bargain counter, thus making a higher rate of mortality for the company than would obtain if the insurance had been written in the first place on a sound basis.

"The present efficient Superintendent of Insurance of this State I know will from his investigations find what I charge to be true, that the agency department, as managed by Tarbell, who winks at the violation of the rebate laws in this and other States, has squandered the policy holders' money in excessive and extravagant advances, (showing great consideration and favor to a few of his satellite managers,) and also recently by a bonus offer of $4 per thousand, which is directly opposite to the positive statements made by both President Alexander and himself in 1900, and repeatedly since, that there would never be another bonus offered by the society as long as they were officers of the same, for they charged to bonuses the fact that the rebater by that method was given a means and excuse for the nefarious practice of rebating.

"This evil and tremendous waste of policy holders' funds is again shown by the large amount of business written and not taken, for the purpose of showing the power of Mr. Tarbell. This amount last year, 1904, alone, was $81,646,314, upon every dollar of which was wasted the cost of medical examiners' fees, inspection fees, the cost of printing policies, applications, and other documents, besides the office expense for the issuance of same, and all this without one cent return to the policy holders of the society for the money expended."

From Alexander quarters came yesterday the declaration that it was James H. Hyde who proposed—and in writing—to George B. Cortelyou that he should take the Presidency of the Equitable in the event of Mr. Alexander's retirement. Friends of Mrs. Hyde said that the story was "rot" and that no such move had been made.

SAW THE BASEBALL GAME.

Even If He Did Have to Jump Express and Go to Hospital.

George Sneven, a boatbuilder, forty-five years old, of Shelton, Conn., was in Boston yesterday morning when he was seized with a sudden attack of baseball fever. He had to come to New York on business anyway; why not catch the 10 A. M. express and get here at 3:15 P. M.? Certainly he would get here in plenty of time to see the New York and Chicago National League Clubs play at the Polo Grounds. He jumped into a herdic, which is Bostonese for a one-man vehicle, and sped to the South Terminal Station.

He got to the station just as the gates were closing, jumped aboard, checked his suitcase, and lighted a cigar. Then he learned that the train didn't stop at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. If he went to Forty-second Street he would certainly reach the Polo Grounds too late to see the preliminary practice, perhaps to see the first inning or two.

"I'll jump the train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street," he said to himself. "I'm going to see that game from start to finish."

When the train neared the Harlem station it was going about thirty miles an hour. That didn't scare Sneven at first, but when he swung his 225 pounds down from the rail and saw the asphalt platform race past him he lost his nerve for a minute. Then the brakeman, who is a sympathetic individual, whispered a word of encouragement and helped him off.

Sneven went sprawling and rolling and scraping upon the platform. The station men ran to him, expecting to find him dead or nearly so. Sneven surprised them by getting up. He had a lot of bad bruises and a severe cut on the left arm, however, so they called an ambulance from the Harlem Hospital.

"How long will it take to do it up temporarily?" asked Snever of the physician. "I want to and must see that game of ball."

Dr. Dimmick told Sneven that it wouldn't take long, but that he had better go to the hospital and have the work done properly, as serious complications might set in otherwise.

"Will it take very long then?" inquired Sneven.

"No," said the doctor.

They hurried to the hospital. The doctor washed the wound in a jiffy, ran some bandages around the arm, and handed Sneven his coat. Sneven thanked him and rushed out to a car, which hurried him to the Polo Grounds.

"Play ball!" yelled the umpire just as Sneven pushed through the gate and scurried for the grand stand.

"Close call," said Sneven, "but I'm here all right!"

OCEAN LINERS RACE.

The Allianca in 15 Minutes Ahead of Her Rival, the Allegheny.

An exciting ocean steamship race ended last night when the Panama Line steamer Allianca, from Colon, crossed the bar at Sandy Hook fifteen minutes ahead of her rival, the steamer Allegheny, of the Hamburg-American Line from Savanilla, Cartagena, Port Limon, and Fortune Island.

Shortly after leaving Fortune Island, in the Bahamas, last Friday, the Allegheny fell in with the Allianca, and a race for this port began. For the entire three days the vessels were in sight of each other. There was great interest among the passengers of the steamers.

Pittsburg Story That Wabash Must Get New Route East.

HAS COAL SYNDICATE, TOO

Prediction That Retiring Wabash President Will Build Up Independent Coal Railway.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 15.—According to a story published to-day by The Pittsburg Dispatch, the institution of suits against the Little Kanawha syndicate reveals the fact that Joseph Ramsey, Jr., retiring President of the Wabash, and his intimate friends control not only the great coal fields of 90,000 or 100,000 acres in West Virginia, supposed to have belonged to George J. Gould, but also the route to the seaboard, which the Gould system would have taken had President Ramsey remained.

Mr. Gould is a minority member of the syndicate, it is said, and overtures from him for purchase have been rejected because of insufficient price. It is understood that one result will be that Mr. Ramsey will devote himself to the working out of a great independent coal railway in the richest tonnage territory in the country.

At the time the Little Kanawha syndicate was formed Mr. Gould had no idea of going to the seaboard, and the scheme was undertaken independently to secure a good coal tonnage for Western traffic.

Mr. Ramsey formed the syndicate with himself, Mr. Gould, and Mr. Ramsey's closest business associate, W. K. Guy, of St. Louis, as managers. Ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, Senator S. B. Elkins, E. D. Fulton, J. T. Blair, Adolph Busch of St. Louis, and other prominent financiers became underwriters. Gould took only a minority interest.

The Kinchilow tract of coal was bought from Davis and Elkins, and the syndicate began to assume some importance. The syndicate was capitalized at $8,000,000, and became important in the seaboard chain when Gould assumed control of the Western Maryland and purchased the West Virginia Central and large coal tracts from the Davis-Elkins interests.

Long before Mr. Gould had conceived the plan to invade the territory east of Pittsburg. Mr. Ramsey, A. M. Neeper, J. W. Paterson, E. D. Fulton, J. T. Blair, and W. E. Griffiths planned to build an independent line known as the Greene County Railroad into the coal fields of Washington and Greene Counties to protect the Wabash Pittsburg terminal and to provide a good feeder for the Gould lines.

On his recent visit Mr. Gould said that the building of his seaboard connection would be in the hands of Frederick A. Delano, Vice President of the Wabash, in charge of operating, and that these matters would be taken up before long. Unless an agreement is reached with the Little Kanawha syndicate and the Greene County Railroad it is believed that the connection with the West Virginia Central and Western Maryland will be made with an entirely new line not yet surveyed.

THEY PULLED HIS HAIR.

The Tormentors and Their Victim Astonished at the Result.

Sitting on one of the benches in Stuyvesant Square Park yesterday at noon was an old man with long gray locks. His head was pillowed on his arm, and his gray locks fluttering in the breeze attracted the interest of a group of children.

"Say, Jimmy, look at dat head o' hair," one of the ringleaders said, nudging his companion. "Le's have some fun wid de old guy."

Jimmy was willing enough. The one who had addressed him stuck out two fingers as a smile of anticipation curled his lips. He clutched a long silken hair between forefinger and thumb, jerked it out, and started to run.

"Cut it!" he shouted to his companions, and they all scampered. When they were far enough to turn around and look back with safety, they were astonished to see the old man still asleep. They approached him again, and repeated the hair pulling performance, but the old man seemed not to mind it at all. He slept on peacefully.

"Wot's de matter wid dat guy's head? It's tough as a rock," remarked Jimmy disgustedly. "We got to fix him good now."

For a fourth attack the group crept behind the man on the bench, and Jimmy poked his hand out to the gray head. He did not, as his playfellow had done, get a single hair, but wound his forefinger carefully around a whole bunch.

"Now look out," he whispered to his companions.

Jimmy gave a fierce jerk, and the next moment there were seven boys with trembling knees, too frightened to run. In the hand of Jimmy was not a tuft, but a whole head of hair. He dropped it, and the eyes of the youngsters bulged with terror.

The old man slowly woke up, looked astonished, and, seeing his gray wig on the ground, picked it up and carefully replaced it.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE.

Hippodrome's Feathered Comedian Celebrates Birthday with Banquet.

There was sauce for the goose at the Hippodrome last night. Dick, one of the goose comedians in "A Yankee Circus on Mars," celebrated his twelfth birthday, and he and his two pig companions, entertained the human freaks of the organization at supper in the largest dressing room.

Clyde W. Powers, the owner of the goose, arranged the affair. Dick was hatched on the Chicago World's Fair Grounds, and has not missed a single State or National exposition since.

Phoebe and Babe, the pigs, had napkins tucked around their necks at the banquet, at which humiliation they squealed vigorously and had to be put to bed. The other diners, however, gave a better account of themselves.

ENDS OF THE EARTH DINNER.

Poultney Bigelow Presides and Tells a Snake Story.

The Ends of the Earth Club held its annual banquet at the Hotel Savoy last night. Poultney Bigelow presided, and there were present E. St. John Greble, Samuel Elliott, Frank Putnam, B. W. Whitlock, James H. Wilson, C. W. Brega of Columbia University, Peter McArthur, H. R. Gaylord, D. L. Brainard, C. H. A. Clowes, H. L. Bridgman, David Gray, and Edwin S. Robinson.

Mr. Bigelow in calling the gathering to order told the foremost snake story of the century—involving a thirty-foot python, a lantern, the Standard Oil Company, and a forest fire. He said that Mark Twain would preside at the next dinner of the club, which would positively be held in February, 1906.

Other speakers were Rear Admiral Chadwick, Capt. Franklin, Prof. J. H. Canfield of Columbia University, James Metcalfe, Granville Altman of Borneo, and Commander R. E. Peary.

Harper's Book News.

The Tyranny of the Dark.

Hamlin Garland has boldly advanced into a new and unexplored field for romance, full of fascinating possibilities. He has pictured a delightful Western girl in a situation so strange that the whole story makes a daring departure from modern fiction. Seeming unrealities become startlingly real, and even the sceptical reader finds himself asking if these are unrealities after all.

The Club of Queer Trades

For this unique series of tales by Gilbert K. Chesterton the reviewers have some novel phrases to voice their enthusiasm: "As different," says one, "from the average mass of fiction as Cheddar cheese is from chalk." "A succession of pin-pricks that literally tickle us to laughter," says another. "Cold truths out of place—a most diverting book."

It is a highly ingenious idea—the Club of Queer Trades—and makes a book for all lovers of adventure and mystery tales.

The Worsted Man

A bright and amusing comedietta by John Kendrick Bangs, well adapted to amateur theatricals. A group of Summer girls longing for male companionship construct a worsted man who comes to life and proves to be one of the worst of flirts. The lyrics may be sung to various well-known airs from the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

(D) Design:

William E. Anderson, No. 24,636, September 17, 1895, Cotton Bales.

(E) Trade Mark:

No. 31,380, registered March 8th, 1898. The trade-mark registered includes the letter A inclosed in a circle, as applied to cylindrical cotton bales.

(F) 1. All additional shares of the capital stock of the corporations named in subdivision (A) hereof and all shares of other corporations organized after April 1, 1902, acquired by American Cotton Company subsequent to said last-mentioned date.

2. All additional letters patent, applications for letters patent, designs and trade-marks, and all other property of every kind and description acquired by the American Cotton Company with the proceeds of the said debenture bonds.

3. All other chattels and personal property of said American Cotton Company appertaining to or forming a part of its business, excepting merchandise, accounts receivable and cash.

The said property will be sold as an entirety and in one lot or parcel, without covenant or warranty of any kind, nature, or description whatsoever.

All the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey is to be sold upon conditions as follows:

First: The sale and conveyance thereof are to be subject to all Government taxes and annuities which are now payable to and which shall hereafter become payable upon said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey, or upon any of them.

Second: All notarial fees, Government taxes, and annuities and other expenses required to be paid for assigning all and every the said right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned Letters Patent of foreign countries to the purchaser or purchasers thereof shall be paid by the purchaser or purchasers thereof.

Third: If any of said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey shall have lapsed or become forfeited for non-payment of any taxes or annuities or by reason of failure to work the invention covered thereby, no deduction or abatement shall be allowed from the amount of the bid of the successful bidder for all the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to all of said Letters Patent of foreign countries.

No bid will be received from any person who shall not first deposit with the undersigned or the aforesaid auctioneers as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of his acceptance the sum of $10,000 in cash or by certified check on some incorporated bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or indorsed payable to the order of the Central Trust Company of New York. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be retained as part payment of the purchase price of the property so sold. On the acceptance of the bid of the successful bidder shall forthwith enter into an agreement in writing in appropriate form, whereby he shall bind himself to pay the balance of his bid at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York City, No. 54 Wall Street, New York City, on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The successful bidder, upon payment in full of the purchase price bidden in the manner and within the period herein specified, shall be entitled to receive the certificates representing the shares of stock enumerated in subdivision A hereof, together with certificates duly executed by the persons in whose names said certificates stand, and an instrument or instruments in writing executed by the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee as aforesaid, transferring or purporting to transfer such right, title, and interest as it may have as such trustee in and to the said property herein described or intended so to be (other than that set forth in subdivision (A) hereof,) together with such documents as may be in the possession of the Trustee (other than the original deed of trust securing said debentures) evidencing its right, title, and interest to such property or to any part or portion thereof.

Intending bidders during business hours of any day (Sundays and legal holidays excepted) prior to the sale of said property pursuant to this notice, at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York, 54 Wall Street, New York City, may examine any and all documents in the possession of said Trust Company evidencing its right, title, and interest in the property to be sold or to any part or portion thereof.

In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said auctioneers, or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with the terms thereof, or shall fail to pay the balance of the purchase price, then the sum deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or represented by check, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure, and such bidder shall be held responsible for the payment of the expenses of the sale or of a resale, and for any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price at such re-sale.

So much of the purchase price as shall not be required by the undersigned Trustee to be paid in cash can either be paid in cash or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid in whole or in part by turning in to be canceled or credited the six per cent. gold debenture bonds and the coupons thereto appertaining of the American Cotton Company outstanding under said deed of trust dated April 1, 1902, and the purchaser will be credited on account of such bonds and coupons with such sums as would be payable in cash on account thereof out of the proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were paid in cash.

The right is reserved to re-sell the property upon such notice as the Central Trust Company of New York may determine as sufficient, or without notice in the event that the purchaser shall fail or omit to make any payment on account of the unpaid balance of the purchase price on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The Central Trust Company of New York reserves the right to adjourn said sale from time to time, and to sell upon such adjourned day without further notice or upon such notice as it may in its discretion deem sufficient.

Dated March 1st, 1905.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Easy, 2¼@2¾ Per Cent.

Prices Alter Little on a Small Volume of Business and News—No Franchise Tax Decision.

Business on the Stock Exchange yesterday developed no new movement, or any news promising any. The over-Sunday orders from abroad were sales, upon continuance of minor local embarrassments in London, and fresh speculative considerations in Paris due to the death of a French bull of English mining stocks, and unconfirmed renewals of the report of Delcassé's resignation. This selling was absorbed by a moderate volume of domestic buying orders of a not very pressing sort, and strongest in the Northwestern group, which were so conspicuous on Saturday. The Burlington 4s hardly moved in a manner to confirm the report of their retirement as the vehicle of an extra dividend upon the stock of their guarantors, but the parent stocks—Northern Pacific and Great Northern—although erratic were strong enough to warrant belief that something is impending. The rubber stocks were not stimulated by the merger plan, which it will require some time to digest. Yesterday's selling and moderate decline do not necessarily imply disapproval, being the natural sequel to any important announcement. The acquisition of Rubber Goods stock in the market for cash, and the payment for it in new United States Rubber stock to be issued for the purpose, constitute an operation so uncertain in its details that it cannot be characterized decisively. It has this merit at least, that the syndicate's terms are open to the minority stock if they care to accept it before May 1, 1906. There is therefore no need for hasty decision, and meanwhile the favorable opinion of the circular regarding the intrinsic worth of the property which it is proposed to acquire may be expected to have its natural effect when general market considerations are not adverse.

There was no franchise tax decision, according to the premature announcement not only that it was coming, but that it would be adverse to the companies. There was accordingly a natural reaction from that depressing influence, which possibly was carried too far. The decision is at best postponed, and perhaps for weeks only. The reaction was strongest in the case of Consolidated Gas, and was proportioned to its previous decline. This would be logical enough were it not for the fact that Consolidated Gas is subject to specific considerations, additional to the franchise tax, and which promise rather to grow than diminish. The foreign trade statement was favorable in its figures, and especially in its disclosure of local significance that the increase of corn exports went out via New York. An eightfold increase in April at this port compared with a large decrease for the ten-month period certainly corresponds to something new. The decrease of wheat exports to the vanishing point is no novelty, nor is it due solely to lack of wheat. Speculation was still effective at the time of the April figures. Neither is there anything new in the increase of cotton in bales and dollars. The aggregate value, however, is larger than for four years, and comes in time to check the fears that our agricultural exports must necessarily decline progressively. Perhaps the approaching exports of manufactures will prove equally agreeable reading.

RUBBER PURCHASE CONTRACT

Agreement with Syndicate Shows Terms of Proposed Acquisition.

The more important details of the contract on which the United States Rubber Company proposed to acquire from a syndicate headed by Anthony N. Brady a controlling amount of the capital stock of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company became known yesterday from the contract between the syndicate and the Rubber Trust. It appeared that, in addition to President Charles H. Dale of the Rubber Goods Company, President Colt of the United States Rubber Company, E. C. Benedict, and Anthony N. Brady, both the latter being Directors of the United States Rubber Company, are members of the syndicate from which the purchase is to be made.

Under the contract it is provided that if the United States Rubber Company shall acquire all the capital stock of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company, consisting now of 160,417 shares of the common and 90,514 shares of the preferred, stock will be issued for it on the basis of 100,000 of the new second preferred shares for the common and 90,514 of the new first preferred for the preferred. In case the amount acquired by the syndicate is less than the total but more than the 67 per cent. which the syndicate undertakes to get under its contract, there will be deducted from the new issues for every share of the preferred not acquired $100 of the new first preferred stock, and for every share of the common $50 of the new second preferred stock.

The rubber company agrees also that if the syndicate turns over 67 per cent. of the stock of the Rubber Goods Company, it will acquire any of the minority shares outstanding up to March 1, 1906, when the syndicate contract expires, on the same terms as the stock obtained from the syndicate.

GOVERNMENT FUNDS REPAID.

The Sub-Treasury yesterday had a credit balance of $1,129,831 at the Clearing House as a result of the payments made by the banks in response to the call issued some time ago for a portion of the Government funds in the hands of the National banks. The total amount recalled by the Government is in the neighborhood of $29,000,000, of which half was payable yesterday and the balance on July 1 next. A considerable portion of the amount due yesterday had been paid in advance by the banks, and besides the Sub-Treasury's credit balance at the Clearing House yesterday it received large amounts over the counter. It was estimated at the Sub-Treasury that nearly all of the amount due had been received before the close of business.

Swift & Company's sales of fresh beef in New York City for week ending Saturday, May 12th, averaged 8.28 cents per lb.—Adv.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Better Demands for Bonds—No Decided Movement in Stocks.

Banking houses report a better demand for bonds than has existed for some time. Not only are the transactions on the Exchange heavier—they reached $2,870,000 yesterday—but business over the counter is improving. The feature of the bond market yesterday continued to be the Burlington joint 4s, guaranteed by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. There were renewed rumors to the effect that plans were under way to retire these bonds at maturity next year. According to the highest authority, however, no steps in this direction have been taken yet. It is admittedly Mr. Hill's desire to have these bonds retired, for Mr. Hill, it is well known, never was an admirer of bonds, and they will undoubtedly be done away with when the time comes. A more rational explanation for the advance offered by important banking interests is the theory that they were advanced on the realization that this 4 per cent. bond, with a semi-annual coupon due June 1, was selling on a basis of par flat, without allowance for the interest.

Which Will Tire First?

"The two most important elements in the market on which operators would have to count in any future movement," said a broker yesterday, "are those traders who are still long of stocks bought higher up and those who went short of them further down. They about balance each other, and both positions show a loss. The question is, Which of them will hang on the longer? Those on the long side have patience and are not frightened by any recession in prices, the shorts will have to cover sooner or later. On the other hand, any break below the recent low figures would probably scare out a lot of those who are still hanging on to their stocks. In considering the question as to which party is likely to tire first, it must be remembered that the interest account on the bull side is a matter which will have its influence."

Jacob Field's Operations.

Jacob Field is enjoying a good deal of notoriety just now. His name is connected with every movement, and he is constantly being reported as bidding up this or that stock. "Nothing," said a market observer, "could more clearly show the absolute professionalism of the market than the fact that Field is again the apparent centre of interest. I understand that he is getting quite a following among the traders, but it seems to me that it is not wise to follow his open movements. As a matter of fact, I have noticed that whenever he bids up a stock the chances are he is selling out in some other stock under cover. When Field bids for a stock openly I would rather sell the rest of the market than buy anything, even the stock he is bidding for. Take St. Paul to-day. Field was bidding it up just at the close, while the rest of the list developed a heavy tone and declined. Copper these open operations every time is my advice."

Whistling for a Breeze.

Although there is no decided movement either way, a great many traders are waiting for something to start the market. Most of these are hoping for some bullish news, but there are others who, having bought at the bottom ten days ago, have now taken their profits, and hope for the market to decline so as to let them in again. It is the latter who assert that, though it would be exaggeration to say that there were much power on either side of the market, yet the capacity to sell was less limited than the capacity to buy. They pointed for proof at the rather large blocks of Union Pacific which came out on the rise in the last half hour at slowly receding prices. They explained their theory by saying that it took a lot more nerve to stand under a shower of stocks and buy than to help the shower along.

Not Scared by Transfer Tax.

The stock transfer tax—soon to take effect—does not seem to have frightened out-of-town corporations into staying away from this market. It was argued that the tax would drive business away and that stocks with a market in other cities would be traded in there by preference. Yet here, three weeks before the tax is to take effect, comes the Pittsburg Coal Company, the securities of which have enjoyed a good market in Pittsburg, and not only has its shares listed, but is evidently very desirous to have them well established on the New York Exchange. The only explanation possible is that a market for securities on the New York Stock Exchange is a valuable asset. It is generally good for two or three points, anyway. Pittsburg Coal was again active yesterday on the official announcement that the company was to increase its coke output 75 per cent. by opening mines which would give employment to 6,000 miners.

Heavy Loan Business.

According to reports from the floor a heavy loan business in call money was done yesterday. The average amount loaned during a day on the floor of the Exchange is about ten millions. Yesterday's transactions were said to have been in excess of $25,000,000, although some placed them as high as $50,000,000. The only explanation offered was that there had been some important rearrangement of loans or that possibly a big payment for some account had to be financed. Whatever the reason may have been it had no effect to speak of on the rate, which ruled at about 2¼ per cent. all day.

Court Decisions.

Court decisions afford a favorite opportunity for speculation when their effect is at all likely to influence the stock market. For the last two weeks the expected decision of the United States Supreme Court on the franchise tax has been used by both bulls and bears for speculation in the local traction and gas stocks. The decision was on Friday last reported as being known to some of the insiders, and it was said it would surely come out yesterday, and that it would be unfavorable to the corporations. No decision, however, was rendered. Decision is now expected on May 29. There was a slight demonstration against the shorts in these properties yesterday, but it had little effect except in Consolidated Gas, which ran up sharply.

Kansas City Southern.

It was said yesterday that the $50,000,000 Kansas City Southern preferred and common stock outstanding is situated about as follows with reference to the election which will take place to-morrow: About $14,000,000 of the stock is still represented by voting trust certificates which have not been exchanged, the bulk of which is held in Holland. This stock will therefore be unable to vote. Of the remaining $36,000,000 or thereabout of stock, the Sleicken proxy committee holds proxies for over $35,000,000. Much of the rest of the stock is not represented, having failed to respond to the request for proxies sent out by the Secretary of the company, or to that of the Sleicken committee. It will therefore be seen that the Sleicken committee will elect its board practically without opposition.

Denies a Receivership.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 15.—The petition of Mrs. Alice Peck of Brooklyn for a receiver for Armstrong, Schirmer & Co. was heard before Judge Lowell, in the United States Circuit Court, to-day. Judge Lowell said that he did not question that the defendants were acting within their rights in retaining the full amount of securities held, but he questioned whether it might not be possible for the defendants to turn over certain of the securities after receiving enough to protect their claim, pending action of the court. Mr. Schirmer voluntarily agreed to do this, and Judge Lowell denied the petition.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Prices Irregular, with Activity Confined to a Few Issues.

Sharp Advance and Reaction in Northern Securities—Union Pacific's Holdings of the Stock Deposited.

Activity in the relatively small number of issues which, despite the recent dullness in the list, generally, have continued to supply a fair amount of business, was all that saved the outside market yesterday from being uninteresting and very dull. The transactions included some issues which have not recently taken part in the trading, but the dealings in these were in all cases small. United Copper made further gains, but closed somewhat below the best. It was rumored that a dividend would be declared on the stock during the day, but a Director of the company characterized the report as premature. At the present level for United Copper common there appear to be more bears than bulls, yet each day recently the price has advanced.

NORTHERN SECURITIES rose nearly five points during the morning. The advance was generally attributed to the fact that only a relatively small amount of the stock is now available for market transactions, but that this fact alone did not mean higher prices for the stock was evidenced by the manner in which the price dropped again in the afternoon. The high sale of the day was made at 174½ and the close was at 172. It became known yesterday that there is now outstanding only a small amount of Northern Securities stock from which fact it was inferred that the Union Pacific which for a time had withheld its Northern Securities stock has recently deposited it for conversion into Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific.

ALGOMA COPPER AND SMELTING stock has for some days been dealt in on the curb. The company operates mines in the Algoma district, province of Ontario, Canada. The issue of the stock amounts to $3,000,000, divided into shares of a par value of $10.

⁂

The principal transactions in 100 share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

ALFRED KOEHLER COMPANY.—Schedules on the assignment of the Alfred Koehler Company, liquor dealers, of 204 East Twenty-sixth Street, show liabilities of $5,205, nominal assets of $1,881, and actual assets of $1,038.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

A. C. WILCOX & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Albert C. Wilcox, doing business as A. C. Wilcox & Co., private bankers, at 35 Liberty Street, who made assignment on Friday, by the following creditors: Frances A. Miller, as the Miller Bazaar Company, $500; Joseph H. Adolph, $200, and George A. Emerick, $40, all of Highlands, Orange County; Money Depositors, 12 in all. It is alleged that he is insolvent and committed an act of bankruptcy by making an assignment.

COLUMBIA PAPER BAG COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Columbia Paper Bag Company, manufacturers of paper bags at 105 and 107 Hudson Street, and with a factory at Long Island City, by Weil, Wolf & Kramer, attorneys of the Henry Paper Company, a creditor for $1,241.71, who was alleged that the company is insolvent, in April made payments to certain creditors to prefer them, and paid to officers large sums of money as salaries. It is stated that the president has resigned, the company is practically in the hands of employesu and dummy Directors, the rent of the factory at Long Island City for May is unpaid, notice has been served on the company to vacate the premises, and a note of $5,000 which is now due will be protested. Weil, Wolf & Kramer said that the trouble is attributed to dissensions among the Directors and stockholders, which injured the credit of the company so that it could not get materials to make up stock. The liabilities are about $50,000 and assets at least $25,000. The company was incorporated in June, 1903, with a capital stock of $5,000, which was increased to $70,000. H. Winslow White was President and Treasurer.

CHARLES D. OLIVER & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Charles D. Oliver & Co. (Incorporation,) contractors for metal lathing at 737 First Avenue, by the following creditors: George H. Lehman, $330; Roebling Construction Company, $264, and Mutual Bank, $1,400. It was alleged that on May 13 the company admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts. The business was started in September, 1902, and was incorporated on Aug. 12, 1904, with a capital stock of $100,000, and with Charles D. Oliver as President. The business was hampered last year by the strike in the building trade.

MARAS DANNENBERG.—Maras Dannenberg, dealer in millinery, at 3,016 Third Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,679 and assets of $1,800, consisting of stock, $1,200, and fixtures, $600.

EVA SATTELKOW of 924 East One Hundred and Fifty-second Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $24,463 and no assets. The largest creditor is Georgiana C. Stone of Morristown, N. J., $22,500, on bond and mortgage on property at the northeast corner of Avenue A and Seventy-seventh Street, made by Mrs. Sattelkow in 1898.

GEORGE W. JAMES.—George W. James, druggist, at One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,171, and assets of $4,677. He said that two chattel mortgages, one for $2,650 in favor of Mary A. Betz, and the other for $735 in favor of Rachel M. Morrison, are void as to creditors, because they were not satisfied, and for other reasons.

JANE ADELIA SARLES.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed here against Jane Adelia Sarles of Continentalville, near Peekskill, N. Y., by William W. Goodrich, Jr., of Peekskill, as trustee, who made assignment on Friday, by the following creditors: Mary Sarles, $1,000; Joseph H. Adolph, $200, and George A. Emerick, $40, all of Highlands, Orange County; Money Depositors, 12 in all. It is alleged that she is insolvent and committed an act of bankruptcy by making an assignment.

GOSE & BRETTSCHNEIDER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Samuel Gore and Abraham Brettschneider, who compose the firm of Gore & Brettschneider, boarding and livery stable, at 201 Sixth Street, by the following creditors: Max Helfstein, $300; Jacob Glass, $85, and Abraham Bornstein, $200. It was alleged that they are insolvent, have transferred horses, wagons and accounts to the amount of $3,000, and removed a large part of their property.

LOESER RESTAURANT.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Carl and Margaret Parker, who keep a restaurant at 281 Third Avenue, under the style of the Loeser Restaurant, by the following creditors: Frank Cooley, $3,436; Belle Du Crew, $75, and Clyde W. Rope, $135. It was alleged that they are insolvent, and on April 27 removed a large part of their property, worth $3,000. They took the place on Oct. 1 last, and gave a chattel mortgage on the furniture, fixtures, &c., for $2,500.

Out of Town.

GREENSBURG, Penn.—At the instance of the First National Bank of New Kensington, a receiver was appointed yesterday for the Columbia Drilling and Manufacturing Company of Pittsburg. Assets are given as seventy-seven acres and steel and brick buildings at New Kensington, $90,000, and liabilities, $53,000.

Discharges from Bankruptcy.

Judge Holt in the United States District Court yesterday entered discharges to the following bankrupts:

John Campbell Smith of 29 West Sixty-ninth Street, formerly a wholesale paper merchant at 132 Nassau Street, who inherited $1,000,000 from his grandmother, Augustine Smith, and whose liabilities were $48,316 and assets unknown.

Warren O. F. Slofer, ship chandler of 47 South Street; liabilities, $82,187.

Arthur Kemp of 439 Lenox Avenue, Two Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, formerly a shoe manufacturer; liabilities, $29,104.

Louis Cohen of 302 East Seventy-first Street, formerly of J. L. & S. Cohen, shirtwaist manufacturers; liabilities, $10,350, of which $10,000 was a judgment in a breach of promise of marriage suit by Celia Wersteln.

Felix A. Nyhen, jeweler, of 1,317 Broadway; liabilities, $9,008.

Arthur E. Hemmel, clerk, of 703 Columbus Avenue, formerly Treasurer of the U. E. Hemmel Electric Company; liabilities, $7,068.

William Jeremias, dealer in men's furnishings, formerly at 243 Broadway; liabilities, $3,388.

Simon Jeremias, dealer in tailors' trimmings, &c., at 239 First Avenue; liabilities, $2,317.

Celia Bensinger, actress, known as Nellie Sylvester, of 176 East Fiftieth Street; liabilities, $1,238.

Aaron Rappaport, rent collector, of 63 East Ninety-eighth Street; liabilities, $1,219.

May & Brandt, dealers in men's furnishings at 731 Sixth Avenue; liabilities, $2,814.

Irving D. Steinhardt, medical student, formerly of Steinhardt, Rieser & Co.; liabilities, $1,638.

Samuel Seidler of 321 East Thirteenth Street; liabilities, $1,505.
